with them. His celestial influences produce spiritual gifts and holy dispositions, and the peace of God keeps their hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Their enemies, sin, Satan, the world, and death, are vanquished in him, and the covenant of God stands fast with them for ever and ever. But how dreadful the punishment of such as are obstinate in wickedness! While they wickedly proceed from evil to worse, the judgments of God justly increase in their number and degree; and such as remain unhumbled under afflictions from God, and convictions from their own conscience, have nothing to expect but wrath to the uttermost. Such as dare to contend with their Maker, will find the struggle most unequal. Disappointments, diseases, evil beasts, sword, famine, pestilences, captivity; and, in fine, death and hell, wait his call to destroy them. How dreadful then, is the nature of sin! How certain the ruin of impenitent sinners! Aggravated is their guilt whom mercies cannot engage, or corrections deter: and God will be just to give up those to despair, and death, in sin, who give up themselves to work wickedness with greediness. But behold how all who return to God, even though late, are graciously received by him! It is his grace, concurring with his afflictive providences, that softens the stupid and hardened heart, and humbles the sinner; that renders him patient under his troubles, but earnestly anxious to escape from his sins; renders him more solicitous to have the end of afflictions answered, than to have the burden of them removed; and then marvellously God remembers mercy in the midst of judgments; and opens to the believing mind a firm foundation of hopes, and gracious source of blessings, in Jesus and his covenant of grace! Amidst such fulness of merit, and freedom of promise, none need despair, relying thereon. Blessing God for my pious ancestors, and the benefits I enjoy through them, following in their steps, let me deny ungodliness and worldly lusts and live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world.

[CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 2. A vow singling out, or separating himself, or a member of his family, or a part of his property, to the service of God.——Ver. 8. Every man should devote to God his time, influence, labours, or property, according to his ability: but no farther is, or can be required. If such were the practical christian rule, there could be no want of witnesses to the heathen, nor of support to them and their families.—Note. We are all devoted in baptism to Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; many at the Lord's table; while many are doubly bought—first, by the "Lamb without spot:" (1 Pet. 1. 19.) secondly, by the "goodness and mercy that, through his grace, have followed them all the days of their lives," Ps. 23. 6. Now, as the Jew devoted was brought to the priest to be estimated, let us as "partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus;" (Heb. 3. 1.) let us come to be estimated, though in utmost poverty; (Rev. 3. 17, 18.) he will not demand beyond our ability, while he supplies the very gifts we are appointed to employ.——Ver. 10. To promise, to resolve, and to act, not by fixed principles, but by sudden impulses, is dangerous, as it often brings strong temptation to instability and change—two things against which God's children are solemnly guarded, both by example (Gen. 49. 4.) and precept, (1 Cor. 15. 48. 2 Pet. 3. 17.) and against which this ordinance fixes an impassable barrier.——Ver. 26. Sanctify, here, as in many instances, does not signify that the thing is made holy by any change in its nature, but merely that it is set apart from a common, and dedicated to a sacred use. Such things could not be thus sanctified, being already dedicated to God, Exod. 13. 2.——Ver. 29. It is difficult to imagine how any one, from these words, could have ignorantly or wickedly inferred that the scripture authorized human sacrifice, or invested any parent with the power of devoting his children to death: surely the merciful law that would not empower a master to injure a servant's tooth (Exod. 21. 27.) would not enable a parent to take away his child's life.

21 But the field, when it goeth out in the jubilee, shall be holy unto the LORD, as a field devoted; the possession thereof shall be the priest's.

Let it be observed, then, in explanation, that in verse 28, the law speaks of man or beast devoted to the Lord, but in verse 29, it speaks of those who are devoted of men, or from among men, whether devoted by God himself, as were the wicked nations for the crimes of child-murder, idolatry, and total dissolution of morals; (Exod. 22. 20. Deut. 7. 1, 2. & 20. 10, 17. & 25. 19. 1 Sam. 15. 3.) or devoted by the Israelites for similar crimes, and implacable enmity, (Numb. 21. 23.) For these, as for other murderers, the law of God provides no pardon—a terrible emblem of that time and state when "there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation," Heb. 10. 27. Thoughtless sinner, think! self-dependent sinner, trusting to to-morrow's repentance, read the awful records, (Matt. 25. 10. Luke 13. 25.) and beware lest, at the time of thy purposed return, "the master may have risen," and "the door be shut!"—Note. Some interpret "be put to death," not of the actual infliction of that sentence, but of the continuance of service till death; but the words do not seem capable of such translation.——Ver. 32. The Jews interpret this phrase of a rod, which they say was tinged with ochre, which the doorkeeper of the fold held up, and with which he marked every tenth beast indiscriminately as it passed out. It may well be understood of the ordinary shepherd's crook, still in use in pastoral countries: this sense is countenanced by Micah 7. 14.—ED.]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—While in these devoted things, I, with wonder, behold Jesus voluntarily devoted, irredeemably devoted to his Father's service, in our stead, and ransoming us by his precious blood, let me be always cheerful and liberal in his work; but let me never be hasty in my vows, lest I involve myself in difficulties, and repent of my rashness. Never let me covet, for my selfish purposes, that which belongs to the Lord; but cheerfully pay my vows, without reserve or change. And, though I need not sell my house for his service, yet must I sanctify it to him by his constant worship and fear in the midst of it. And, since I myself have been solemnly devoted to his service, let me never be weary of it, or desire a change of my proprietor; but, whether I live or die, let me be wholly and only the Lord's.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MOSES

CALLED

NUMBERS.

This book is so called because it so largely represents the repeated numboring of the Hebrew warriors, Levites, spies, punished transgressors; their oblations, booty, and their journeys, &c., in the wilderness. It contains, (1) The principal articles of their history for thirty-nine years; particularly of the numbers, stations, and marching-order of their tribes, i—iv, ix, x; the oblations of their princes at the dedication of the tabernacle, vii; the consecration of the Levites, viii; observation of the second passover, ix; departure from Sinai, x; destruction of the murmurers by a fiery pestilence, and the flesh for which they had lusted—appointment of seventy elders to assist Moses, xi; Miriam's leprosy and cure, xii; the search of Canaan by spies, and their punishment for a contempt of that promised land, xiii, xiv; the punishment of Korah and his companions, and of the people who murmured at it, xvi; the budding of Aaron's rod, xvii; the misbehaviour of Moses and Aaron when the people murmured at Kadesh—refusal of a passage by the Edomites—and the death of Miriam and Aaron, xx; the victory over Arad—plague of fiery serpents, and cure of their bites—conquest and division of the kingdoms of Sihon and Og, xxi, xxxii; the repeated attempts of Balak and Balaam to curse the Israelites, and God's defeating of them, xxii—xxiv; the enticement of the Israelites to whoredom and idolatry by Midianitish women, and the revenge thereof in the death of twenty-four thousand Israelites, and the almost utter destruction of the Midianites, xxv, xxxi; a third numeration of the Israelites, xxvi; a rehearsal of their journeys, xxxiii; a delinention of their territory in Canaan, and an appointment of twelve princes to divide it, xxxiv. (2) With these narratives is intermingled a variety of laws concerning the ejection of unclean persons from the camp—suspicion of wives for adultery, v; Nazariteship priests' blessing the people, vi; lighting of sacred lamps, viii; observance of the passover in the second month, ix; making and blowing of silver trumpets, x; and concerning meat-offerings, drink-offerings, heave-offerings, sin-offerings—stoning for breach of the sabbath—fringes on the borders of their garments, xv; sacred portion of the priests and Levites, xviii; purification by the ashes of the red heifer, xix; inheritance and marriage of heiresses, xxvii, xxxvi; oblations at sacred festivals, xxviii, xxix; vows, xxx; manslayers, and cities of refuge, xxxv.

[The book of Numbers has been pronounced the most perplexing in sacred history, and what has perplexed the believing inquirer has afforded ample field for infidel objection: but as to the very being, providence, and attributes of God, there have been, and still are many alleged objections; we are not to be surprised if similar assaults be made upon any part of his word, nor are we to be discouraged by the perplexities of believing inquirers: the real difficulties of scripture, for such there are, exhibit the analogy between God's word and works, while they afford the happiest employment to the intellect, inculcate humility, exercise patience, and call to prayer, Jam. 1. 5. Luke 11. 13. John 14. 26. The chief difficulty of this book arises from the population returns. Jacob's family at their entrance into Egypt, amounted but to seventy-five; at the Exodus, in little more than two hundred years after, the men are estimated about 600,000, (Exod. 12. 37. & 30. 26.); and at the military census afterwards made, they amount to 603,550, ch. 1. 46. Now, as these numbers would, on the most moderate computation, give a total for the Jewish caravan, independent of the "mixed multitude" (Exod. 12. 38.) that accompanied them, of about 2,400,000; the question arises, How can we credit this increase? To an humble inquiring believer, it will be something to be reminded of God's peculiar promise to Abraham, (Gen. 15. 5.) and here he might rest, while the sceptic and the infidel, if they really sought for truth, not for cavilling, might find a ready answer in ordinary political statistics. Do they not know, that in the average of circumstances, population doubles at least in twenty-five years? That in favourable rural districts, it doubles in fifteen years? that Euler calculates its doubling under thirteen, and that Sir W. Petty fixes it at ten years? Now allowing the Mosaic narrative the advantage of these calculations—and candour cannot deny it the most favourable—the imaginary impossibility of the increase from 75 to 2,400,000 totally vanishes; and while the promise to Abraham is seen fulfilled in the numbers of his posterity, the result requires not for its solution a continuous miracle, but merely that providential blessing of fruitfulness which God invariably bestows on peaceful, temperate, and industrious habits. But while the soundness of this solution cannot, upon any historical ground, be statistically gainsayed, all possibility of cavil is removed by considering that the national name and privileges of Israelites were not confined to the lineal descendants of Abraham. This will be evident from the following considerations. (1) Abraham, when childless, expects the son of a servant "born in his house" to be his heir, (Gen. 15. 3.) (2) His house-born servants at that period amounted to 318 adult males, Gen. 14. 14. (3) When God renewed his promise (Gen. 17. 13, 27.) all his then existing house-born servants, as well as his future purchases, were "graffed in," (Rom. 11. 17.) were naturalized, so to speak, by the sign of the everlasting covenant. (4) Isaac, Abraham's son, so far from declining in family prosperity, "waxed great, and went forward, and grew until he became very great;" and especially had "great store of servants," Gen. 26. 13, 14. (5) Jacob, at his return (Gen. 35. 27.) had, besides his own children, "men-servants," (Gen. 32. 5.) perfectly able to protect themselves and their cattle, Gen. 33. 15. What accession of property Jacob obtained by the death of his father we are not told; but an incidental statement proves it must have been very considerable. For soon after, Esau removed "from the face of his brother, for their riches were more than that they might dwell together, and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them because of their cattle," Gen. 36. 6, 7. (6) Jacob came down to Egypt, not merely with his seventy-five personal descendants, but "with all that he had," Gen. 46. 1. see also 47. 1—12. (7) At the new institution of the Passover, lest a new dispensation to the seed of Abraham should be construed into the abrogation of the ancient privileges of house-born servants or strangers, the naturalization clause, for so in modern phrase, it is named, was explicitly renewed; and "every man's servant" bought for money, and every conforming "stranger" was invested with the same rights as "one born in the land," Exod. 12. 44, 48. (8) The reality and extent of this privilege of naturalization is still farther illustrated by the special exclusion of the Ammonites and Moabites "for ever," (Deut. 23. 3.) and still farther by the probationary period prescribed to an Edomite and Egyptian, who might "enter into the congregation of the Lord in their third generation," Deut. 23. 8. And thus it is evident, the law was understood in the time of Nehemiah (ch. 13. 1—3.) for he separated the "mixed multitude," of Ammonites and Moabites, while the record of the genealogy of "Solomon's servants, (originally Canaanites, 1 Kings 9. 20, 21.) is faithfully preserved, (Neh. 7. 57—61.) and they are included in "the congregation," (ver. 66.) and join in the national covenant for reformation, according to the Scriptures, ch. 10. 28.

But if we may thus legally commence our calculations with more than the seventy-five descendants of Jacob, why are they particularized? The answer is easy—to lay a distinct groundwork for the development of providence and the fulfilment of prophecy, and specially to furnish the necessary preparation and evidence for the manifestation of Christ. And when any do farther sceptically ask, "How could Egypt contain and support so many inhabitants?" the reply is, measure its extent and observe its unparalleled fertility. "How could the Egyptians govern so many discontented subjects?" the reply is, calculate in ancient or modern slave states, the small proportion of masters to slaves. "How could Pharaoh expect to subdue such a numerous host?" the answer is, calculate how many regular troops would fearlessly assail an unarmed multitude. "What line of march did they occupy?" the reply is, who would think of marshalling them in a single line? Not he, that by divine instruction ordered the encampments in the wilderness, see ch. 2. But of answering such groundless cavils "there is no end." Better for the believer to see in Israel a family carried down with a famishing father in search of food, to a land where they are sustained by the filial love of a son, and the forgiving generosity of a brother; where they become as the sand in number, and yet are enslaved by a cruel tyrant, and from whom they are delivered by the destruction of all their enemies and the blood of a sacrifice—where, in a word, "Christ is all in all," exhibited wherever there is salvation, temporal, spiritual, or eternal.—Ed.]

AND the Lord spake unto Moses in [a] the wilderness of Sinai, [b] in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first day of the [c] second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 [d] Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls;

3 From twenty years old and upward, all that are [e] able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies.

4 And with you there shall be [f] a man of every tribe; every one head of the house of his fathers.

5 ¶ And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: [g] Of the tribe of Reuben; Elizur the son of Shedeur.

6 Of Simeon; Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

7 Of Judah; [h] Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

8 Of Issachar; Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

9 Of Zebulun; Eliab the son of Helon.

10 Of the children of Joseph: of Ephraim; Elishama the son of Ammihud: of Manasseh; Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

11 Of Benjamin; Abidan the son of Gideoni.

12 Of Dan; Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

13 Of Asher; Pagiel the son of Ocran.

14 Of Gad; Eliasaph the son of [i] Deuel.

15 Of Naphtali; Ahira the son of Enan.

16 These were the [k] renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, heads of thousands in Israel.

17 ¶ And Moses and Aaron took [l] these men which are expressed by their names:

18 And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month; and they declared their pedigrees after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls.

19 [m] As the Lord commanded Moses, so he numbered them in the wilderness of Sinai.

20 ¶ And the [n] children of Reuben, Israel's eldest son, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, by their polls,

[o] The Mosaic census has been called in question, because its several items terminate in ciphers; and well-meaning but inconsiderate expositors, have had recourse to various conjectures, founded on admitted or discovered additions of ciphers to historical dates and numbers, in Grecian and Hindoo history. But such conjectures and parallels are utterly to be repudiated. The solution of the difficulty, if such it seem, lies in the record itself. Moses, in the first census expressly declares, not that the men were 600,000, but that they were "about 600,000, Ex. 12. 37. Neither in the present census is the exact amount of men "fit to go forth to war," ever given, but "those that were numbered of them;" and as the Jewish armies were uniformly officered and mustered by 1000, 100, 50, and 10, the quota of each tribe must necessarily terminate in a cipher, Num. 31. 15. Deut. 1. 15.—Note. As the census for march and for battle is in equable numbers and ranks, but enumerates, for property, each individual, (Ezra ii. Neh. vii.) so in our sojourning and warfare, the church moves in order and communion, and each is concerned for the welfare of his companion, (Rom. 14. 7.) but in entering into judgment, "every man of us shall give account of himself to God," (Rom. 14. 12.) and claim the heavenly inheritance only by his personal relation to Christ, 2 Cor. 5. 17.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—In this numbered people I discern the true Israel of God, numerous as the sand by the sea-shore; all numbered of Jesus, and written in his book of life; all under his government and laws, declared by his prophets and apostles; all ranked in goodly order in their respective generations, for the wars of the Lord; and all honourably distinguished from the world that lieth in wickedness, and from the mixed multitude of hypocrites. Here likewise I may observe, that ministers and magistrates ought to take heed to every one of the flock over whom the Lord hath made them overseers; that, the more honour any one hath

CHAPTER II.

The arrangement of the tribes in the camp.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

2 [a] Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house: [*] far off about the tabernacle of the congregation shall they pitch.

3 ¶ And [b] on the east side, toward the rising of the sun, shall they of the standard of the camp of Judah pitch, throughout their armies: and Nahshon the son of Amminadab shall be captain of the children of Judah.

4 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

5 [c] And those that do pitch next unto him shall be the tribe of Issachar: and Nethaneel the son of Zuar shall be captain of the children of Issachar.

6 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

7 [d] Then the tribe of Zebulun: and Eliab the son of Helon shall be captain of the children of Zebulun.

conferred upon him, the more active he ought to be in well-doing, according to his station; and to do without delay whatever the Lord requires of him. When I see the numbers of the respective tribes so little proportioned to their families at their entrance into Egypt, about two hundred and fifteen years before, I cannot but think how little even outward things go by common probabilities, and how unstable all created comforts are. When I read the sum total, I see how truly and marvellously God, in a few years, fulfilled his promises in multiplying the patriarch's posterity, notwithstanding all that the Egyptians could do to diminish them. Who likewise but must admire the liberal kindness of God, in forty years' miraculous maintenance of such multitudes of sinners; while he discerns the destructive nature of sin, which, in forty years, buried them all but two in the earth, and most of them in hell! When I see the Levites distinguished from the rest, let me think how honourably God rewarded their honest zeal against the worshippers of the golden calf; and that ministers ought to be more holy than ordinary saints, to exert themselves to the utmost to prevent the sins of others; and that, though they are not to entangle themselves in worldly business, or in intimacy with carnal men, yet they are not to be idle, but spiritual soldiers of Christ, set for the defence of his church and gospel.

THESE also are the [a] generations of [*] Aaron and Moses, in the day that the LORD spake with Moses in mount Sinai.

2 And these are [b] the names of the sons of Aaron; Nadab the first-born, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

3 These are the names of the sons of Aaron, [c] the priests which were anointed, [†] whom he consecrated to minister in the priest's office.

4 [d] And Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD, when they offered strange fire before the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office, in the sight of Aaron their father.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 [e] Bring the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him.

7 And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation, before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do the service of the tabernacle.

8 And they shall keep [f] all the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle.

9 [g] And thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron, and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.

10 And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and they [h] shall wait on their priest's office: and [i] the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 And I, behold, I have [k] taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the first-born that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine;

13 Because [l] all the first-born are mine: for on the day that I [m] smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt I hallowed unto me all the first-born in Israel, both man and beast; [‡] mine they shall be: I am the LORD.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, saying,

15 Number the children of Levi, after the house of their fathers, by their families: every male [n] from a month old and upward shalt thou number them.

16 And Moses numbered them, according to the [§] word of the LORD, as he was commanded.

* Aaron is placed before Moses, not on account of the priestly dignity, but simply because he was three years older than Moses, and so was entitled to the place of first-born, which he had neither sold nor forfeited. See Gen. 7. 7.—Note. When the characters of Moses and Aaron are contrasted, the natural superiority of Moses is unquestionable. Yet Moses assigns to Aaron and his family for ever, superiority of rank and office; an undeniable evidence that he acted by God's command. Had he been a mere pretender to a divine commission, he would have sought the aggrandizement of himself and his family—for never has there been an unambitious and disinterested impostor: his not yielding, but adjudging the superiority to his brother and his brother's family, goes as far as mere character can go, to prove, not only the absence of selfishness, but the presence of that humility which never was produced by any power but that of the Spirit of God, Is. 57. 15. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—What a God of order is our God in all the churches! With unreserved submission ought we to refer to him the choice of our inheritance for us, and the fixing of the bounds of our habitation. Our life on earth is a moveable as well as warlike condition. Here we have no continuing city; let us seek for one to come, which hath foundations, and whose builder and maker is God. But surely it is a high honour to have the presence and ordinances of God amongst us here below. Happy are all his ransomed tribes; they have equal access to him; they all are so marshalled in the church as best answers their abilities; and have God's tabernacle and ordinances placed among them. And it is pleasant and amiable when magistrates, and every one beside in their stations, become protectors and encouragers of the church; and when every thing, both in church and state, is regulated exactly according to the command of God.

17 [o] And these were the sons of Levi by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari.

18 [p] And these are the names of the sons of Gershon by their families; Libni and Shimei.

19 [q] And the sons of Kohath by their families; Amram and Izhar, Hebron and Uzziel.

20 [r] And the sons of Merari by their families; Mahli and Mushi: these are the families of the Levites, according to the house of their fathers.

21 ¶ [s] Of Gershon was the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites.

22 Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them, were seven thousand and five hundred.

23 The families of the Gershonites shall [t] pitch behind the tabernacle westward.

24 And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliasaph the son of Lael.

25 And [u] the charge of the sons of Gershon, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall be the tabernacle, and the tent, the covering thereof, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,

26 And the hangings of the court, and the curtain for the door of the court, which is by the tabernacle, and by the altar round about, and the cords of it, for all the service thereof.

27 ¶ [x] And of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izharites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites.

28 In the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping the charge of the sanctuary.

29 The families of the sons of Kohath shall [y] pitch on the side of the tabernacle southward.

30 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Elizaphan the son of Uzziel.

31 And [z] their charge shall be the ark, and the table, and the candlestick, and the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and the hanging, and all the service thereof.

32 And [a] Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary.

† But Aaron and his sons, and all the first-born of the Levites, numbered he not, as they were already the Lord's peculiar property.

‡ Why are the first-born among "so many brethren" so few? Are we here to search after another arithmetical error? No. The solution of the difficulty lies in the Jewish system of family government. 1. Families of daughters were not reckoned. 2. Many families, as in the case of Jacob's twelve separate families, reckon but one first-born, Gen. 49. 3. 3. In many families, the first-born would be dead. 4. In some, the Jewish law permitted absolute sale, disfranchisement, or substitution, Gen. 25. 3. & 27. 19, 29, 37. 1 Chr. 5. 1. These, without any other causes, are quite sufficient to account for the fewness of the numbers recorded.—Ed.

39 [f] All that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males, from a month old and upward, [g] were twenty and two thousand.

40 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [h] Number all the first-born of the males of the children of Israel, from a month old and upward, and take the number of their names.

41 And thou [i] shalt take the Levites for me, (I am the LORD,) instead of all the first-born among the children of Israel; and the cattle of the Levites instead of all the firstlings among the cattle of the children of Israel.

42 And Moses numbered, as the LORD commanded him, all the first-born among the children of Israel.

43 And all the first-born males, by the number of names, from a month old and upward, of those that were numbered of them, were [†] twenty and two thousand two hundred and threescore and thirteen. [‡]

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 Take the Levites instead of all the first-born among the children of Israel, and the cattle of the Levites instead of their cattle; and the Levites shall be mine: I am the LORD.

46 And for those that are to be redeemed of the two hundred and threescore and thirteen of the first-born of the children of Israel, which are more than the Levites,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—I bless the Lord, who made an exchange of his only begotten Son for an elect world of first-born men, and caused him to redeem them with his hard service, extending to the whole church, and all the concerns of it. CHAPTER IV.

(1) The appointment of God for mustering all the serviceable men of the tribe of Levi from thirty to fifty years of age; for their bearing of their respective shares of the tabernacle and its furniture, 1—20; of the Gershonites and their charge, 21—28; and of the Merarites and their charge, 29—33. (2) The numbering of them, with the particular and total sums: 34—49.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

2 Take the sum of the sons of Kohath from among the sons of Levi, after their families, by the house of their fathers,

3 From [a] thirty years old and upward, even until fifty years old, all that enter into the [p] host, to do the [c] work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 ¶ This shall be the service of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation, about the most holy things.

5 And when the camp setteth forward, Aaron shall come, and his sons, and they shall take down the [d] covering vail, and cover the ark of testimony with it;

6 And shall put thereon the covering of badgers' skins, and shall spread over it a cloth wholly of blue, and shall [o] put in the staves thereof.

7 And upon the [f] table of show-bread they shall spread a cloth of blue, and put thereon the dishes, and the spoons, and the bowls, and covers to [g] cover withal: and the [g] continual bread shall be thereon.

8 And they shall spread upon them a cloth of scarlet, and cover the same with a [h] covering of badgers' skins, and shall put in the staves thereof.

9 And they shall take a cloth of blue, and cover the [i] candlestick of the light, and his lamps, and his tongs, and his snuff-dishes, and all the oil-vessels thereof, wherewith they minister unto it.

[*] Moses, by the command of God, appointed the Levites to their office from thirty, but this seems not to accord with ch. 8. 24, where the Levites are required to "go in to wait upon the service," at twenty-five. There is however, no contradiction. At twenty-five, they "went in," to the internal service of the tabernacle when localized; but, at thirty, they were appointed to the additional service of the "burden" when the people journeyed. David afterwards fixed the commencement of the Levites' term of service at twenty, 1 Chr. 23. 24—26. This change was made because, under David, the church had attained a state of rest; and the Levites had no more to bear the burden of the tabernacle. This change may, however, appear rather a grievance than a privilege, and so it would be to carnal men, who desire liberty that they may use it for a cloak to licentiousness; but to the true Levite, the man held captive by Christ, and associated with him, an early call to the service of God, and an early separation from the world, is but an earlier relief from prison and from pain, and an earlier advancement to office and to honour. Blessed are they who, like Jeremiah, (Jer. 1. 5.) have been sanctified from the birth, and who like Timothy have known, from childhood, those scriptures which are able to make wise unto salvation, 2 Tim. 3. 15.—Ed.

38 ¶ And those that were numbered of the sons of Gershon, throughout their families, and by the house of their fathers;

45 These be those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron numbered, according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

46 All those that were numbered of the Levites, whom Moses and Aaron, and the chief of Israel, numbered after their families, and after the house of their fathers;

47 From thirty years old and upward even unto [*] fifty years old, every one that came to do the service of the ministry, and the service of the burden in the tabernacle of the congregation;

48 Even those that were numbered of them, were [e] eight thousand and five hundred and fourscore.

49 [f] According to the commandment of the LORD they were numbered by the hand of Moses, [g] every one according to his service, and according to his burden: thus were they numbered of him, as the LORD commanded Moses.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—God's service, especially in the ministry, is a warfare. He deserves and he requires the best of our time and strength. His ministers ought not to be novices either in knowledge or experience. Apparently insignificant mistakes in their work may cost one his life, nay, his eternal salvation: it is therefore necessary that we should give the strictest attention to the directions of scripture. Distressful is the paucity of God's faithful servants; yet are they in his hand, and he proportions their number and ability to their work. But let me especially rejoice, that the whole care of the churches, and of the elect, is upon our Redeemer: not Levites, in the power of their might, but the almighty Jesus bears and carries us, and all our concerns: not the prudent sons of Aaron, but the only wise Son of God rears and dissolves particular churches on earth; rears and dissolves the particular frames of our spirit; dissolves our bodies in death, and again rears them up in the resurrection. He hath destroyed the vail and face of the covering cast over all people; that it is not now death, but life, for us sinful men to behold, and even enter by faith into the holiest of all. Let us therefore, whether ministers or private Christians, draw near with boldness, and behold, as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, that we may be changed into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAPTER V.

(1) The camp of the Israelites being now formed and sanctified, by the erection of the tabernacle in its centre, divine orders are issued to exclude from it all persons polluted with leprosies or running issues, or by dead bodies: 1—4. (2) The laws for restitution of things unjustly gotten, and for appropriation of the hallowed presents to the priests, are repeated: 5—10. (3) A new law is given for the trial of wives suspected of adultery, by water of purification: 11—31.

A. M. 2514. B. C. 1490.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Command the children of Israel, that they [a] put out of the camp every leper, and every one that hath an issue, and whosoever is defiled by the dead:
3 Both male and female shall ye put out, without the camp shall ye put them; that they defile not their camps, in the midst whereof I dwell.
4 And the children of Israel did so, and put them out without the camp: [b] as the LORD spake unto Moses, so did the children of Israel.
5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
6 Speak unto the children of Israel, [c] When a man or woman shall commit any sin [*] that men commit, to do a trespass against the LORD, and that person be guilty;[†]
7 Then they shall confess their sin which they have done: and he shall recompense his trespass with the principal thereof, and add unto it the fifth part thereof, and give it unto him against whom he hath trespassed.
8 But if the man have no kinsman to recompense the trespass unto, let the trespass be recompensed unto the LORD, even to the priest; besides [d] the ram of the atonement, whereby an atonement shall be made for him.
9 ¶ And every [‡] [e] offering of all the holy things of the children of Israel, which they bring unto the priest, shall be his.
10 And every man's hallowed thing shall be his: whatsoever any man giveth the priest, it shall be his.
11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
12 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man's wife [f] go aside, and commit a trespass against him,
13 And a man [g] lie with her carnally, and it be hid from the eyes of her husband, and be kept close, and she be defiled, and there be no witness against her, neither she be taken with the manner;
14 And the [h] spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be defiled; or if the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be not defiled:
15 Then shall the man bring his wife unto the priest, and he shall bring her [i] offering for her, the tenth part of an ephah of barley-meal: he shall pour no oil upon it, nor put frankincense thereon; for it is an offering of jealousy, an offering of memorial, bringing iniquity to remembrance.[*]
16 And the priest shall bring her near, and [k] set her before the LORD.
17 And the priest shall take [l] holy water[†] in an earthen vessel; and of the [m] dust that is in the floor of the tabernacle the priest shall take, and put it into the water.
18 And the priest shall set the woman before the LORD, and [n] uncover the woman's head, and put the offering of memorial in her hands, which is the jealousy-offering: and the priest shall have in his hand [o] the bitter water that causeth the curse.
19 And the priest shall [p] charge her by an oath, and say unto the woman, If no man have lain with thee, and if thou hast not gone aside to uncleanness [‡] [§] with another instead of thy husband, be thou free from this bitter water that causeth the curse:
20 But if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee besides thine husband;
21 Then the priest shall charge the woman with an oath of cursing; and the priest shall say unto the woman, The LORD make thee a [q] curse and an oath among thy people, when the LORD doth [r] make thy thigh to [‖] rot, and thy belly to swell:
22 And this water that causeth the curse shall go into thy bowels, to make thy belly to swell, and thy thigh to rot. And the woman shall say, [] Amen, amen.[]
23 And the priest shall write these curses [†] in a book, and he shall blot them out with the bitter water:
24 And he shall cause the woman to drink the bitter water that causeth the curse; and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter.
25 Then the priest shall take the jealousy-offering out of the woman's hand, and shall [t] wave the offering before the LORD, and offer it upon the altar.
26 And the priest shall take an handful of the offering, even the [u] memorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, and afterward shall cause the woman to drink the water.
27 And when he hath made her to drink the water, then it shall come to pass, that if she be defiled, and have done trespass against her husband, [x] that the water that causeth the curse

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—In these figures I discern that the church of God on earth ought carefully to be purged from scandalous persons and crimes; and that polluted and dishonest sinners shall be excluded from the celestial mansions. How necessary then to put away all filthiness of the flesh and spirit; and to avoid even the most distant approaches towards dishonesty, particularly with respect to Jesus Christ and his ministers! For those who preach the gospel must live by the gospel. Yea, let me avoid every thing which may beget dishonourable suspicions; and, on the contrary, beware of indulging them without sufficient ground. But

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When [a] either man or woman shall [*] separate themselves to vow a vow of a Nazarite,[†] to separate themselves unto the LORD;

3 He shall [b] separate himself from wine and strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried.

4 All the days of his [‡] separation shall he eat nothing that is made of the [§] vine-tree, from the kernels even to the husk.

5 All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no [c] razor come upon his head: until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow.

6 All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD he shall [d] come at no dead body.

7 He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die; because the [‖] consecration of his God is upon his head.

8 All the days of his separation he is [*] holy unto the LORD.

9 And if any man die very suddenly by him, and he hath defiled the head of his consecration; then he shall [e] shave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it.

A. M. 2514. B. C. 1490.

10 And [f] on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

11 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, and make an atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day.

12 And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring [g] a lamb of the first year for a trespass-offering: but the days that were before [h] shall be lost, because his separation was defiled.

13 ¶ And this is the law of the Nazarite; [i] When the days of his separation are fulfilled, he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

14 And he shall offer [k] his offering unto the LORD, one he-lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt-offering, and one ewe-lamb of the first year without blemish for a sin-offering, and one ram without blemish for peace-offerings,

15 And a basket of unleavened bread, cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, and wafers of unleavened bread anointed with oil, and their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings.

16 And the priest shall bring them before the LORD, and shall offer his sin-offering, and his burnt-offering.

17 And he shall offer the ram for a sacrifice of peace-offerings unto the LORD, with the basket of unleavened bread: the priest shall offer also his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

18 [l] And the Nazarite shall shave the head of his separation at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation; and shall take the hair of the head of his separation, and [m] put it in the fire which is under the sacrifice of the peace-offerings.

19 And the priest shall take the sodden shoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake out of the basket, and one unleavened wafer, and shall put them upon the hands of the Nazarite, after the hair of his separation is shaven.

20 And the priest shall wave them [n] for a wave-offering before the LORD: this is holy for the priest, with the wave-breast and heave-shoulder: and after that [o] the Nazarite may drink wine.

innocence is the surest comfort and support under the most malignant accusations. How dreadful it is when God's curse is the seasoner of sensual pleasures! Vain is every attempt to conceal our transgressions; for, though waters of jealousy are no more, the eye of God can see, and the voice of conscience will speak out. Yea, often God most strangely brings to light the hidden things of darkness; and however they may escape present censure or punishment, whoremongers and adulterers God will judge, and dreadfully punish! Let me therefore abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul; and, if I am unjustly accused, let me commit my cause to God, who judgeth righteously, that he may bring me to the light, and cause me to behold his righteousness. Meanwhile, let me, with the utmost accuracy, examine how far I am chargeable with spiritual whoredom or apostasy; and particularly observe whether the cross of Christ, and the afflictions of the gospel, are to me a savour of death unto death, or of life unto life.

6 And Moses took the waggons and the oxen, and gave them unto the Levites.

7 [e] Two waggons and four oxen he gave unto the sons of Gershon, according to their service: ‡

8 And [f] four waggons and eight oxen he gave unto the sons of Merari, according unto their service, § under the hand of Ithamar, the son of Aaron the priest.

16 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

17 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

18 ¶ On the second day ‡ Nethaneel the son of Zuar, prince of Issachar, did offer.

19 He offered for his offering one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

redemption:—Jesus, never defiled with carnal comforts or pleasures, nor intoxicated with sinful lusts or worldly cares, nor polluted by his connexion with sinners naturally dead in trespasses and sins:—Jesus, who, for Nazarine hair, hath the most noted graces and good works; yea, hath his people growing up into him as their head:—Jesus, never failing, but persevering in his work, and finishing it in his all-comprehensive offering of himself for us; and, in his resurrection, laying aside every token of continued subjection to an angry God or broken law. In these Nazarites let ministers also, let saints, separated to the service of God, learn to deny themselves, mortify the deeds of the body, renounce this world, and the pleasures of sin or sense, and behave as solemnly consecrated to God alone. Let every breach of their vows, through fellowship with dead and unfruitful works of darkness, occasion repeated application to Jesus' purifying blood, and to more diligence in duty. And, after finishing their course, let them thank God for his gracious assistance, account themselves unprofitable servants, and trust only to Jesus' all-sufficient sacrifice of himself as the ground of their hope and joy.—In this priestly benediction of the Hebrews, let me behold Jesus, appointed of God to bless sinful men; yea, becoming blessings to them;—and God discovering his grace, by rendering his ordinances, apparently simple in themselves, effectual for blessing us with all spiritual blessings in Christ. Let me therefore look only to God for what blessings I need; and by faith hold communion with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, in order to the enjoyment of them.

[*] Upon this day, the rebellion and death of Nadab and Abihu occurred, Lev. 9. 1. & 10. 1. Now the day of this melancholy occurrence is one of the most remarkable in the Jewish dispensation. For example, the eighth was the day of circumcision, Lev. 12. 3. The eighth was the day of dedicating the first of the young of animals, Exod. 22. 30. The eighth was the day for cleansing the leper, Lev. 14. 10. The eighth was the day of most solemn assembly and peculiar sabbatism, (Lev. 23. 36, 39.); and is called the great day of the feast, John 7. 37. Yet, on this very day, when so many associations combined to honour it, Satan prevails upon pride to render it dismal and disastrous.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Necessary observances in religion must always be preferred to what is merely voluntary. But the more honour and wealth persons have, the more exemplary they ought to be in laying out themselves and their substance for the Lord. Christ's ministers and people never need to be discouraged by the hard service allotted them; for, by their often repeated exercises, or remarkable comfort therein, God can render his ministers expert in their work, or can

[†] The Hebrew form of expression here, and in the 78th verse, has something curious in it. It may be literally rendered, in the day the first and tenth day, and in the day two and tenth day. But this is the idiom of the language; and, to an original Hebrew, our almost anomalous words, eleventh and twelfth, by which we translate the original, would appear as strange as his, literally translated, would appear to us.—Dr A. Clarke.

[‡] It appears by the metal that these chargers and bowls were of, that they were for the use of the altar of burnt-offerings, in the outward court; for all the vessels of the sanctuary were of gold. And I take the chargers to have been offered, for receiving the flesh of the sacrifices when the priests feasted upon it.—Scott.

[*] The words "in the day when it was anointed," are a parenthesis, referring to the anointing by Moses, recorded Lev. 8. 10, 11. The dedication was by the princes, as representatives of the people, acknowledging in their name, their national covenant with God. See verse 88.—Ed.

[†] The whole value of the silver vessels was £273 18*s.* sterling; and of the golden spoons about £199 sterling.

[‡] The burnt-offerings are by twelves, representing the tribes seeking and obtaining national reconciliation with God, Lev. 1. 3—17. The sin-offerings, by twelves, acknowledging in name of the tribes, the national rebellions and guilt. The peace-offerings are first by twice twelve, which, according to the rule of duplication, (Gen. 41. 32.) represents a thing firmly established, and speedily to be accomplished. Then they are by sixties, that is, five twelves. Now this peculiarity is not without its signification. For five is the average representation of a family, (see note on Exod. 13. 18.) and the fives by which the twelves are multiplied, represent the families of which the tribes are composed.—Ed.

quickly bring them unexpected assistance in it; and we can scarcely enter on his service without receiving hints of changes and removals, death not excepted. Liberal hearts devise liberal things, and are never weary of giving to the Lord. But in our dedications to God, we ought carefully to consider what is like to be most useful in his service; and, amidst all, to implore pardon through Jesus our sin-offering. And, while every one is careful to do that which is proper in his station, God honourably records the good deeds of his people in the most particular manner, and takes pleasure in manifesting his gracious acceptance thereof. But might not these twelve solemn days prefigure the apostolic and millennial periods, in which princes and nations did, or shall, dedicate themselves and substance to Jesus Christ, our great tabernacle and altar; yea, the glorious fulfiller of all the Levitical dispensation?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—In these lighted lamps I behold Jesus endowed with the fulness of the Spirit of God, and set up to be the light of the world, the light of the church;—and ministers enlightened in themselves, and set up for lights to others, that they may see to perform the service of the tabernacle. In these Levites I behold Jesus, holy, harmless, and undefiled, solemnly set apart as the surety of elect sinners, to the hard service of his debasement; which being finished, and atonement thus made for his people, and every plague averted from them, he retired to his heavenly rest to minister, without fatigue, in the sanctuary above.—But with what holiness, and solemn dedication to God, ought ministers to be prepared for their work! How voluntary their call by their people; and how solemn their ordination to their office! Honourable indeed is their service for Jesus and his ransomed people; if faithful, they become a remarkable mean of turning away God's wrath from nations and churches; and, if faithful and diligent while their strength continues, their people ought to support them decently when they become old and infirm, and Jesus Christ will for ever reward them in the heavenly state.

are we kept back, that we may not [f] offer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season among the children of Israel?

8 And Moses said unto them, Stand still, and I will [g] hear what the LORD will command concerning you.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you, or of your posterity, shall be [h] unclean by reason of a dead body, or be in a journey afar off, yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD.

11 The [i] fourteenth day of the second month at even they shall keep it, and eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

12 They shall leave none of it unto the morning, nor break any bone of it: according to all the ordinances of the passover they shall keep it.

13 But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and [k] forbeareth to keep the passover, even the same soul shall be cut off from his people: because he brought not the offering of the LORD in his appointed season, that man shall bear his sin.

14 And if [l] a stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover unto the LORD; according to the ordinance of the passover, and according to the manner thereof, so shall he do: ye shall have one ordinance, both for the [*] stranger, and for him that was born in the land.

15 ¶ And [m] on the day that the tabernacle was reared up the cloud covered the tabernacle, namely, the [†] tent of the testimony: and at even there was upon the tabernacle as it were the appearance of fire until the morning.

16 [n] So it was [‡] alway: the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night.

17 And [o] when the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode, there the children of Israel pitched their tents.[§]

18 At the commandment of the LORD the children of Israel journeyed, and at the commandment of the LORD they pitched: as long as the cloud abode upon the tabernacle they rested in their tents.

19 And when the cloud [‖] tarried long upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel kept the charge of the LORD, and journeyed not.

20 And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the LORD they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the LORD they journeyed.

21 And so it was, when the cloud [*] abode from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.

22 Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year, [†] that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel [p] abode in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed.

23 [q] At the commandment of the LORD they rested in their tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed: they kept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—We need repeated excitements to the most pleasant and solemn services of God; though it is an infinite favour, that, in these deserts of trouble, we may keep the Lord's solemn feasts. Those who know their value will delight in the observance, and rejoice to see others hungering and thirsting after God's ordinances, even when hinderances are laid in their way. Ministers ought ever to be careful in debarring scandalous sinners from the seals of the covenant; yet, on the contrary, ever cautious and attentive to God's word in determining particular cases. But here let me reflect on the mercy, that though we Gentiles were of old afar off, and in our uncleanness, God hath brought us nigh by the blood of his Son, and hath provided a second, a gospel passover for us! If then we be unavoidably disappointed of public ordinances, let us take the first opportunity of approaching his house or table. Providential hinderances may disappoint us of the means, but cannot, if our hearts be right, deprive us of the grace thereof; God will amply supply our wants some other way: while such as reject God's ordinances will be rejected by him. Habitual neglect of the Lord's supper is a fearful sign of a naughty heart.—Let Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be our pillar of cloud, to direct our motions and rests; and let us be always obedient to his tokens: no safety can be had in going before him; and no comfort can be had in loitering behind him. Let me be ready, with comfort, to see this cloud remove into the eternal state, where I expect a more abiding habitation; that when death comes, I may have nothing to do but to remove: and, even by the way, let God fix my residence and lot as he pleases; and there let me contentedly pitch my tent.

9 And if ye [i] go to war in your land against the enemy that oppresseth you, then ye shall blow an alarm with the trumpets; and ye shall be [k] remembered before the LORD your God, and ye shall be saved from your enemies.

10 Also [l] in the day of your gladness, and in your solemn days, and in the beginnings of your months, ye shall blow with the trumpets [m] over your burnt-offerings, and over the sacrifices of your peace-offerings; that they may be to you for [n] a memorial before your God: I am the LORD your God:

11 ¶ And it came to pass on the [o] twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that the cloud [*] was taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony.

12 And the children of Israel [p] took their journeys out of the wilderness of Sinai; and the cloud rested in the wilderness of Paran.

21 And the Kohathites set forward, [x] bearing the sanctuary; and [y] the other did set up the tabernacle against they came.

22 ¶ And the [z] standard of the camp of the children of Ephraim set forward according to their armies; and over his host was Elishama the son of Ammihud.

23 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Manasseh was Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

24 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Benjamin was Abidan the son of Gideoni.

25 ¶ And the [a] standard of the camp of the children of Dan set forward, which was the [*] rere-ward of all the camps throughout their hosts; and over his host was Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

28 [b] Thus were the journeyings of the children of Israel, according to their armies, when they set forward.

29 ¶ And Moses said unto [c] Hobab, the son of [†] Raguel the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law, We are journeying unto the place of which the LORD said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good; for the LORD hath spoken good concerning Israel.

30 And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my [d] kindred.

31 And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee; forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou mayest be to us [e] instead of eyes.

32 And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the LORD shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee.

33 ¶ And they departed from the [f] mount of the LORD three days' journey: and the [g] ark of the covenant of the LORD went before them in the three days' journey, to [h] search out a resting-place for them.

34 And the [i] cloud of the LORD was upon them by day, [‡] when they went out of the camp.

35 And it came to pass, when the ark set forward, that Moses said, [k] Rise up, LORD, and let thine enemies be scattered; and let them that hate thee flee before thee. [§]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—In these trumpets I discern the pure and precious gospel of Christ, and hear its joyful sound proclaiming the sufficiency and suitableness of Jesus and his righteousness, calling sinful men to him and his ordinances, and encouraging them in their journey heavenward, and in their spiritual warfare with sin, Satan, the world, and death. Let me also observe, that even Sinai-visits, the most noted opportunities of intimacy with God, come quickly to an end; and that, in this world, we but remove from one wilderness to another. While, in the Hebrews' orderly march, I discern the ransomed of the Lord, directed by the Lion of the tribe of Judah, and having his Father's presence among them, marching in goodly order to their heavenly Canaan, let me exert myself to gain others, particularly my relations, to God and glory. There is in him enough for us all. And happy are they, if grace make them forget their father's house, and their own sumed them that were in the [a] uttermost parts of the camp.*

2 And the people [b] cried unto Moses; and when Moses [c] prayed unto the LORD, the fire [†] was quenched.

3 And he called the name of the place [‡] Taberah: because the fire of the LORD burnt among them.

4 ¶ And the [d] mixt multitude that was among them fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also [§] wept again,[‖] and said, [e] Who shall give us flesh to eat?

5 We remember [f] the fish which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick:

6 But now our soul is [g] dried away: there is nothing at all, besides this manna, before our eyes.*

7 And [h] the manna was as coriander-seed, and the [†] colour thereof as the colour of bdellium.

8 And the people went [i] about and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and [k] baked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and the taste of it was as the taste of fresh oil.

9 And when the [l] dew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it.[‡]

10 ¶ Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent; and the [m] anger of the LORD was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased.

11 And Moses said unto the LORD, Wherefore hast thou [n] afflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?

12 Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, [o] Carry them in thy bosom (as a nursing-father beareth the sucking child) unto the land which thou swarest unto their fathers?

13 Whence [p] should I have flesh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat.

14 I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me.

15 And if thou deal thus with me, [q] kill me, I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and let me not see my wretchedness.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me [r] seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them [s] unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee:

17 And I will [t] come down and talk with thee there: and I will [u] take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall [x] bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.

18 And say thou unto the people, [y] Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: (for ye have wept in the ears of the LORD, saying, [z] Who shall give us flesh to eat? for it was well with us in Egypt:) therefore the LORD [a] will give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

19 Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20 But even a * whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you; because that ye have [b] despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before him, saying, Why came we forth out of Egypt?

21 ¶ And Moses said, The people, among whom I am, are [c] six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month.

22 [d] Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, to suffice them?

23 And the LORD said unto Moses, * Is the LORD's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not.

24 ¶ And Moses went out and told the people the words of the LORD, and [f] gathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle.

25 And the LORD [g] came down in a cloud, and spake unto him, and [h] took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that, when the spirit rested upon them, they [i] prophesied,[†] and did not cease.

26 But there remained two of the men in the camp, the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of the other Medad: and the spirit rested upon them, (and they were of them that were written, but [k] went not out unto the tabernacle,) and they prophesied in the camp.

27 And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp.

people, to go to the Lord! While, therefore, we have his ordinances with us, let us strive together in prayer, for his presence therein; that it may be our effectual defence against enemies, and a source of every necessary comfort.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—How often men sin outrageously, immediately after the most solemn exercises; and make the very commandments of Heaven the occasions of such sinning! We often murmur against the dispensations of Providence, even without any shadow of reason; nay, in direct contradiction to every reason; for ingratitude is the basest vice. Discontented persons loathe their very blessings, and seem solicitous to make themselves miserable; readily preferring the worst things which God withholds to the best which he bestows; and even the filthy pleasures of sin and sense to his unspeakable gift of grace.—It is a fearful mark of the curse of God upon the heart when men repine amidst plenty! Those who follow the people of God for base and carnal ends, quickly become murmurers

From the melancholy records of our Redeemer's trial before Caiaphas, (Mat. 26. 67. & 27. 30.) it seems to have continued as a mark of coudemnation; and almost every eastern traveller, in modern times, has noticed and recorded the prevalence and permanence of the custom.—ED.

when they meet with disappointments. A mixture of carnal and self-seeking men are ruinous to the church; and a mixture of carnal affections are the plague of the renewed heart. Through these it is that even the greatest saints are apt to lose their temper, extol their service, quarrel with the disposals of Providence, and distrust the power and kindness of God, when they meet with great provocations from their fellow-creatures—and to have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, when they are especially called to reprove them by a contrary conduct. But God often tries his people, chiefly in respect of their most eminent graces, to humble them, and to prove them, when he finds them wanting; for the meekest are ready to wish themselves freed from trials, rather than to glorify God under them; nay, to wish death, when their temper is very unfit for it! But how richly God qualifies men for work when he calls them to it! Let me then never grudge to any the honours for which God hath fitted him; never contemn the government which God hath appointed; never forbid those who act for the honour of God, even though they follow not with us; nor ever neglect to accept the assistance which God affords me in my work, though it should eclipse my renown! But let me always remember that a curse of frown attends even God's granting of that which men ask in a murmuring and peremptory manner, and that he can easily render created comforts a tremendous and destructive plague!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Too common, but very sinful, are contentions among saints; nor doth any thing produce hotter disputes than jealousy of power. Grace, natural affection, duty, and safety, are all trampled under foot when men strive for grandeur and rule. But God takes a peculiar pleasure in vindicating and honouring his faithful ministers or people. He remarks exactly, and severely avenges the injuries done to those who, from a meek regard to his law, will not avenge themselves. It is dangerous therefore to revile God's servants: they who do it shall at last be obliged to bow to them, and confess their sin. Yea, often God deals most sharply with his principal favourites when they offend him; and marks the abominable nature of their sin in the filth, pain, or shame of their punishment.

16 These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land. And Moses called [e] Oshea the son of Nun, [f] Jehoshua.

17 ¶ And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way [g] southward, and go up into the mountain;

18 And see the [h] land, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many;

19 And what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and what cities they be that they dwell in, whether in tents, or in strong holds;

(2) Natural state of the soil, good or bad. (3) Habitations of the people, whether cities, tents, or fortifications. (4) Cultivated state of the soil, fat or lean. 21 ¶ So they went up, and searched the land, from the wilderness of [k] Zin unto Rehob, as men come to Hamath.

22 And they ascended by the south, and came unto [l] Hebron, where Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmai, the children of Anak, were: (now Hebron was built seven years before [m] Zoan in Egypt.)

23 And they came unto the [n] brook of Eshcol, and cut down from thence a [o] branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a staff; [*] and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs.

24 The place was called the brook [†] Eshcol, because of the cluster of grapes which the children of Israel cut down from thence.

25 And they returned from searching of the land after [p] forty days.

26 ¶ And they went and came to Moses, and to Aaron, and to all the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the wilderness of Paran, to [q] Kadesh; and brought back word unto them, and unto all the congregation, and showed them the fruit of the land.

27 And they told him, and said, We came unto the land whither thou sentest us, and surely it floweth with [r] milk and honey; and this is the fruit of it.

30 And Caleb [u] stilled the people before Moses, and said, Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.

31 But the men that went up with him said, [x] We be not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we.

32 And they brought up an evil [y] report of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land, through which we have gone to search it, is a land that [z] eateth up the inhabitants thereof: and all the people that we saw in it are [a] men of a great stature.[‡]

But it is becoming when offending saints make the deepest submissions. And acceptable to God, honourable to us, and effectual for our neighbour's advantage, are sincere and affectionate intercessions for those who have injured us. But even while our sins hinder our heavenly journeys, the Lord will take care of our honour and comfort, if once we be penitent and humble.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—It is hazardous to indulge our own senses and reasonings, rather than simply to submit to the revelations of God; for often the Lord chooses men's delusions, and permits them to be ensnared by their own unbelieving devices. How often are most of those, who are employed in the most important transactions, evil and wicked; and get themselves remarked, chiefly to their lasting dishonour! Yea, the manifold experience of the power of God, and the frequent repetition of his promises, are of little avail with such as have abandoned themselves to the rage of their unbelief. The cowardly heart magnifies every object, and increases every difficulty: and unbelief obstinately concludes every enemy too mighty for us; while zeal for God dares every danger, and faith makes men

CHAPTER XIV.

(1) The whole congregation murmur against God, and propose returning to Egypt; nor could all that Moses and Aaron, Caleb and Joshua, say, still their tumult: 1—10. (2) Moses intercedes for them, and earnestly supplicates mercy and forgiveness: 11—19. (3) God mitigates the sentence; swears that none of that generation, except Caleb and Joshua, should ever enter Canaan; but promises to give it to their children, after their wandering forty years in the wilderness: 20—35. (4) The public and immediate death of the wicked spies, and the discomfiture of such as, contrary to God's command, attempted directly to invade Canaan: 36—45.

A. M. 2514. B. C. 1490.

AND all the congregation [a] lifted up their voice, and cried; and the people wept that night.

2 And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses, and against Aaron: and the whole congregation said unto them, [b] Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or, would God we had died in this wilderness! [*]

3 [c] And wherefore hath the LORD brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt?

4 And they said one to another, [d] Let us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt.

5 Then Moses and Aaron [e] fell on their faces before all the assembly of the congregation of the children of Israel.

6 ¶ And [f] Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of them that searched the land, [g] rent their clothes:

7 And they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, The land, which we passed through to search it, is an [h] exceeding good land.

8 If [i] the LORD delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us; a land which floweth with milk and honey.

9 Only rebel not ye against the LORD, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they are [k] bread for us: their defence is departed from them, and the [l] LORD is with us: fear them not.

10 But all the congregation bade [m] stone them with stones. [†] And the [n] glory of the LORD appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel.

11 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [o] How long will this people provoke me? and how long will it be ere they believe me, for all the signs which I have showed among them?

12 I will [p] smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them; and will make of thee a greater nation, and mightier than they.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, [q] Then the Egyptians shall hear it; (for thou broughtest up this people in thy might from among them;)

14 And they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land: for they [r] have heard that thou, LORD, art among this people; that thou, LORD, art seen face to face, and that thy cloud standeth over them; and that thou goest before them, by day-time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night.

15 Now, if thou shalt kill all this people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of thee will [s] speak, saying,

16 Because the LORD was [*] not able to bring this people into the land which he sware unto them, therefore he hath slain them in the wilderness.

17 And now, I beseech thee, let the power of my LORD be [t] great, according as thou hast spoken, saying,

18 The LORD is [u] long-suffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.

19 Pardon, I beseech thee, the iniquity of this people, [x] according unto the greatness of thy mercy, and as thou hast forgiven this people from Egypt even [†] until now.

20 And the LORD said, I have [y] pardoned according to thy word:

21 But as truly as I live, [z] all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD.

22 Because all those men which have seen my glory, and my miracles which I did in Egypt, and in the wilderness, have [a] tempted me now these [b] ten times, [‡] and have not hearkened to my voice;

23 [c] Surely they shall not see the land which I sware unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it:

24 But my servant [§] Caleb, because he [d] had another spirit with him, and hath followed me fully, him will I bring into the land whereinto he went; and his seed shall possess it.

25 (Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites [‖] dwelt in the valley.) To-morrow [e] turn you, and get you into the wilderness, by the way of the Red sea.

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

27 [f] How long shall I bear with this evil congregation, which murmur against me? I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel, which they murmur against me.

28 Say unto them, [g] As truly as I live, saith the LORD, as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you:

29 Your carcasses shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty

* The sin of the heathen, either in Pharaoh (Exod. 5. 2.) or the surrounding idolaters, never lay in denying the godhead of Jehovah, but in preferring another God and another mode of worship. In fact, the heathen nations seldom or never differed about the being, but about the attributes and offices of their several deities. And, as the attribute of power is always the most observable, Moses therefore "reasons" with God, (Isa. 1. 18.) showing, that if judgment prevail over mercy, the heathen will attribute it not to want of will, but of power; and so be confirmed in the worship of their worthless idols, to whose superior influence they would attribute Israel's destruction. —Ed.

[‡] The phrase translated "breach of promise" occurs but this once, so that there is no source in comparison. The meaning must therefore be sought in the word itself, and the analogy of other divine truths. To say, with some, that the promise being conditional, and the Israelites having failed in their part, God means to tell them he is not bound to his part of the engagement, is really to explain nothing. For even admitting the phrase "conditional promise," still it is merely an abbreviated name, for both a promise and a threatening implied or declared, the one to the believing and obedient, the other to the unbelieving and rebellious; and as the fulfilment of the promise would be no disannulling of the threatening; so the infliction of the threatening, would be no "breach" of the promise. The literal translation will best explain and convey the meaning of the passage, "ye shall know my rising up against you," my displeasure, my indignation, which sense of the words is confirmed by the following verse.—Edd.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—The headstrong and unmortified passions of sinners hurry them furiously on to their own ruin: and such as are discontented with God's providence, and resolve to mend themselves, always make the matter worse and worse. Unbelieving murmurers are prone to charge God himself with the most base and malicious designs, and to wish for misery, under a pretence of care to avoid it. What an infinite advantage is God's presence and favour! But if he leave us, we become an easy prey to every invader. How noble is it when the abused servants of Christ in meekness instruct them that oppose themselves: if God, peradventure, will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth! though often they draw upon themselves barbarous treatment from such as they labour to save. But God tenderly remarks the dangers of his faithful servants, and interferes for their relief in the critical moment. What a blessing to a nation are those who can effectually plead their cause at a throne of grace; wrestle for mercy and forgiveness; and fill their mouth with arguments, from God's own honour, power, declared mercy and patience, and their own former experience thereof! God is ready graciously to hear and answer such intercessions, even when he will not forbear showing his indignation at the sins which have provoked him. He keeps an exact account of men's conduct, that he may reward or punish it in due time. Terribly offensive to him is the contempt and discrediting of his promises, and most effectual for provoking him to abandon the guilty to irretrievable and everlasting ruin! But ringleaders in guilt, and presumptuous adventurers, in opposition to God's express command, often fall under distinguished marks of his wrath, and are made pledges of the final destruction of those whom they have seduced to, or encouraged to sin. Take heed, therefore, O my soul, lest I be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin; lest there be in me an evil heart of unbelief, departing from the living God: and fear, lest a promise being left me of entering into his rest, I should seem to come short of it through unbelief! but let me be a man of another spirit than the world, and let me singly cleave to, and fully follow after the Lord. If for so doing men revile and persecute me, God will amply reward me with an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

10 And thou shalt bring for a drink-offering half an hin of wine, for an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

11 Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid.

12 According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one, according to their number.

13 All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner, in offering an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if a [e]stranger sojourn with you, or whosoever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do.

15 [g]One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD.

16 One law, and one manner, shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you,

19 Then it shall be, that when ye eat of [h] the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave-offering unto the LORD.

20 Ye shall offer up a cake of the [i]first of your dough for an heave-offering: as ye do [k] the heave-offering of the thrashing-floor, so shall ye heave it.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave-offering in your generations.

22 ¶ And if ye have [l]erred, and not observed all these commandments, which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses,

23 Even [m] all that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward, among your generations;

24 Then it shall be, if ought be committed by ignorance, [†] without the knowledge of the [‡]congregation, that all the congregation shall [n]offer one young bullock for a burnt-offering, for a sweet savour unto the LORD, with his meat-offering, and his drink-offering, according to the [§] manner, and one kid of the goats for a sin-offering.

25 And the [o]priest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them; for it is ignorance: and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and their sin-offering before the LORD, for their ignorance:

26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them; seeing all the people were in ignorance.

27 ¶ And [p]if any soul sin through ignorance, then he shall bring a she-goat of the first year for a sin-offering.

28 And the [q]priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him; and it shall be forgiven him.

29 Ye [r] shall have one law for him that sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them.

30 ¶ But the soul that doeth ought [s] presumptuously, [†] (whether he be born in the land, or a stranger,) the same reproacheth the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people:

31 Because he hath [t]despised the word of the LORD, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off; [‡] his iniquity shall be upon him.

32 ¶ And, while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks upon the [u] sabbath-day.

33 And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation.

34 And they put him [x] in ward, [§] because it was not declared what should be done to him.

35 And the LORD said unto Moses, The man shall be [y] surely put to death: all the congregation shall stone him with stones without the camp.

36 And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and [z] stoned him with stones, and he died; [‖] as the LORD commanded Moses.

37 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

38 Speak unto the children of Israel, and [a] bid them that they make them fringes in the borders of their garments, throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue.

39 And it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and [b] remember all the commandments of the LORD, and do them;

[‡] There are two laws for sins of ignorance, Lev. iv. Num. xv. The first for the wilderness, the second for Canaan. But why are there two laws for the same case? They are not for the same case. The law in Lev. 4. 2. is enacted for cases where the congregation, priest, or ruler, or people, have "erred," and "not observed" all the commandments, that is, for any mere neglect arising from ignorance. The law in Num. 15. 22. is enacted for cases where the sin of ignorance is "against any of the commandments of the Lord;" not a mere neglect, but a direct infraction. The distinction is well expressed in these words:—"We have left undone, the things which we ought to have done; and we have done those things which we ought not to have done.—ED.

[†] The words translated "presumptuously," literally mean "with a high hand;" which phrase, by consulting Deut. 32. 27. we find to signify, the pride of human power, madly aiming, or blindly believing itself to be independent of God. This sin will appear (1) In deliberating and planning sin in open contempt of God and his law, ver. 31. (2) In sinning upon the expectation of continued life and future repentance, Acts 24. 25. [‖] This is the only example in scripture of a capital punishment for breach of the sabbath, although the complaints against the guilt are frequent in Nehemiah, Ezra, Ezekiel, &c. It was as a sin of presumption that this sabbath-breaking was punished, God had declared, (Exod. 31. 13, 17.) that the sabbath was "a sign" between him and the Israelites for ever. This violation must have been found, upon investigation, to have been intended to express open contempt for God and his covenant.—ED.

NOW [a] Korah, the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi; and Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab; and On, the son of Peleth, sons of Reuben, took men: *

2 And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, [b] famous in the congregation, men of renown:

3 And they gathered themselves together [c] against Moses, and against Aaron, and said unto them, † Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the LORD is among them: wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the LORD?

4 ¶ And when Moses heard it, he [d] fell upon his face:

5 And he spake unto Korah, and unto all his company, saying, Even [e] to-morrow ‡ the LORD will show who are his, and who is holy; and will cause him to come near unto him: even him whom he hath chosen will he cause to come near unto him.

6 This do; [f] Take you censers, Korah and all his company;

7 And put fire therein, and put incense in them before the LORD to-morrow; and it shall be, that the man whom the LORD doth choose, he shall be holy: ye take § too much upon you, ye sons of Levi;

8 And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi;

9 Seemeth it but a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel [h] hath separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you [i] near to himself, to do the service of the tabernacle of the LORD, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them?

10 And he hath brought thee near to him, and all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee; and seek ye the priesthood also?

11 For which cause both thou and all thy company are gathered together [l] against the LORD: and [k] what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him? *

12 ¶ And Moses sent to [l] call Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab; which said, We will not come up:

13 Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up [m] out of a land that floweth with milk and honey to kill us in the wilderness, except thou [n] make thyself altogether a prince over us?

14 Moreover, thou hast not brought us [o] into a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards: wilt thou † put out the eyes of these men? we will not come up.

15 And Moses was [p] very wroth, ‡ and said unto the LORD, [q] Respect not thou their offering: [r] I have not § taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them.

16 ¶ And Moses said unto Korah, Be thou and all thy company [s] before the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, to-morrow:

17 And take every man his censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censer.

18 And they took every man his censer, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron.

19 And Korah gathered [t] all the congregation ‖ against them unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the congregation.

20 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

21 [u] Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may consume them [x] in a moment.

22 And [y] they fell upon their faces, and said, O God, the God of the [z] spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, [a] Get you up from about * the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

25 And Moses rose up, and went [b] unto Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him.

Behold how the Lord must be honoured with the first-fruits of all our substance! But especially behold the indispensable necessity of Christ, as our propitiation for sin, however inadvertently it be committed; and the infinite danger of wilful and presumptuous sinning exemplified in this violation of the sabbath! Is it not shameful that we should need memorials of obedience to the laws of God, so great and gracious—nay, God, even our own God! Enter then, my soul, into the spirit of these things. While I live on Jesus' flesh and blood, and rely on his atonement alone, let me cheerfully give myself, and all that I have, to the Lord. Never dare to sin against light and love; to violate the sabbath of the Lord my God, by thinking my own thoughts, speaking my own words, doing my own ways, or finding my own pleasures. But let his law be written on my heart; and every providence, every enjoyment, be improved by me as an excitement to holy obedience!

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, [c] Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side: and Dathan and Abiram came out, and [d] stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

28 And Moses said, Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do [e] all these works; * (for I have not done them [f] of mine own mind;)

29 If these men die [†] the common death of all men, or if they be [g] visited after the visitation of all men, then the LORD hath not sent me:

30 But if the LORD [‡] [h] make a new thing, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and they go down quick into the pit, then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the LORD.

31 ¶ [i] And it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that the ground clave asunder that was under them:

32 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses, and all the men that [§] appertained [k] unto Korah, and all their goods.

33 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation.

34 And all Israel that were round about them [l] fled at the cry of them: [‖] for they said, Lest the earth swallow us up also.

35 And there [m] came out a [*] fire from the LORD, and consumed the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.

36 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for they are [n] hallowed.

38 The censers of these [o] sinners against their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar; for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: and they shall be [p] a sign unto the children of Israel. *

39 And Eleazar the priest took the brazen censers, wherewith they that were burnt had offered; and they were made broad plates for a covering of the altar:

40 To be [q] a memorial unto the children of Israel, that no [r] stranger, [†] which is not of the seed of Aaron, come near to offer incense before the LORD, that he be not as Korah, and as his company; as the LORD said to him by the hand of Moses.

41 ¶ But [s] on the morrow all the congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron, saying, Ye have killed the people of the LORD.

42 And it came to pass, when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the tabernacle of the congregation: and, behold, the cloud covered it, and the [t] glory of the LORD appeared.

43 And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation.

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 [u] Get you up from among this congregation, that I may consume them as in a moment. And they [x] fell upon their faces.

46 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and [y] put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them: for there is wrath gone out from the LORD; the plague is begun.

47 And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran into the midst of the congregation; and, behold, the plague was begun among the people: and he [z] put on incense, and made an atonement for the people.

48 And he [a] stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed. ‡

49 Now they that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, besides them that died about the matter of Korah.

50 And Aaron [b] returned unto Moses, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the plague was stayed.

‡ Of the precise nature of the plague we are not informed. It may have been in the form of a sweeping epidemic—such as the disease commonly called Indian cholera—which is still seen to select, as it were, particular localities, and to be restrained by providence at particular boundaries; or it may have been inflicted by a destructive wind, whose ravages are directed and confined in particular currents.—Note. In this courageous and generous act of intercession, Aaron is a special type of Christ, "standing between the living and the dead," having put away sin, returning as an atoning priest, to Moses the representative of a once condemning, but now satisfied law, Rom. 10. 4.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—It is hard for the best of characters to stand before envy. Unsanctified honours often puff up men to their own destruction: and, if God exalt them above most of their brethren, they can endure to be in subjection to none. Yea, God permits unsanctified professors, especially ministers and magistrates, to go often the most fearful lengths in sin. Every act of disobedience to, or contempt of, God's vicegerents in the church or state, is by him accounted rebellion against himself: and often would sinful nations be utterly ruined, were it not for the intercession of those saints whom they abuse and persecute. But God can, and sometimes does, execute upon presumptuous sinners the most terrible correspondent vengeance. And though, with care, he distinguishes between the more and the less guilty, yet he sets up proper memorials of his judgments, that others may hear, and fear to do wickedly. But, notwithstanding, hardened sinners, who survive, forget the most awakening alarms, and return to their persecution of God's servants! Yet still, in the most endearing manner, ought we to promote the welfare and salvation of those who have injured us; and, when we are maliciously accused, the greatest comfort is the testimony of a good conscience. How like unto their master Christ, do ministers act, when they expose their very lives to prevent the ruin of such as abuse them! And quickly the Lord repents him of the evil, when, earnestly entreated by such as, along with himself, are abused by sinners. Let me now, with trembling, remember my faults this day.—How often have I, as these rebels, gone about to establish my own righteousness, and refused to submit to the laws of Christ; and thus attempted to thrust him from his office of priest and king over the people of God, in order that I might usurp his place! How often have I refused to come at his call, and offered strange incense before him? How often, the moment in which I had witnessed the awful vengeance of heaven, and obtained a distinguished deliverance, have I returned to my former iniquities! And remarkably is it of the Lord's mercies that I am not consumed! not swallowed up alive into hell by an opening earth! not burnt with fire from heaven! But here

(1) All the chief princes stand candidates, in their respective rods lying before the ark of the Lord for one night: 1—7. (2) By the miraculous budding of Aaron's rod, God marked out Aaron and his family alone to enjoy the priesthood: 8, 9. (3) To commemorate this decision, Aaron's blossoming rod is laid up before the ark: 10, 11. (4) The Israelites, not without murmuring, acquiesce in the divine determination, and resolve not to come near God's holy things: 12, 13.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod, according to the house of their fathers, of [a] all their princes, according to the house of their fathers, twelve rods: write thou every man's name upon his rod.
3 And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod shall be for the head of the house of their fathers.
4 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation [b] before the testimony, where I will meet with you.
5 And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod whom I [c] shall choose shall blossom: and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, whereby they murmur against you.
6 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, and [d] every one of their princes gave him [e] a rod apiece, for each prince one, according to their fathers' houses, even twelve rods: and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.
7 And Moses laid up the rods [f] before the LORD in the tabernacle of witness.
8 And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness; and, behold, the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi was [g] budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds.[‡]
9 And Moses brought out all the rods from before the LORD unto all the children of Israel: and they looked, and took every man his rod.[§]
10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [h] Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept for a token against the [i] rebels; and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not.
11 [k] And Moses did so: as the LORD commanded him, so did he.
12 And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, [l] Behold, we die, we perish, we all perish.

9 This shall be thine of the [l] most holy things reserved from the fire: every oblation of theirs, every meat-offering of theirs, and every sin-offering of theirs, and every trespass-offering of theirs, which they shall render unto me, shall be most holy for thee, and for thy sons.

(3) In this instance, it is applied to the court of the tabernacle, Lev. 6. 16, 26, 29; which here is called most holy, not in respect of the divisions of the tabernacle, but in respect of the camp, or other places, where the other offerings, were to be eaten. See note on ver. 14.—ED.

let me admire the wonderful zeal and love of my great High Priest, when he ran from his throne of glory, when he came among dying sinners—himself exposed to all their miseries—to stop the plague of sin, already begun in the woes of life, the stings of conscience, and the sentence of death; and to bring in everlasting righteousness and redemption. How superior his Priesthood! If they did not escape who despised Moses and Aaron, how shall I escape if I despise Jesus the great High Priest, Jesus the King in Zion.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—It is very desirable to prevent all disputes among the people of God; but often very difficult to extinguish some men's pretensions to what was never theirs. Abundant is the grace of God, who will even work miracles to prevent the sin and ruin of such as have rebelled against him: and what a mercy is it when a minister's call to his office is manifested by his success therein; and if sinners, even at the last, be brought to repentance! Nothing, surely, but a remarkable bestowal of gracious influence will effectually stop all murmurings against the dispensations of God, and bring sinners to submit to them. But in this budding rod let me not only behold the fruitfulness of the Aaronic priesthood, in its usefulness to the people, and the certain succession of priests, while the ceremonial period continued, with the speedy vengeance which overtook the invaders thereof: but let me chiefly remark the eternal, the sole High Priest.

29 Out of all your gifts ye shall offer every heave-offering of the LORD of [k] all the [§] best thereof, even the hallowed part thereof, out of it.[‖]

30 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, When ye have heaved the best thereof from it, then it shall be counted unto the Levites as the increase of the thrashing-floor, and as the increase of the wine-press.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—The ministerial work is necessary and important; and the greatest care and diligence is necessary to render a person faithful in it. He must not only put away sin from himself, but take all care to prevent it in others. And extensive is the account that must be given to God, not only for himself, but for others under his care. How needful then is it that all in their stations, particularly parents, masters, and magistrates, should exert themselves to render the ministry comfortable and successful! God will have his servants decently provided for in the church, and in the heavenly state; nor will ever a godly people fail to make a liberal provision for a gospel ministry. But base are the minds of those ministers, who, having a competency, entangle themselves with the affairs of this life, or desire to excuse themselves from being charitable out

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD hath commanded, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee a [a] red heifer [*] [b] without spot, wherein is no blemish, and upon which [c] never came yoke.

3 And ye shall give her unto Eleazar the priest, that he may bring her [d] forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face.

4 And Eleazar the priest shall take of her blood with his finger, and [e] sprinkle of her blood directly before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times.

5 And one shall [f] burn the heifer in his sight; her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn.

6 And the priest shall take [g] cedar-wood, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer.

7 Then [h] the priest shall wash his clothes, and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even.[†]

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even.

9 And a [i] man that is clean shall gather up the ashes of the heifer, and [k] lay them up without the camp in a clean place; and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel for a water of separation: it is a purification for sin.

10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: and it shall be [l] unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever.

11 ¶ He that [m] toucheth the dead body of any [‡] man shall be unclean seven days.

12 He shall [n] purify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean: but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean.

13 Whosoever [o] toucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, defileth the tabernacle of the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from Israel: because the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean; his uncleanness is yet upon him.

14 This is the law, when a man dieth in a tent; [p] All that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days:

15 And every open vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean.

16 And whosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

17 And [q] for an unclean person they shall take of the [*] ashes of the burnt heifer of purification for sin, and [†] running water [‡] shall be put thereto in a vessel;

18 And [r] a clean person shall take hyssop, and dip it in the water, and sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that touched a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave:

19 And the [s] clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day; and on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and shall be clean at even.

20 But [t] the man that shall be unclean, and shall not purify himself, that soul shall be cut off from among the congregation, because he hath defiled the sanctuary of the LORD: the water of separation hath not been sprinkled upon him; he is unclean.

21 And it shall be a perpetual statute unto them, that [u] he that sprinkleth the water of separation shall wash his clothes; and he that toucheth the water of separation shall be unclean until even.

22 And [x] whatsoever the unclean person toucheth shall be unclean; and the soul that toucheth it shall be unclean until even.

* "Red" is the emblem of sin, Is. 1. 18. For a heifer of that colour, without any spot or blemish, and as yet unyoked, the people are required to search. The difficulty of the discovery naturally leading them to inquire, Why is this appointed? (comp. Exod. 12. 26, 27.) and thence to self-examination, acknowledgment of guilt, and refuge in atonement. With this ordinance, which could extend but to "the purifying of the flesh," Paul beautifully contrasts the death of Christ, "who, through the eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot to God," and "cleanses the conscience from dead works," Heb. 9. 13, 14.—ED.

of what God hath brought to their hand! And may I not also, in all this, discern the extensive charge, faithful labours, and glorious rewards of my Redeemer; and his improvement of all to his Father's honour, and his people's good!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—Behold how polluted are men, dead in trespasses and sins—much more abominable than the beasts that perish! to carnal reasoning, some of God's ordinances appear absurd. How strange is it to make ashes, mingled with water, the mean of purification from the deepest defilement! but it is infinitely dangerous to contemn the least of his institutions. These ceremonies are indeed insufficient to take away sin; for the most remarkable of them for atonement or purification spread the defilement! But the meaning here is concerning Christ and his church. Being apprehended by the chief priests and elders of Israel, slain without the camp, burnt in the furnace of his Father's wrath; and his blood, his life, offered to God for the satisfaction of his justice: the virtue of his death, connected with the clean water, the pure influences of his Spirit, doth, in all generations, purge his people's consciences, and all their concerns, from dead works to serve the living God. Let it then be the care of my soul to begin, continue, and end my life, with a believing application thereof. It is death, it is

3 And the people [c] chode with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died [d] when our brethren died before the LORD!

4 And [e] why have ye brought up the congregation of the LORD into this wilderness, that we and our cattle should die there?

5 And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto [f] this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink.

6 And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly [g] unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they fell upon their faces: and [h] the glory of the LORD appeared unto them.

7 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

8 Take [i] the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou, and Aaron thy brother, and [k] speak ye unto the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

9 And Moses took the rod from before the LORD, as he commanded him.

10 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock; and he said unto them, [l] Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?

11 And Moses [m] lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice: and the [n] water came out abundantly; and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye [o] believed me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye [p] shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

13 [q] This is the water of [*] Meribah; because the children of Israel strove with the LORD, and he was [r] sanctified in them.

14 ¶ And Moses [s] sent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, Thus saith thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travel that hath befallen us;

15 How [t] our fathers went down into Egypt, and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time; and the Egyptians vexed us, and our fathers:

16 And [u] when we cried unto the LORD, he heard our voice, and sent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt; and, behold, we are in [x] Kadesh,* a city in the uttermost of thy border.

17 Let us pass, I pray thee, [y] through thy country: we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells; we will go by the king's high-way, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders.

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword.

19 And the children of Israel said unto him, [z] We will go by the high-way; and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, then I will pay for it: I will only (without doing any thing else) go through on my feet.

20 And he said, Thou shalt not go through. [a] And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand.

21 Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border: wherefore Israel [b] turned away from him.†

22 ¶ And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from Kadesh, and came unto mount Hor.

23 And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying,

24 Aaron shall be gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ye rebelled against my word at the water of Meribah.

25 Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor:

26 And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there.

27 And Moses did as the Lord commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation.

28 And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and Aaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount.

29 And when all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron thirty days, even all the house of Israel.

* Kadesh presents one of the greatest geographical difficulties in the whole Mosaic itinerary. Maps and commentators generally agree that Kadesh-barnea and Kadesh are two distinct and distant places. Kadesh-barnea they place on the frontier of Palestine, about midway between the southern extremity of the Dead sea and the Mediterranean; and Kadesh, where Miriam died, in the mountains of Edom, about midway between Ezion-geber on the Red and Zoar on the Dead sea. This point of geography, it must be observed, is altogether conjectural, there being no certain landmarks nor continuous historical records, as in other instances, by which the locality can be determined. A high probability, however, is derived from ch. 33. 36. where it is said, "they removed from Ezion-gaber, (which is in the Elanitic gulf of the Red sea) and pitched in the wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh," and "removed from Kadesh and pitched in mount Hor." Now this Kadesh is evidently in the direct or most convenient road to mount Hor, but the Kadesh-barnea of the ordinary scriptural maps lies far to the north-west. Again, we find the Israelites, when the spies returned from Canaan, encamped in Kadesh, (ch. 13. 26.) and from Deut. 1. 19, 22, 23, 24, we find this Kadesh identified with Kadesh-barnea. Upon the whole, therefore, we are induced to conclude that Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea are two names, not for one spot or town, but for one extensive district, and that according to Eusebius, it was in the neighbourhood of mount Hor, near Petra, the capital of Arabia Petræa, and where the tomb of Miriam was still pointed out in his time.—Ed.

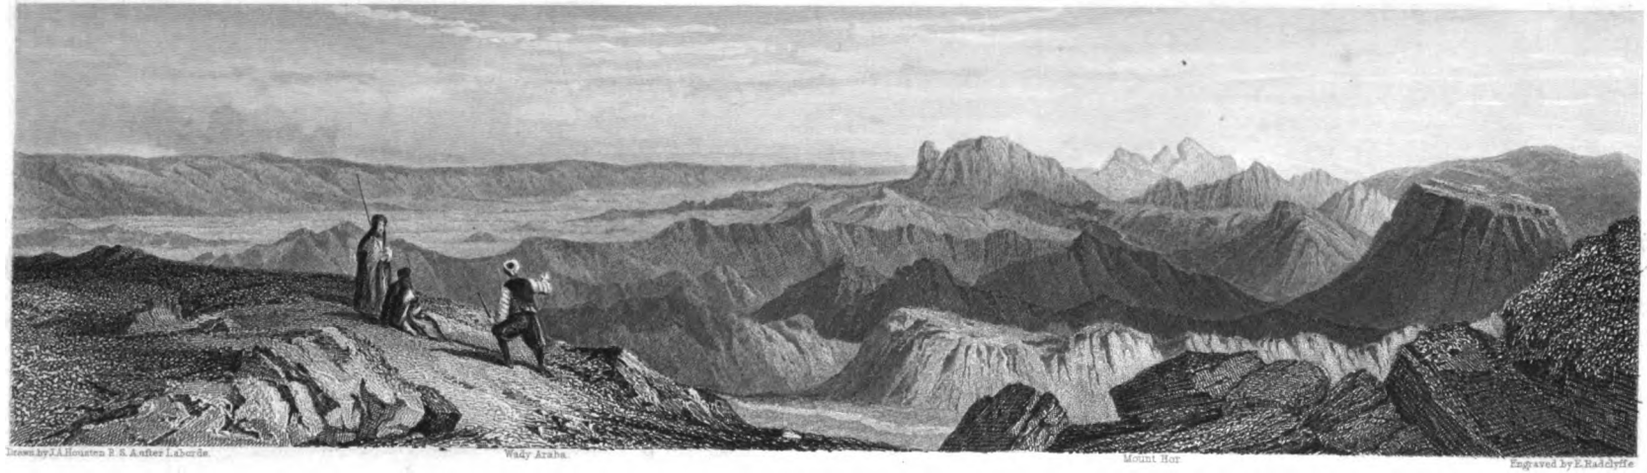
† Edom had a conventional, but not a moral right to refuse the passage. The conventional right was founded on will and power—the moral right on kindness and mercy—the one was of man, the other of God, and therefore should have predominated. But even a moral right is not always to be enforced: so Israel "turned aside," but neither from fear nor weakness, but at the commandment of God, (Deut. 2. 4, 5.) and in the exercise of that charity that "seeketh not her own," but "suffereth long and is kind," 1 Cor. 13. 4, 5.—Ed.

damnation, if I neglect it. Having fellowship with him in his resurrection, by justification and regeneration, I shall, in due time, enter on his eternal sabbath, without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing.



REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Much of our time is spent as a tale that is told, passed away in God's wrath, without any thing worth remarking. And death at length makes quick and repeated inroads in families which have been long forborne. Miriam, Aaron, and Moses, now die all in one year. And, as it was with them, so God often writes indignation upon the death of his own people, who are saved in the Lord their God: for in the chastisement of his choicest saints he is severely strict, as, indeed, their sins dishonour him in a distinguished manner. Children readily imitate their parents in their wickedness. Bad customs and tempers cleave close to men, and show themselves whenever an occasion presents itself: and those are often ready to wish for death who are very unfit for it. Men's principal friends are often treated the worst; but the mercy and power of God are exerted for the relief of sinful rebels against him. Yet, alas! how prone are the best of men to unbelief under long or repeated trials, and to passion under great provocations: and often reproaches, just in their matter, may be very sinful in their manner. How lasting are quarrels between families, and nations! and how inveterate the hatred of Edomites of the world against the church and people of God! little of earthly comforts can we hope for in our way to the Canaan above! but when believers look most beautiful on the borders of the grave, and when faith disarms death of CHAPTER XXI.

(1) The Israelites are attacked by Arad: 1—3. (2) They are plagued with fiery serpents; but, on their repentance, have a brazen serpent erected as an effectual mean of cure: 4—9. (3) They march forward several stages; and at Beer find excellent water: 10—20. (4) Entering Canaan, they conquer the kingdoms of Sihon and Og on the east of Jordan, and take possession thereof: 21—35.

A. M. 2552. B. C. 1452.

AND when [a]king Arad [*]the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, heard tell that Israel came by the [b] way of the spies, then he fought against Israel, and took [c] some of them prisoners.

2 And Israel [d] vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, then I [e] will utterly destroy their cities.

3 And [f] the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: [†] and he called the name of the place [§] Hormah.

4 ¶ And they journeyed from mount Hor, by the way of the [‡] Red sea, to [h] compass the land of Edom: and the soul of the people was much [‖] discouraged because of the way.

5 And the people [i] spake against God, and against Moses, Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water; and our soul loatheth this light bread.

6 And [k] the LORD sent [*] fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died.

7 ¶ Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, [l] We have sinned; for we have spoken against the LORD, and against thee: pray unto the LORD, that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people.

8 And the LORD said unto Moses, [m] Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.

9 And [n] Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole; and it came to pass, that if a [*] serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived.

10 ¶ [p] And the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in Oboth.

11 And they journeyed from Oboth, and pitched at [†] Ije-abarim, in the wilderness which is before Moab, toward the sun-rising.

12 ¶ From thence they removed, and pitched in the [q] valley of Zared.

13 From thence they removed, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coasts of the Amorites: for [r] Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites.

14 Wherefore it is said in the [*] book of the wars of the LORD, [†] What he did in the Red sea, and in the brooks of Arnon,

15 And at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, [s] and [‡] lieth upon the border of Moab.

16 And from thence they went to [t] Beer; that is the well, whereof the LORD spake unto Moses, [u] Gather the people together, and I will give them water.

17 ¶ Then Israel [x] sang this song, [§] Spring up, O well; [‖] sing ye unto it:

18 The [y] princes digged the well, the nobles of the people digged it, by the direction of the [z] lawgiver, with their staves. And [a] from the wilderness they went to Mattanah;

19 And from Mattanah to Nahaliel; and from Nahaliel to Bamoth;

20 And from Bamoth in the valley, that is in the [*] country of Moab, to the top [b] of Pisgah, which looketh toward [c] Jeshimon.

21 ¶ And [d] Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying,

22 Let me pass through thy land: we will not turn into the fields, or into the vineyards; we will not drink of the waters of the well; but we will go along by the king's high-way, until we be past thy borders.

23 [*] And Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border; but Sihon gathered all his people together, and went out against Israel into the wilderness: and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

24 And [f] Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land from Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon: for the border of the children of Ammon was strong.

25 And Israel took all these cities: and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the [†] villages thereof.

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon.[‡] all its terrors—when they depart deliberately and cheerfully into the joy of our Lord—how comely and how comfortable! And it is a peculiar joy to dying ministers to see the cause of God transmitted into the hands of zealous and faithful successors.

But let me not bid adieu to Aaron, the saint of God, till I behold in him, as in a figure, Jesus, the great High Priest of my profession! Seasonable and divinely solemn was his call to his work! with an unmeasurable unction of the Holy Ghost, and perfect purity of nature, was he prepared for it. By his miracles; his destruction of his Jewish and Gentile opposers; by the marvellous influence of the gospel rod of his strength, is his office confirmed and ratified of God! He delivers his chosen tribes from spiritual slavery; justifies and sanctifies them; leads them up through this wilderness world; and he can well speak to their respective cases and doubts. He is our sole High Priest, and the spiritual Father of all such as are made priests unto God: and with amazing holiness, courage, labour, patience, and pity, he executes his work. At the expense of his life he averted the plague of infinite vengeance from his unreasonable abusers: and, having finished his work of obedience, he publicly and willingly, upon mount Calvary, resigned himself unto death, leaving his robes of finished righteousness to his spiritual seed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Continued courage and dependence upon God are highly necessary, that at last we may prove more than conquerors. Religious vows, when properly conducted, are likewise sometimes profitable. But upon what inconsiderable temptations, prevailing lusts, formerly punished, again break forth! Often the long continuance of God's mercies with men render them cheap in their eyes. But let us remember it is hazardous to offend God, who hath so many instruments of vengeance at his beck; and that sufferings for sin should lead us to repentance for it; especially since God is so ready to forgive the penitent, and to turn away his wrath. But, oh unspeakable mercy! as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so Jesus Christ, the Son of man, was lifted up on the cross, and is now lifted up in the gospel, for the cure of all those deadly maladies contracted from the seduction of the old serpent the devil—when we look to him by faith! In all our wanderings on earth God can grant us wells of comfort, and fill our mouths with his praise: he can bestow noted victories in favour of his people, even on this side death. And what easy work it is to conquer the strongest enemies when God's time is come, and he performs all things for us! Yet in these victories let me observe, that they, who intend mischief to others, often fall into the pit which themselves have digged; that worldly possessions are changeable and frail; and especially that ill-gotten gain is seldom long enjoyed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Relations by blood are sometimes the bitterest enemies to one another; and seek to ruin those who might expect kindness from them. The most awful things in religion, imprecations of divine wrath not excepted, are often transformed into ordinances of the devil: and sinners, with great expense and toil, court the assistance of hell, when they might have freely from heaven whatever they need. Yea, great men, who scorn to worship their Maker, frequently cringe as slaves to the very slaves of the devil! What inestimable value do carnal men put upon earthly riches and honours, as if these were sufficient to determine to any thing! And there is great need to realize eternal things, that nothing temporal may be able to decoy us. But religion is sometimes put on as a cloak by those who have no real regard to it. And the most presumptuous claims to God, and pretence of high regard to his will, are used when they would gladly counteract it. Wicked messengers indeed rarely report the whole of the truth as 17 For [o] I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me: come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people.

18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, [p] If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more.

19 Now therefore, I pray you, [q] tarry ye also here this night, that I may know what the LORD will say unto me more.

20 And God came unto Balaam at night, and said unto him, [r] If the men come to call thee, rise up, [*] and go with them; but [s] yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

21 And Balaam [t] rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab.

22 ¶ And God's anger was kindled [u] because he went: [†] and the [x] angel of the LORD stood in the way for an adversary against him. (Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him.)

23 And [y] the ass saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field; and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way.

24 But the angel of the LORD stood in a [‡] path of the vineyards, a wall being on this side, and a wall on that side.

25 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she thrust herself unto the wall, and [z] crushed Balaam's foot against the wall; and he smote her again.

26 And the angel of the LORD went further, and stood in a narrow place, [b] where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left.

27 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she fell down under Balaam: and [c] Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the ass with a staff.

28 And the LORD [d] opened the mouth of the ass; and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

29 And Balaam said unto the ass, Because thou hast mocked me: I [e] would there were a sword in mine hand, for now would I kill thee.

30 And the ass said unto Balaam, Am not I thine ass, [§] upon which thou hast ridden [‖] ever since I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, Nay.

31 Then the LORD opened the eyes of Balaam, and he [f] saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he bowed down his head, and [g] fell flat on his face.

32 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, [h] Wherefore hast thou smitten thine ass these three times? behold, I went out [*] to withstand thee, because thy way is [i] perverse before me:

33 And the ass saw me, and turned from me these three times: unless she had turned from me, surely now also I [k] had slain thee, and saved her alive.

34 And Balaam said unto the angel of the LORD, I [l] have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me: now therefore, if it [†] displease thee, I will get me back again.

35 And the angel of the LORD said unto Balaam, [m] Go with the men: but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak. So Balaam went with the princes of Balak.

36 ¶ And when Balak heard that Balaam was come, he [n] went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, which is in the border of [o] Arnon, which is in the utmost coast.

37 And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? wherefore camest thou not unto me? am [p] I not able indeed to promote thee to honour?

38 And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee: have [q] I now any power at all to say any thing? the word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.

39 And Balaam went with Balak, and they came unto [‡] Kirjath-huzoth.

40 And Balak [r] offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam, [§] and to the princes that were with him.

41 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Balak took Balaam, and brought him up into the high places of Baal, that thence he might see [s] the utmost part of the people.

[*] God had said to Balaam, (ver. 12.) "Thou shalt not go with them;" now he says, "go with them," is he not therefore changeable in his purpose, and even contradictory in his prohibitions and permissions? No; God prohibits him from going with the first messenger, and the anxiety of Balak, Moab, and Midian, is excited, and their attention doubly drawn to the coming and the words of Balaam. God permits or orders Balaam to go with the second messengers, who were "more honourable," (ver. 15.) than the first, not out of respect to their rank, but out of regard to his own proper time of employing Balaam's warning—a warning which their confidence in Balaam should have induced the Moabites to observe.—ED.

it really is: and the Lord often apparently indulges dissemblers in their own way, and permits them to follow the course which he had once prohibited: and how fond are they with eagerness to follow his permission, and even go beyond it! The brute creation are often endangered, and suffer for man's sin; even by the wickedness of those to whom they have been assistant. But vain is every attempt to destroy the church, while her God can so easily check it. In the most unexpected form he can rebuke such as think to oppose him; however hearty sinners may be in their evil work, or liberally kind to such as they hope will assist them in it.

thy [c]burnt-offering, and I will go: [d]peradventure the LORD will come to meet me; and whatsoever he showeth[*] me I will tell thee. And [e]he went to an high place.

4 And God [f]met Balaam: and he said unto him, I have [g]prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram.

5 And the LORD [h]put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

6 And he returned unto him, and, lo, he stood by his burnt-sacrifice, he and all the princes of Moab.

7 ¶ And he [i]took up his parable, and said, Balak the king of Moab hath brought me [k]from Aram, out of the mountains of the east, saying, [l]Come, curse me Jacob; and come, [m]defy Israel.

8 [n]How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the LORD hath not defied?

9 For from the top of the rocks I see him, and from the hills I behold him: lo, the people shall [o]dwell alone,[†] and shall not be reckoned among the nations.

10 Who can count [p]the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel?[‡] Let [§q]me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his![‖]

11 And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done unto me? I took thee to [r]curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast blessed them altogether.

12 And he answered and said, [s]Must I not take heed to speak that which the LORD hath put in my mouth?

13 And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me unto another place, from whence thou mayest see them: thou shalt see [t]but the utmost part of them, and shalt not see them all; and curse me them from thence.

14 ¶ And he brought him into the field of Zophim, to the top of [*]Pisgah, and [u]built seven altars, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

15 And he said unto Balak, Stand here by thy burnt-offering, while I meet the LORD yonder.

16 And the LORD met Balaam, and [x]put a word in his mouth, and said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus.

17 And when he came to him, behold, he stood by his burnt-offering, and the princes of Moab with him. And Balak said unto him, What hath the LORD spoken?

18 ¶ And he took up his parable, and said, [y]Rise up, Balak, and hear; hearken unto me, thou son of Zippor:

19 [z]God is not a man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?

20 Behold, I have received commandment to bless; and he hath blessed; and I [a]cannot reverse it.

21 He [b]hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel:[*] the [c]LORD his God is with him, and the shout of a king[†] is among them.

22 [d]God brought them out of Egypt: [e]he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn.

23 [f]Surely there is no enchantment [‡]against Jacob, neither is there any divination against Israel: [g]according to this time it shall be said of Jacob and of Israel, What hath God wrought!

24 Behold, [h]the people shall rise up as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

25 ¶ And Balak said unto Balaam, Neither curse them at all, nor bless them at all.

26 But Balaam answered and said unto Balak, [i]Told not I thee, saying, All that the LORD speaketh, that I must do?

27 And Balak said unto Balaam, Come, I pray thee, I will bring thee unto another place; peradventure it will please God that thou mayest curse me them from thence.

28 And Balak brought Balaam unto the top of [k]Peor, that looketh toward [l]Jeshimon.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—What a costly parade in religion will the worst of men make, in order to obtain their wicked ends? But fearful is their disappointment who think to make God their debtor by their services. All instruments are in his hands, and he can indulge to hypocrites the most amazing manifestations of himself, when it is for the advantage of his people; or make use of the worst of instruments to carry on his most excellent works. But beautiful is the appearance of God's church, when every thing therein is regulated according to his prescriptions. Happy and safe are they who have the gracious, the almighty, and faithful God for their protector and portion: though troops overcome them, they shall overcome at the last; and be more than conquerors, through him that loved them: he will make their enemies to acknowledge the sovereign dominion, unchanging care, and almighty power of their God, till they who hate the life, will wish to die the death of the righteous. But, alas! how obstinate and unwearied are sinners in their wicked courses, and in running from one refuge of lies to another! And it is always necessary for the saints to watch and pray, since, unknown to them, their enemies may be adding one attempt after another to destroy them.

7 He shall [l] pour the water out of his [‖] buckets, and his seed shall be in many waters; and his [¶] king shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted.

8 [n] God brought him forth out of Egypt; he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn: he shall eat up the nations his enemies, and shall break their bones, and pierce them through with his arrows.

9 [o] He couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion; who shall stir him up? [p] Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee.

10 ¶ And Balak's anger was kindled against Balaam, and he smote his hands together: and Balak said unto Balaam, I called thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast altogether blessed them these three times.

11 Therefore now flee thou to thy place: I thought to promote thee unto great honour; but, lo, the LORD hath [q] kept thee back from honour.

12 And Balaam said unto Balak, [r] Spake I not also to thy messengers which thou sentest unto me, saying,

13 If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the LORD, to do either good or bad of mine own mind; but what the LORD saith, that will I speak?

14 And now, behold, I go unto my people:* come therefore, and I will [s] advertise thee what this people shall do to thy people in the [t] latter days.

15 ¶ And he [u] took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said;

16 He hath said, which [x] heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the most High, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:†

17 I shall see [y] him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh:‡ there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall [§] smite the corners of Moab, and [‖] destroy all the children of Sheth.

18 And [z] Edom shall be a possession, Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies; and Israel shall do valiantly.

19 Out of Jacob shall come [a] he that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.

20 And when he looked on Amalek, he took up his parable, and said, Amalek was [b] the first of the nations, but his [c] latter end* shall be that he perish for ever.

21 And he looked on the [†] Kenites, and took up his parable, and said, [d] Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock:

22 Nevertheless‡ the Kenite shall be wasted, [§] until Asshur shall carry thee away captive.

23 And he took up his parable, and said, Alas! who shall live when God doeth this?

24 And [e] ships shall come from the coast of Chittim, and shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict Eber, and he also shall perish for ever.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and [f] returned to his place: and Balak also went his way.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. He would not again, in his magical and superstitious manner, consult God, but resolved to curse them without asking God's leave. ——Ver. 3, 4. Balaam, whose power to curse was so much relied on, whose will was so much inclined to it, and whose knowledge and manifestations of God are so remarkable, must and will confirm it, that Israel shall be blessed. ——Ver. 6—8. These predictions not only respect the glorious state of the Jews under Joshua, David, Solomon, Asa, Jehoshaphat, &c.; but also represent the extent, flourishing state, remarkable increase, and marvellous power of the spiritual kingdom of Christ. ——Ver. 17—19. These predictions had their accomplishment in the victories and conquests of the Hebrews over the Moabites or Edomites, and neighbouring nations, in the days of Ehud, Gideon, and Jephthah; Judg. iii, vii, xi.; David, 2 Sam. v, viii, x.; Jehoshaphat, 2 Chr. xx. 2 Kings iii.; Uzziah, 2 Chr. xxvi.; and after the Chaldean captivity, in the time of Hyrcanus and Alexander Janneus; and perhaps may have a further literal accomplishment when the Jews take possession of Canaan. They may also relate to the conquests of the heathen nations to Jesus Christ under the New Testament. —— Ver. 20. The Amalekites were once one of the principal nations around Canaan, and were the first who attacked the Israelites; and therefore gradually destroyed by them in the days of Gideon, Saul, David, Hezekiah, and Esther. —— Ver. 21. Perhaps these Kenites were not the posterity of Jethro, but rather an Arabian tribe, who were neighbours to the Amalekites, and were at last carried captive by the Assyrians, about the time of Hezekiah or Manasseh. —— Ver. 24. This was fulfilled, when first the Greeks, and afterwards the Romans, invaded Asia, subdued Assyria, Canaan, and the places about; and when their respective empires were, not long after, brought to ruin; the Greeks about one hundred years before Christ, and the Romans about A. D. 476; and will be more fully accomplished in the ruin of the Popish and Turkish empires.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—Wretched indeed are those who are, by their conscience, excluded from the carnal enjoyments of this world, and notwithstanding live in these lusts which will exclude them from heaven: for great light may abound in the head, when there is nothing but naughtiness in the heart. Often sinners are proud of those gifts which God bestows upon them for the benefit of his people: and their knowledge, being cursed, is an effectual hinderance of true wisdom. But numerous and large are the blessings which God bestows upon his chosen people! they may be an eye-sore to Satan and his agents; yet God lays an effectual restraint upon their most inveterate enemies; and he will at last convince his opposers of the emptiness and folly of all their devilish devices for thwarting his purposes, or annoying his people. What infinite knowledge is there in God! he perfectly discerns every circumstance of nations and persons, ages unnumbered, before there is the smallest appearance thereof. He sees all changes to the end, all Balaam, before his departure, counsels Balak how he may cause Israel to ruin themselves. (1) By the Moabitish and Midianitish women, who frequented their camp, the Israelites are seduced into whoredom and idolatry: 1—3. (2) Their sin is punished with the hanging of a thousand by the magistrates, and with the death of about twenty-three thousand more by a plague from God: 4, 5, 9. (3) The zeal of Phinehas, in slaying two impudent transgressors, stops the plague, and procures to himself honour from God, and a lasting grant of the high priesthood: 6—15. AND Israel abode in [a] Shittim, and the [b] people began to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab.*

2 And they [c] called the people unto the sacrifices of their gods: † and the people did eat, and bowed down to their gods.

3 And Israel [d] joined himself unto ‡ Baal-peor: and the [e] anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, [f] Take all the heads of the people, § and hang them up before the LORD against the sun, that the fierce anger of the LORD may be turned away from Israel.

5 And Moses said unto [g] the judges of Israel, Slay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor.

6 ¶ And, behold, one of the children of Israel came and brought unto his brethren a Midianitish woman, in the sight of Moses, and in the sight of all the congregation of the children of Israel, who were [h] weeping before the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

7 And [i] when Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a [k] javelin in his hand;

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. [l] So the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

9 And [m] those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 [n] Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, (while he was zealous for my sake among them,) that I consumed not the children of Israel in my [o] jealousy.

the destruction and havock which sin will make in the world of one nation after another. But blessed be the Lord, who hath raised up an Horn of salvation in the house of his servant Jacob;—a Star to enlighten the Gentiles, and be the glory of his people Israel;—a Captain of salvation to go forth conquering and to conquer. But let me not dismiss this eastern sorcerer Balaam, with his high pretences to religion, his glorious speeches, and his noted intimacy with God, without seriously inquiring, What am I—what have I—what do I—what desire I—more than he?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—If the devil's agents prevail not against the church one way, they will try another. But let us remember, that no enchantment can hurt us but that of our own lusts; that one sin leads to another; and that few temptations are more dangerous than the lustful love of women. If once the heart be ensnared, the miserable slave of lust and beauty may be enticed to any thing sinful. Nothing more endangers the soul's final apostasy from God than yielding to the solicitation of fleshly lusts: nor doth any thing more effectually secure the vengeance of God, and damnation of hell. Yea, general distempers and loathsome diseases are the fruit of general and loathsome iniquities: and such sinners quickly become impudent in their crimes. It is necessary therefore to punish sins with great impartiality, as the higher men are, the more aggravated and hurtful is their offence. A well-timed and prudent zeal for the honour of God, in opposition to prevailing abominations, is a remarkable blessing to nations and churches. And God greatly honours and rewards such as dare to be bold and impartial in his cause for ridding a land of sin, and rescuing it from plagues. But friendship in sin quickly issues in mutual hatred and ruin; and tempters to sin are tormented with trouble. But in Phinehas may I not discern Jesus, whose zeal for his Father's house, and for the destruction of sin, and the salvation of men, did, as it were, consume him? who, for destroying the works of the devil, hath everlasting honours bestowed upon him and his spiritual seed; and an everlasting covenant of priesthood established with him, as the reward of his work?

and destroys, yea, brings lasting and public infamy upon such persons as might otherwise have been of great usefulness and fame. What alteration Providence makes in families, tribes, and nations, and what havock death makes of mankind, in a short time! Exactly, though gradually, are the threatenings of God's word accomplished! but amidst all the changes of this world, his faithfulness abides the same: yea, with care and wisdom he fixes even the outward lot of his people; and the promises of his grace are sure to all the seed; and in the enjoyment of them we ought therefore to be attentive to his sovereign disposal.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—With these daughters of Zelophehad let me manifest a strong faith in the promises of God, a strong desire after the better country, and a tender regard to my parents' honour; so shall my labour not be in vain in the Lord. While I observed, that it is appointed for all men once to die; that God's principal favourites are often most severely chastised for their sin: but that in death believers retire to their best friends, to their unchanging and eternal rest;—while I profit by the death of others, whom I have seen depart before me in peace and comfort:—let me, with Moses, kindly accept God's warnings of my own death.—Let me manifest a deep concern for the welfare of the church after I am gone; and rejoice that Jesus liveth, and is appointed of God as her Governor, 16 ¶ [p]And in the fourteenth day of the first month [*] is the passover of the LORD.

17 [q]And in the fifteenth day of this month is the feast: seven days shall unleavened bread be eaten.

18 In the [r]first day shall be an holy convocation; ye shall do no manner of servile work therein:

19 But ye shall offer a sacrifice made by fire, for a burnt-offering unto the LORD; [s]two young bullocks, and one ram, and seven lambs of the first year: they shall be unto you [t]without blemish.

20 And their meat-offering shall be of flour mingled with oil: three tenth-deals shall ye offer for a bullock, and two tenth-deals for a ram;

21 A several tenth-deal shalt thou offer for every lamb, throughout the seven lambs:

22 And one goat for a sin-offering, to make an atonement for you.

23 Ye shall offer these besides the burnt-offering in the morning, which is for a continual burnt-offering.

24 After this manner ye shall offer daily, throughout the seven days, the meat of the sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD: it shall be offered [u]besides the continual burnt-offering, and his drink-offering.

25 And on the [x]seventh day ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work.

26 ¶ Also [y]in the day of the first-fruits, when ye bring a new meat-offering unto the LORD, after your weeks be out, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work:

* The number "thirteen," most probably refers to the thirteen tribes, for thirteen, and not twelve, was the real number, Joseph having been doubled by Ephraim and Manasseh, and Levi excluded from the political census.—ED.

† In ver. 17, 20, 23, 26, 29, 32, the bullocks decrease by one each day. The meaning of such sacrificial peculiarities is sometimes revealed by Moses or explained by Paul; at other times, where neither give any explanation, we must have recourse to analogy, which, to a certain limited extent is a safe guide; and, at times, though the "vail of Moses" be taken from our face, we must yet acknowledge, that we "see as through a glass, darkly." In the present case, there is no small difficulty in giving any reason for this diminution, as the scripture is everywhere silent on the point. Still, it seems highly probable, that the bullock, as the emblem of labour, (Prov. 14. 4.) being the animal daily subtracted from the sacrifice, might be intended to remind the offerers, that every day of sacrifice to God was diminishing their amount of labour, and bringing them nearer to rest in God. Some have imagined the daily diminution in the sacrifice, to shadow forth the gradual disappearance of the Jewish dispensation, but there appears neither authority, nor emblematic analogy, by which this conjecture can be supported; though certain of the Jewish Rabbins consider it as pointing to the gradual diminution of the nations, until all shall have come under the rule of Messiah, and "there shall remain no more sacrifices but those of thanksgiving, prayer, and praise."—ED.

s Ch. 15. 3—12. Lev. ii. Deut. 12. 6. ver. 3, 4, 9, 10, 14, 15. Perhaps the gradual decrease of the bullocks denoted the gradual abolition of the ceremonies.

A. M. 2552. B. C. 1452.

* It is worthy of special remark, that in each of these feasts there is a peculiar sacrifice for the day, but to every day is inviolably retained "the continual burnt-offering." This is a most wise and admirable appendage, and originating from a deep insight into the human heart. Religious excitement, like every other excitement, has a continual tendency to engross the heart, and to render it negligent of ordinary duties. Therefore, both before and after these august and impressive ceremonials, the ordinary, the every-day business of religion is scrupulously enjoined even to the minutest particular. —Note. The little things of religion—if we so call any parts of religion—do not set us free from "the weightier matters;" neither do the greater things of religion supersede our attention to the little. † This is called "the great day of the feast," (John 7. 37.) yet the sacrifices were fewer than upon any other of the feast-days. This might well serve to teach the Israelites not to trust to the multitude of their sacrifices for pardon, peace, or other blessings, but to the one offering for atonement to which, since the days of Abel, the eye of faith had always been directed, Heb. 11. 4. The Jewish Rabbins affirm, that, upon this day, it was customary to draw water from the pool of Siloam, and to pour it, mixed with wine, upon the sacrifices. This custom is not intimated either by Moses or any of the prophets, though the Rabbins attempt to deduce it from Is. 12. 3. And it is not improbable that our Lord alluded to it, when he cried, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink;" thereby turning an unauthorized, pompous, and useless ceremony, into an occasion of calling the attention of the people to spiritual duties enjoined, and the spiritual privileges promised by God.—ED.

period of my time, in beholding him as my God-honouring, sin-expiating, peace and comfort-procuring sacrifice! let me always live on him, and to him; and bless the Lord that, these shadows being done away, he is set before us evidently as crucified in the gospel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—In these numerous and complex oblations, and their often repeated occasions, I remark the insufficiency of the Jewish ceremonies. Yet I cannot but behold and admire the one oblation of the Redeemer himself, so fully satisfying to justice, expiating sin, procuring peace, and purchasing life and comfort, for every believer. In virtue and usefulness so answerable to, but in glory so infinitely transcending, them all.—But, while I travel through such groups of typical feasts and oblations, let me, illuminated by gospel light, stop to behold in them the blessed new covenant of grace; let me view it in its gracious origin, glorious parties, wonderful construction, important parts, condition, and promise; its wise, effectual, and infinitely useful administration, and its delightful properties; as all my salvation, and all my desire! Here let me contemplate Jesus in his savoury and saving names, his wonderful natures, his glorious person as God-man, his endearing excellencies and qualifications, his saving offices of Mediator, Saviour, Redeemer, Prophet, Priest, and King, and his heart-captivating relations to God and men; let me consider his infinitely diversified, but necessary, states of humiliation and exaltation, his delightful labours of love in undertaking for us, assuming our nature, obeying and suffering in our stead, rising from the dead, ascending to glory, appearing in the presence of God as our advocate, and returning to judge the world, to complete and carry to the highest our eternal salvation;

CHAPTER XXX.

(1) Every vow was to be punctually fulfilled: 1, 2. (2) The vows of daughters under age are declared not binding, if at the time of hearing them they are disallowed by their father, 3—5; and the vows of wives, if in the same manner disallowed by their husbands: 6—16.

A. M. 2552. B. C. 1452.

AND Moses spake unto the [a] heads of the tribes concerning the children of Israel, saying, [b] This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded.

2 If a man [c] vow a vow unto the LORD,* or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not [†] break his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.

3 ¶ If a woman also vow a vow unto the LORD,[‡] and bind herself by a bond, being in her father's house in her youth;

4 And her father hear her vow, and her bond wherewith she hath bound her soul, and her father shall hold his peace at her: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she hath bound her soul shall stand.

5 But if [d] her father disallow her in the day that he heareth, not any of her vows, or of her bonds wherewith she hath [§] bound her soul, shall stand; and the LORD shall forgive her, because her father disallowed her.

6 ¶ And if she had at all an husband, when [‖] she vowed, or uttered ought out of her lips, wherewith she bound her soul;

7 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her in the day that he heard it; then her vows shall stand, and her bonds wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

8 But if her husband disallowed her on the day that he heard it; then he shall make her vow which she vowed, and that which she uttered with her lips, wherewith she bound her soul, of none effect: and the LORD shall forgive her.

9 ¶ [•] But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her.

10 And if she vowed in her husband's house, or bound her soul by a bond with an oath;

11 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her, and disallowed her not; then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

* From a reference to the foregoing chap. ver. 30, it will appear that the vows here intended are chiefly vows of things to be dedicated to God, as they are placed in contact with free-will-offerings, and sacrifices positively enjoined. In this case, the vow being found lawful, a man is bound, even were he a son in his father's house, provided the vow were of his own property.—ED.

‡ A daughter unmarried, and resident with her father, and a wife bound by the law of her husband, may have any vow set aside by the authority of the father or husband; provided it be disallowed so soon as discovered. But this is no dispensing power exercised by either. It is accompanied by no mental reservation; it is subject to no positive rule, or private, or unknown interpretation whereby it can be disannulled. It is a line marked out by God, previous to the vow, and beyond which the vow cannot pass. If it therefore fail in the word it is not violated in fact, for it was made under a condition that cannot be fulfilled, and therefore, falls to the ground, as if it had never been made.—ED.

d Is. 61. 8. Hos. 6. 6. Eph. 6. 1. & 5. 22, 25. If he did not disallow the vow on the day he first heard it, he was reckoned a consenter to it.

• Boothroyd translates it "his iniquity," which seems the true sense, for if the wife intended to fulfil the vow, and was prevented, she cannot be charged with iniquity; whereas, the husband is guilty by going beyond the authority conferred by the law of GOD.—ED.

12 But if her husband hath utterly made them void on the day he heard them; then whatsoever proceeded out of her lips concerning her vows, or concerning the bond of her soul, shall not stand: her husband hath made them void; and the LORD shall forgive her.

13 Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, [f] her husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void.

14 But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day; then he establisheth all her vows, or all her bonds, which are upon her: he confirmeth them, because he held his peace at her in the day that he heard them.

15 But if he shall any ways make them void after that he hath heard them; then he shall [g] bear her iniquity.*

16 These are the statutes which the LORD commanded Moses, between a man and his wife, between the father and his daughter, being yet in her youth in her father's house.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The history of the Israelites' sacred war with the Midianites. (1) At God's command a thousand men of war out of each tribe are mustered, and march under the command of Phinehas: 1—6. (2) By God's assistance they easily cut off most of the Midianites, but spare the women; for which Moses chides them on their return; and appoints all the women, except virgins, to be put to death: 7—18. (3) According to God's direction the warriors purify themselves before their return into the camp: 19—24. (4) The spoil is divided; half to the warriors, half to their brethren of the congregation; and a part of each share to the Lord: 25—47. (5) The officers in this expedition, finding that not one of their troops had been lost, devote a part of their share of the spoil for a thank-offering to the Lord: 48—54.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 [a] Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou [b] be gathered unto thy people.

3 And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and [c] avenge the LORD of Midian.

4 [•] Of every tribe a [d] thousand, throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war.

5 So there were delivered, out of the thousands of Israel, a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war.

6 And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and [•] Phinehas the son while I admire all his fulness, natural or communicative, as lodged in him for sinful men. Let me behold the ten commandments as a broken covenant of works fulfilled, magnified, and made honourable for me, in having the Lawgiver himself, its obedient subject, fulfilling at once both its precept and penalty in the highest degree, and in the most disadvantageous circumstances, amidst poverty, reproach, distress, persecution by men, temptation and harassment by devils, and under an infinite load of sins imputed, curses of God fixed, and wrath inflicted on him.—Thus all my sins, all the sins of an elect world, were transferred on the Son of God, satisfied for by him, removed from him and from us, in our respective justification, destroyed in us by sanctification, marvellously improved by Providence for our good, and their fruits shall be finally and perfectly abolished in our glorification. Thus a great and everlasting salvation was effected for sinful men,—for ME,—devised in God's ancient counsel of peace, purchased with the blood of his Son, freely offered in the gospel, powerfully applied by the Holy Ghost, and in time and eternity is enjoyed in full right of marriage, law, and sonship, and in the most delightful possession. Thus the spirituality, self-existence, infinity, eternity, unchangeableness, independency, sovereignty, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth, of the most High, the great JEHOVAH, are vindicated from all reproach, all the injury done to them by sin is fully resented, and themselves glorified to the highest; and in consequence hereof they all appear smiling and breathing forth unbounded love and mercy to sinful men,—to sinful me. Thus a redeeming Godhead in all his persons, perfections, purposes, works, fulness, and property, is offered to, bestowed on, enjoyed, and to be for ever enjoyed, by rebellious men, by rebellious me, as my ALL and in ALL.—Let me then observe, that my whole life, whether I fast, or whether I feast, whether I weep, or whether I rejoice, ought to be a life of faith on the Son of God, who loved me, and thus gave himself for me; and that, while I study to have as many solemn feasts on his death as I can, I ought never, morning or evening, to neglect the daily service of God in my closet and my family.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—In order to our more perfectly obeying what the Lord requires of us by his sovereign authority, it is often useful and necessary that we bind ourselves by new bonds of self-engagement: and the obligation of such engagements is solemn and awful, and therefore should be made with great deliberation; and care be taken that the fulfilment thereof no way interfere with of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and the trumpets to blow in his hand.[e]

7 And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and [f] they slew all the males.

8 And they slew [g] the kings of Midian, besides the rest of them that were slain, namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: [h] Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.

9 And the children of Israel took all the [i] women of Midian captives,[†] and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.

10 And they [k] burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.

11 And they took all [l] the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

12 And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil, unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

13 ¶ And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, [m] went forth to meet them without the camp.

14 And Moses was [n] wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the [‡] battle.

15 And Moses said unto them, [o] Have ye saved all the women alive?

16 Behold, [p] these caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the LORD in the matter of Peor, and there was a plague among the congregation of the LORD.

17 Now therefore [q] kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying [§] with him.

18 But [‖] all the women-children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves.

19 And [r] do ye abide without the camp seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day.

20 And [s] purify all your raiment, and all [*] that is made of skins, and all work of goats' hair, and all things made of wood.

21 ¶ And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war which went to the battle, This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD commanded Moses;

[e] In Josh. 6. 4, 6. we find the ark borne round Jericho, and seven priests following with trumpets. Hence it has been inferred that as Phinehas carried with him trumpets, "the holy instruments" must include the ark. It may have been that the ark was with Phinehas, but it will not follow from the passage quoted; for the priests at Jericho sounded the Shopheroth, or trumpets of jubilee, (Lev. 25. 9.) but Phinehas carried the chatsotseroth, or war trumpet, Num. 10. 3. The ark was again with the Hebrew army, 1 Sam. 4. 4, 5; but, ver. 7. it is acknowledged that its presence, upon such an occasion, was altogether unprecedented in former wars. In 1 Sam. 14. 18. the ark is called for by Saul, in the day of battle; but the Septuagint, and many high authorities, for ark read Ephod, which seems the more probable reading; so that the inference, that the ark was ordinarily carried with the Hebrew army, is much weakened. But in 2 Sam. 11. 11. the ark seems decidedly to have been in the camp in the days, and with the cognizance and approbation of David, and as David was a scrupulous observer of divine ordinances, we are disposed to join with those who conceive that Phinehas took the ark as one of the "holy instruments."—ED.

CHAPTER XXXII.

(1) The tribes of Reuben and Gad supplicate a settlement on the east of Jordan: 1—5. (2) Moses remonstrates against their request, as extremely unbrotherly and dangerous: 6—15. (3) They explain their proposals to the full satisfaction of Moses and their brethren: 16—32. (4) They and the half tribe of Manasseh have the kingdoms of Sihon and Og parted among them: 33—42.

A. M. 2552. B. C. 1452.

NOW the [a] children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a very great multitude of cattle: and when they saw the land of [b] Jazer, and the land of Gilead,[*] that, behold, [c] the place was a place for cattle;

2 The children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spake unto Moses and to Eleazar the priest, and unto the princes of the congregation, saying,

3 [d] Ataroth, and Dibon, and Jazer, and [e] Nimrah, and Heshbon, and Elealeh, and [f] Shebam, and Nebo, and [g] Beon,

4 [h] Even the country which the LORD smote before the congregation of Israel, is a land for cattle, and thy servants have cattle.

5 Wherefore, said they, if we have [i] found grace in thy sight, let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession, and [k] bring us not over Jordan.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, Shall your brethren go to war, and shall [i] ye sit here?

7 And wherefore [†] [m] discourage ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the LORD hath given them?

8 Thus did your fathers, when I sent them from Kadesh-barnea to see the land.

9 For [n] when they went up unto the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them.

10 And the [o] LORD's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying,

11 Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, [p] from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, because they have not [‡] wholly followed me;

12 Save [q] Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun: for they have wholly followed the LORD.

13 And the LORD's anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them [r] wander in the wilderness forty years, until all the generation that had done evil in the sight of the LORD was consumed.

* The particular geography of many cities and districts mentioned in scripture is often little more than conjectural. Still there are great landmarks, so to speak, by which the sacred historian can be followed. The text affords a striking example both of the conjectural and the known. Of the position and limits of the land of Jazer, for example, nothing more is accurately known than that it was somewhere in the neighbourhood of Gilead. But the land of Gilead is identified by means of the distinguished mountain range which has continued, since the days of Moses, so much an object of history that its locality cannot be mistaken, and its very name (now written Djelaad) continues nearly unaltered. The "land of Gilead" extended from Hermon, on the north (there called Bashan) to Nebo, both inclusive, on the south. Its beauty and fertility have been celebrated by modern travellers with an enthusiasm that well accounts for the anxiety of the Reubenites and Gadites to obtain possession, and for the jealousy of Moses lest the love of ease, and of the "pleasant land," should tempt them to forsake their brethren and provoke their God.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—Short-lived is success in sinning, and at last most dearly bought. Enticers to sin therefore ought to be held as our worst enemies, and treated accordingly: especially since God takes the greatest delight in comforting and honouring those who have been singularly zealous for his cause. And it is easy for him to accomplish great exploits, whether by many or by few. Our humane tenderness, carried to an excess, often spares our most dangerous enemies, and the most guilty criminals. But every thing, even in war, ought to be conducted with a sacred regard to religion, strict equity, and brotherly kindness; and the whole success thankfully ascribed to God. And after every action we have need to purify ourselves in Jesus' blood; as, even in the best, there is enough of sin to damn us, if God deal not with us according to his great mercy, and his Son's infinite atonement. Let then every enticement of my indwelling corruptions provoke my resentment against them, and animate me to put on the whole armour of God; that, directed by Jesus, my Captain of salvation, I may exert myself for their utter destruction. And, since the Lord and I have one common cause, let me, however weak, hope for certain victory. Let me never spare an enticing lust. And let him have the honour; and let the church and my own soul have the advantage of whatever spoil the Lord shall bring to my hand.

14 And, behold, ye are risen up in your fathers' stead, [z] an [a] increase of sinful men, to augment yet the fierce anger of the LORD toward Israel.

15 For if ye [b] turn away from after him, he will yet again leave them in the wilderness, and ye shall destroy all this people.

16 ¶ And they came near unto him, and said, [c] We will build sheepfolds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones:

17 But [x] we ourselves [†] will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place: and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities, because of the inhabitants of the land.

21 And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his enemies from before him,

22 And the land be subdued before the LORD; then afterward ye shall return, and be [a] guiltless before the LORD, and before Israel; and this land shall be your possession before the LORD.

23 But [b] if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the LORD: and be sure your sin will find you out.

24 Build you cities for your little ones, and folds for your sheep; and do that which hath proceeded out of your mouth.

25 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth.

26 Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead;

27 [c] But thy servants will pass over, every man armed for war, before the LORD to battle, as my lord saith.

28 So concerning them Moses commanded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel:

29 And Moses said unto them, If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle before the LORD, [d] and the land shall be subdued before you; then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession:

30 But if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

31 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do:

32 We will pass over armed before the LORD into the land of Canaan, that the possession of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be ours.

33 And [d] Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manasseh [†] the son of Joseph, [e] the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about.

34 ¶ And the children of Gad [‡] built [f] Dibon, [§] and Ataroth, and [g] Aroer,

35 And Atroth, Shophan, and [h] Jaazer, and Jogbehah,

36 And [i] Beth-nimrah, and Beth-haran, fenced cities; and folds for sheep.

37 And the children of Reuben built [k] Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Kirjathaim, 38 And Nebo, and Baal-meon, [‖] (their names being changed,) and Shibmah; and [‖] gave other names unto the cities which they builded.

39 And the children of [m] Machir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it.

40 And Moses gave [n] Gilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh; and he dwelt therein.

41 [o] And Jair the son of Manasseh went and took the small towns thereof, and called them Havoth-jair.

42 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

[z] Now, says the objector to the divine mission of Moses, if Moses was inspired why does he mistake the intentions of the Reubenites and Gadites, and accuse them of designs they deny having ever entertained? The answer is plain—the objector should first prove that they did not entertain the purpose that Moses deprecates. This proof the objector never can furnish; wherefore, further answer is unnecessary.—Ed.

The conquests of the sons of Manasseh in Gilead, as recorded, (ver. 40,) &c. afford, however, a better reason for the grant to them, than even that which was pleaded by their brethren, (see ver. 4.) and the validity of which was admitted by Moses, and evidently approved by the whole nation.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—The love of the world, and the pride of life, frequently hasten men in their earthly settlements. Though such, even in this world, often issue in early and frequent disasters; and it is a fearful symptom when the rising generation tread in their fathers' sinful steps, and grow worse and worse. How base is it to desire our own rest and ease, when God's people are in hardships and need our assistance! But how wise to improve past experiences, as means of preventing future iniquities. Yea, it is prudent to remove every monument of idolatry, lest it should entice us to offend. A holy indignation against sin, in whatever form it appears, is commendable and useful. But since the best of men often uncharitably mistake their neighbours' words or designs, and judge before they hear, it is therefore proper that every body be allowed to explain himself; that every article of our agreements be precisely stated, and fully understood, at the making of them, that there may be no disputing afterward; and that the strictest equity, and the tenderest affection, may be maintained among the people of God, who are all brethren in Christ Jesus.

2 And Moses wrote their goings out according to their [c] journeys by the commandment of the LORD: and these are their journeys according to their goings out.[*]

3 And they [d] departed from Rameses in the first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month: on the morrow after the passover the children of Israel went out [e] with an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians.

4 (For [f] the Egyptians buried all their firstborn, which the LORD had smitten among them: [g] upon their gods also the LORD executed judgments.)

5 And the children of Israel removed from Rameses, and pitched in Succoth.

6 And they [h] departed from Succoth, and pitched in Etham, which is in the edge of the wilderness.

7 And they [i] removed from Etham, and turned again unto Pi-hahiroth, which is before Baal-zephon: and they pitched before Migdol.

8 And they [k] departed from before Pihahiroth, and passed through the midst of the sea into the wilderness, and went three days' journey in the wilderness of Etham, and pitched in Marah.

9 And they [l] removed from Marah, and came unto Elim: and in Elim were twelve fountains of water, and threescore and ten palm-trees; and they pitched there.

10 And they removed from Elim, and encamped by the Red sea.

11 And they [m] removed from the Red sea, and encamped in the wilderness of Sin.

12 And they took their journey out of the wilderness of Sin, and encamped in Dophkah.

13 And they departed from Dophkah, and encamped in Alush.

14 And they removed from Alush, and encamped at [n] Rephidim, where was no water for the people to drink.

15 And they departed from Rephidim, and pitched in the [o] wilderness of Sinai.[†]

16 And they [p] removed from the desert of Sinai, and pitched at [‡] Kibroth-hattaavah.

17 And they departed from Kibroth-hattaavah, and [q] encamped at Hazeroth.

18 And they departed from Hazeroth, and [r] pitched in Rithmah.[§]

19 And they departed from Rithmah, and pitched at Rimmon-parez.

20 And they departed from Rimmon-parez, and pitched in Libnah.

21 And they removed from Libnah, and pitched at Rissah.

22 And they journeyed from Rissah, and pitched in Kehelathah.

23 And they went from Kehelathah, and pitched in mount Shapher.

24 And they removed from mount Shapher, and encamped in Haradah.

25 And they removed from Haradah, and pitched in Makheloth.

26 And they removed from Makheloth, and encamped at Tahath.

27 And they departed from Tahath, and pitched at Tarah.

28 And they removed from Tarah, and pitched in Mithcah.

29 And they went from Mithcah, and pitched in Hashmonah.

30 And they departed from Hashmonah, and encamped at Moseroth.

31 And they departed from Moseroth, and [s] pitched in Bene-jaakan.

32 And they removed from Bene-jaakan, and encamped at [t] Hor-hagidgad.

33 And they went from Hor-hagidgad, and pitched in Jotbathah.

34 And they removed from Jotbathah, and encamped at Ebronah.

35 And they departed from Ebronah, and encamped at [u] Ezion-gaber.

36 And they removed from Ezion-gaber, and pitched in the [x] wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh.

37 And they [y] removed from Kadesh, and pitched in mount Hor, in the edge of the land of Edom.

38 And [z] Aaron the priest went up into mount Hor at the commandment of the LORD, and died there, in the fortieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the first day of the fifth month.

39 And Aaron was an hundred and twenty and three years old when he died in mount Hor.

40 And [a] king Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, in the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel.

41 And they [b] departed from mount Hor, and pitched in Zalmonah.

42 And they departed from Zalmonah, and pitched in Punon.

43 And they [c] departed from Punon, and pitched in Oboth.

44 And they departed from Oboth, and pitched in [†] Ije-abarim, in the border of Moab.

45 And they departed from Iim, and pitched in Dibon-gad.

46 And they removed from [d] Dibon-gad, and encamped in Almon-diblathaim.

47 And they removed from Almon-diblathaim, and pitched in the mountains of Abarim, before Nebo.

CHAPTER XXXV.

(1) Forty-eight cities with their suburbs, and a field on each side of them, are appointed out of the portions of the twelve tribes for the Levites: 1—8. (2) Six cities are appointed for places of refuge to such as should accidentally and undesignedly kill their neighbour: 9—15, 22—28. But (3) Every wilful murderer is peremptorily appointed to be punished with death: 16—21, 29—34.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

2 [a] Command the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites, of the inheritance of their possession, cities to dwell in; and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them.

3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts.

4 [b] And the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward [*] a thousand cubits round about.

5 And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side [†] two thousand cubits, and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities.

6 And [c] among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be six cities for refuge, which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and [‡] to them ye shall add forty and two cities.

7 So all the cities which ye shall give to the Levites shall be [d] forty and eight cities: them shall ye give with their suburbs.

8 And the cities which ye shall give shall be [e] of the possession of the children of Israel: [f] from them that have many ye shall give many; but from them that have few ye shall give few: every one shall give of his cities unto the Levites according to his inheritance which [*] he inheriteth.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [g] When ye be come over Jordan into the land of Canaan,

11 Then [h] ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you; that the slayer may flee thither which killeth any person [†] at unawares.

12 And they shall be unto you cities for refuge [i] from the avenger; that the manslayer die not, until he stand before the congregation in judgment. [‡]

13 And of these cities which ye shall give: [k] six cities shall ye have for refuge.

14 Ye shall give three cities on this side Jordan, and three cities shall ye give in the land of Canaan, which shall be cities of refuge.

15 These six cities shall be a refuge, [l] both for the children of Israel, and for the stranger, and for the sojourner among them; [m] that every one that killeth any person unawares may flee thither.

16 [n] And if he smite him with an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

17 And if he smite him [§] with throwing a stone, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

18 Or if he smite him with an hand-weapon of wood, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

19 The [o] revenger of blood himself shall slay the murderer: when he meeteth him, he shall slay him.

20 But [p] if he thrust him of hatred, or hurl at him by laying of wait, that he die;

21 Or in enmity smite him with his hand, that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death; for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer when he meeteth him.

22 But if he thrust him suddenly [q] without enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait;

23 Or with any stone, wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and was not his enemy, neither sought his harm;

24 Then the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood, according to these judgments:

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled: and he shall [r]abide in it unto the death of the high priest, which was anointed with the holy oil.

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer; [*] [s]he shall not be guilty of blood:

28 Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest: but after the death of the high priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession.

29 So these things shall be for a [t] statute of judgment unto you, throughout your generations, in all your dwellings.

before the princes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel;

2 And they said, [b]The LORD commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel: and my lord was commanded by the LORD to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters.

3 And if they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe [*]whereunto they are received: so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance.

4 And when the jubilee of the children of Israel shall be, then [c] shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers.

5 ¶ And Moses commanded the children of Israel, according to the word of the LORD, saying, [d] The tribe of the sons of Joseph hath said well.

6 This is the thing which the LORD doth command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying, Let them [†] marry to whom they think best; [e] only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry:

7 So shall not the inheritance of the children of Israel remove from tribe to tribe: for every one of the children of Israel shall [f] keep himself to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers.

8 [g] And every daughter, [‡] that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers.

9 Neither shall the inheritance remove from one tribe to another tribe; but every one of the tribes of the children of Israel shall keep himself to his own inheritance.

10 ¶ Even [h] as the LORD commanded Moses, so did the daughters of Zelophehad:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXV.—What care God takes to arrange his ministers in the church and world, as best promotes the edification of his people! Often, for that purpose, as in the case of the Levites, he turns a curse into a blessing. At the same time it is his will that his ministers should be suitably provided for, that they may not be embarrassed with carnal care or labour: and to provide for a gospel minister ought to be the great care of every people. Such as minister to us in spiritual things have a right to reap our carnal things; and such as are engaged in gospel administrations should, as far as possible, disengage themselves from every worldly care. Never therefore should we receive worldly portions without devoting a part of them to the Lord, or the benefit of his church. How heinous is the guilt of hating and murdering our neighbours! And it is presumptuously wicked for such as are in power to permit wilful murder to pass without the due punishment of death. But if men sinfully indulge their escape, God's sword will in due time teach them. Yet, on the contrary, care ought to be taken that none be punished but upon sufficient examination and full proof; and that none be punished with death for any thing done contrary to his intention. But what a lively type of Jesus are these cities of refuge! What murder of God—of Christ—of our souls—of our neighbour—of time—of ordinances—of mercies and judgments—we commit ignorantly, and in unbelief! and if death overtake us loitering in our sins, we must perish in them! But Jesus, in his person, covenant, blood, power, and grace, is a safe and comfortable refuge set before us in the gospel. He is everywhere near to flee to; and the way to him is plain and clear. Strangers, Gentiles as well as Jews, have equal access to him. Him that cometh to him he will in no wise cast out; and in him we must abide for ever, that we may be safe.—But how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation!—if we sin wilfully, after we have received the knowledge of the truth!—if we tread under foot the Son of God—count the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, and do despite unto the Spirit of grace!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVI.—It is prudent to foresee difficulties, that we may avoid them: and in laws, covenants, and other affairs, to have every point so fixed that no disorder or dispute may arise in after-times. But let us remember, that it is most profitable to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways; for often he defers his directions till men perceive the necessity of them: and a ready obedience to his command and will, when known, yea, even to those of our superiors, is necessary and becoming. But, whatever power parents have in the marriage of children, none ought to be forced into marriage connexions contrary to their inclination.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES TO THE BOOK OF NUMBERS.

CHAP. II. Ver. 2. Moses does not inform us what the standard or ensign was: the Jewish Rabbis, however, who may sometimes be safely followed, inform us, that the ensign of Judah was a lion; of Ephraim an ox; of Reuben a man; and of Dan an eagle. This description is somewhat countenanced by the vision of the cherubim; (Ezek. 1. 10.) and still farther by the vision of the throne of God, Rev. 4. 7. Still, as the Scriptures are silent, we may not positively affirm, nor draw any doctrine from these alleged figures; but with certainty we may consider the standard and ensign as a prophetic emblem of "that day when there shall be a root of Jesse, who shall stand for an ensign of the people, (Is. 11. 10.) and of that gracious promise to his church still in the wilderness, that, "when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him," Is. 59. 19.——Ver. 3. From Gen. 17. 5., in the instance of Abram changed to Abraham, we learn the doctrinal and prophetic intent of Scripture names. This is farther illustrated, (Gen. 32. 28.) in the case of Jacob changed to Israel. It is applied in the name of Jesus, given to our Lord, (Mat. 1. 21, 23,) and is applied, in the case of Melchisedec, (Heb. 7. 1, 2.) which Paul interprets as descriptive of his office. It is therefore right to examine what religious truth, or practical duty, or prophetical encouragement, was couched in the names of the tribes and princes.—Judah, praise of the Lord. Nahshon, experience. Amminadab, my noble people. Issachar, price, reward. Nethaneel, the gift of God. Zuar, small. Zebulun, habitation. Eliab, God my father. Helon, a traveller. Reuben, vision of the son. Elizur, the rock is my God. Shedeur, light from the Almighty. Simeon, he that hears, obeys. Shelumiel, God is my reward. Zurishaddai, the Almighty is my rock. Gad, a band, armed, prepared. Eliasaph, my God that completes. Reuel, shepherd, friend of God. Ephraim, fruitful. Elishama, my God hath heard. Ammihud, people of praise. Manasseh, forgetfulness. Gamaliel, recompense of God. Pedahzur, saviour, strong, stone of redemption. Benjamin, son of the right hand. Abidan, father of judgment. Gideoni, cutting off iniquity. Dan, judgment. Ahiezer, the brother's help. Ammishaddai, people of the Almighty. Asher, blessedness. Pagiel, prayer of God. Ocran, disturber. Naphtali, that struggles. Ahira, my brother's friend. Enan, his eye. Levites, associated.

CHAP. III. Ver. 2. In a former note, (see ch. 2. ver. 3.) we have seen the Scripture authority for interpretation of names. In the names of the tribes, there was a national lesson, addressed to rulers; in that of the Levites, an ecclesiastical lesson, addressed to pastors and teachers. Aaron, teacher, mountain of strength.—Note. When Christ, in risen humanity, declared "all power is given to me," he immediately added, "go ye therefore, teach all nations," Mat. xxviii. The mountain strength of the church, lies in faithful teaching.—Nadab, prince, free gift. Abihu, he is my father. The first a title of dignity in the state, the second of productiveness and superiority in the family, yet, for want of attention to paternal teaching, both are cast down from their office and die childless. A warning to the teachers of others to "ask for the old paths"—the old paths, not of men inventing novelties, but of the Spirit speaking in the Scriptures. The teachers, and fathers, and foundation of the church, are the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the great teacher and chief corner-stone, Eph. 2. 20. Eleazar, help of God. Ithamar, wo to the change or to the palm. Two names that strikingly contrast with the two foregoing, and teach church rulers where their "great strength lies," neither in "princes nor in the son of man," (Ps. 146. 3.) but in the help of God, and an humble, faithful testimony and adherence to the unchanging principles of Scripture truth. Gershon, change of pilgrimage. Libni, whiteness. Shimei, that hears. Kohath, congregation. Amram, exalted people. Izhar, that shines. Hebron, society, friendship. Uzziel, strength of God. Merari, bitter. Mahli, my song. Mushi, he that withdraws. Eliasaph, my God completes. Lael, with or for God. Elizaphan, my God that hides. Zuriel, God my rock. Abihail, father of strength.——Ver. 39. This is one of the chief "perplexities" of the book of Numbers, inasmuch as the sum total does not agree with the items. The Gershonites were numbered 7,500, the Kohathites 8,600, the Merarites 6,200, total 22,300. To account for this discrepancy, Houbigant supposes an error to have crept into the text of ver. 28, which Kennicot transfers to ver. 22. Either supposition would rectify the accounts, but such summary and unsupported suppositions of error are to be examined with great jealousy, and never to be received without high MS. authority: this is here totally wanting. Let us therefore seek the solution of the perplexity in the law. (1) In this narrative, (ver. 6.) the tribe of Levi was to be brought near, a phrase in the original, admitted to signify sacrificial offering. See ch. 8. 6—22. (2) In ver. 14, 16. Moses alone enumerates the tribe, and gives the absolute sum total. (3) In ver. 39. we have a new account of "all that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the Lord." Now Aaron is not omitted in the one case, nor conjoined in the other, without good cause. (4) We inquire in the law what this cause may be, and whence arose this arithmetical imperfection? Not, we apprehend, from any imaginary error either in the detail or summing up, but from legal impurities disqualifying from being offered to God. These might arise, in children, from touching their mother during the forty days of her separation, (Lev. 12. 2, 4. comp. with 15. 19, 26, 27.) in adults from any similar legal impurity, ch. 22. 2. (5) It is now almost superfluous to add, that as every offering must be "without blemish," this typical requirement applied to the Levites, would produce the typical imperfection of their numbers when examined by Aaron, before being "brought near," or offered to the Lord, for redemption of the first-born of the tribes, a view which is in strict accordance with the words of the apostle, "the law made nothing perfect," Heb. 7. 19.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 3. The work of the Levites.—Without considering their sacrificial labours, the charge of the tabernacle must have been very onerous. In its erection upwards of 14 tons of metal was employed; add to this, the pillars, boards, curtains, cords and pins of the tent, skin coverings, &c. which the Gershonites and Merarites must take down and carry, (Num. 4. 24, 31, 32.) or laid on the six dedicated waggons, (ch. 7. 7, 8.) and set up again at the next encampment; whilst the sanctuary, with all its furniture, must be carried on the shoulders of the Kohathites, without any derivative assistance. ——Ver. 15. A lesson, not merely by precept but by positive institution, prescribing and exemplifying the great limiting boundary, of all sacred study: "the secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but these things (and these only) which are revealed, belong unto us and to our children for ever," Deut. 29. 29. By the prohibition of touching, (ver. 15,) or seeing, (ver. 20.) it was not the intention of Moses, either to undervalue or degrade the Kohathites, but to teach that real honour lies neither in office nor privilege, but in fulfilling the part to which providence has appointed us.—If Christ, though "a son over his own house," (Heb. 3. 6.) "yet took upon him the form of a servant, and learned obedience by the things which he suffered," (Heb. 5. 8.) how much more should we beware of "thinking of ourselves more highly than we ought to think," (Rom. 12. 3.) and how anxious to learn that happy lesson, "in whatever state we are therewith to be content," Phil. 4. 11.

CHAP. V. Ver. 4. If "the heavens are not clean in God's sight, how much more abominable and filthy is man?" Job 15. 15, 16. Truly our bodies are pronounced "vile bodies," (Phil. 3. 21.) for into the blood of youth, and health, and loveliness, the serpent poison is infused, and in ever-varying forms of loathsome disease, it is carrying on the work of death. Disease and death are at once the works, and the wages, and the emblems of sin; therefore, as "evil cannot dwell with God," (Ps. 5. 4.) neither may visible and infectious disease be permitted to abide in the camp, where his visible and holy presence is fixed. In every point of view, this exclusion of certain diseases from the camp is an admirable institution. (1) As a measure of precaution against the spreading of infection. (2) As a measure of cleanliness and decency, where the tents frequently consisted but of one apartment, seldom of more than two. (3) As conducive to the greater comfort of the sufferers, who were removed from the noise and bustle of the camp. (4) As economising the priest's labour of attendance, and securing practised, and skilful sick-nurses, in concentrated and permanent hospitals. (5) As facilitating access to milk and vegetables, so essential as natural agents, in the cure of many cutaneous complaints of the leprous form. (6) As an emblem of known and visible sin, and of that discrimination of discipline, and pure communion after which the church of Christ should constantly labour, 1 Cor 5. 1—13.——Ver. 29. This law is founded upon three principles. (1) Confidence in the miraculous interposition of providence, when appealed to in a manner not invented by the fancy or presumption of man; but distinctly prescribed by God himself. (2) That the accuser must not act upon light surmise, but be so far convinced that he testifies his belief in the necessity of the appeal to God, ver. 30. (3) On the power of conscience in the case of an oath, rightly and solemnly administered: the whole law being merely a special example of God's speedy and terrible judgment against every form of perjury, Zech. 5. 3, 4. Mal. 3. 5. That no case of an appeal to this law is upon record, may be accounted for on two grounds. (1) That this appeal could not be made, but in the absence of all other proof: a case that could very seldom occur. (2) Because of the facility of divorce which Moses suffered the Jews to enjoy, 'for the hardness of their hearts' a facility which was at once their privilege and their punishment, Deut. 24. 1. Matt. 19. 8.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 8. The law of the Nazarite during his vow, included five things. (1) Abstinence from all excitement in drink or food, the two means of living, ver 3, 4. (2) From all cutting of the hair, (ver. 5.) in which was life without feeling, weakness made strength, Judg. 16. 17. 2 Cor. 12. 9. (3) In separation from the dead, (ver. 6—9.) even where kindred was nearest. (4) Sacrifice, even for the most unexpected and involuntary breach of vow, ver. 9. (5) The loss of past time, and its necessary recommencement, in case of any infringement of the vow, ver. 12. (6) Sacrifice after his vow has been legally fulfilled. In every point of this law, the necessity of holiness, and the utter unprofitableness of our best services is plainly and explicitly set forth, Luke 17. 10. The whole law is a beautiful and expressive type of Christ, who was "separate from sinners,"—who really paid his vow, (Heb. 10. 5—7.) and offered himself the sacrifice that perfects for ever them that are sanctified, Heb. 10. 10.——Ver. 21. Besides the product of his industry during the time of his separation from the world and dedication to God.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 86. The silver chargers and bowls weigh 2,400 shekels, which, at 5*s.* per. oz., amounts to £388 1*s.* 8½*d.*; the twelve golden spoons, weighing 120 shekels, and estimated at £4 per oz., would make £320 14*s.* 10½*d.*, without calculating workmanship, which might vary according to the figuring and finish, from £50, to £200, or even £300, per cent.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 5. After the first celebration in Egypt, the original ordinance had reference to the land of Canaan. See Exod. 12. 25. Here is a special direction for its observance in the wilderness, so that the chain of memorial might be complete.—Note. The people observe the ordinance when Moses speaks in the name of the Lord. See how much the observance of religious ordinances, such as the private reading and public hearing of the word; closet and family prayer; and attendance on the communion, depend on the faithful instruction and warning of ministers. Many neglect, or withdraw from public religious ordinances, when in trouble; this is contrary to God's direction. Israel must observe the passover, even in the wilderness; and trouble is the time when we need God most, and he promises most, Job 5. 19. Psal. 91. 15. Is. 41. 10.

CHAP. X. Ver. 5. The word trumpet, in ver. 4., is supplied by the translators; and, as the word translated alarm in ver. 5., means a broken quavering sound, so the word supplied in the former verse should rather be one uniform sound, as distinguished from the broken character of the alarm.—Note. The gospel trumpet has a special sound for every rank, and for every purpose; whether assembly, journey, warfare, or triumph, ver. 4, 5, 9, 10: but he that blows it must give no "uncertain sound:" (1 Cor. 14. 8.) and must so declare the "whole counsel of God," as to be "pure from the blood of all men," Acts 20. 26.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 10. This unmanly, this childish "weeping" of Israel was addressed, not to God in prayer, but to Moses, (ver. 13.) in unreasonable petition, or ungrateful reproach; therefore God's anger is "greatly kindled." But there are those who are offended when anger is ascribed to God: and why? because the anger of sinful men is often unreasonable, without cause, violent, unjust, and destructive—must therefore the anger of a holy God be necessarily of the same character? To deny that God is angry with sin and sinners, because human anger is generally evil, were just as unreasonable as to deny that "God is love:" because human affections are often commingled with impurity.——Ver. 15. Moses, however provoked and displeased, (ver. 10.) does not rebel against providence; when he prays for death as a "favour:" the pressure of his "wretchedness" produces no murmuring against God, but a desire to depart and be with Christ;" (Phil. 1. 23, 24. Ps. 55. 6. 2 Cor. 5. 2, 4.) yet a willingness, at God's command, still "to abide in the flesh, as more needful" for the people.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. Or Cushite—Cush was the son of Ham, (Gen. 10. 6.) and father of Nimrod, who founded the first great empire: and this wife is supposed to give offence as a descendant of Ham—whereas Zipporah, who is generally supposed to be now dead, is considered as a descendant of Midian the son of Abraham by Keturah, Gen. 25. 2. But from Exod. 18. 5, 6., it appears that Zipporah had been brought to the camp, at most, a very short time before this event; and, as there is no mention of her sudden death, an occurrence not likely to be overlooked, so there is no reason to suppose that Moses had married another wife; but that the offence is taken at Zipporah's real, or imaginary influence with her husband. Ethiopia, as a geographical term, is one of very indefinite and general application in Scripture, unquestionably extending both to Asia and Africa, Gen. 2. 13. Ezek. 30. 5. and 38. 5. But if the name Ethiopian, or Cushite, be taken, not from the country, but the lineage of the woman, Moses had violated no law by his marriage: as God's prohibition on that head extended only to the Canaanites, Deut. 7. 3.——Ver. 3. These words, as so highly commendatory of Moses, are by some supposed an addition of Ezra, or some other inspired writer: but why indulge suppositions without evidence? The word translated meek may be justly rendered broken, afflicted, in which sense it would be an accurate description of his condition with his relatives and the whole people. But taking the word meek as descriptive of placidity of temper, there is no offence against modesty: because there is no offence against truth.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 4. It appears from Neh. 9. 17., that they actually appointed a captain to lead them back to slavery!——Ver. 5. Falling on the face was a customary act, either of worship to God, or obedience to man, Gen. 17. 3. Rev. 11. 16. Gen. 50. 18. The act of Moses and Aaron is expressive of profound respect for their brethren; which, in such a case, nothing but divine love could have produced—and of earnest entreaty to avert their foolish and wicked resolution of returning to slavery.—Note. Those who would benefit men, must bear with their caprice and ingratitude; and entreat, when they should reprove or command.——Ver. 39. Mourning is good or evil, according to its fountain and object. Springing from a due sense of sin, and apprehension of mercy, it is "godly sorrow working repentance to salvation," but springing from a mere sense of disapointment or loss, it is "of the world, and worketh death," 2 Cor. 7. 10.——Ver. 40. The strange resolution to evade or frustrate a threatening by pleading a promise, is not peculiar to rebellious Israel—there are thousands that continue in sin, because they hope for mercy.——For we have sinned—that is, in appointing a captain to return to slavery, Neh. 9. 17.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 38. Fringes, called in the New Testament the "hem or border of the garment," Matt. 9. 20. and 23. 5. Being many, in separate detail, yet united in one garment: the fringes were the emblems or memorials of many commandments united in one law. The ribband, lace, or rather thread of blue, surrounding or pervading the whole, represented the one principle of the law—the unchanging love of God. And being the chief priestly colour—for the robe of the ephod was all of blue, (Exod. 28. 31)—it reminded every believer that he was a priest of God, and bound to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ, 1 Pet. 2. 5.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 3. To mistake or substitute privileges for godliness, is one of the commonest instances of self-righteousness and self-deception, Jer. 7. 4. God was no doubt among them, as a worker of many wonders: but he was not in them, as renewing them after his own image, Col. 3. 10.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 6. There were originally but twelve tribes, but when Joseph was increased into Ephraim and Manasseh (Gen. 48. 17.) they became thirteen; afterwards when the tribe of Levi, instead of being numbered for war, was chosen of God for his service: instead of the first-born of every tribe, (Num. 1. 47. & 3. 41.) the tribes were again reckoned as twelve, Levi ceasing to be counted. As in this narrative "every one of their princes gave him a rod apiece, and the rod of Aaron was among them:" there were in all, thirteen rods.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 19. Salt was absolutely required in every offering, (Lev. 2. 13.) and from its power of preserving dead flesh from putrefaction, so that it might be offered "of a sweet savour" to the Lord, it became an impressive emblem of the incorruptibility of God's covenant, and the perpetuity of man's obligation. This emblematical use of salt, seems to have passed by tradition into the manners of the Arabs, and some other oriental nations—with any of whom, should even an enemy have eaten salt, the person with whom he has so eaten is bound to become for the occasion, his friend and protector.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 9. So Joseph of Arimathea, who was "clean or innocent of any part in the death of our Lord, (Luke 23. 51.) a "good and a just man," because he lived by faith in the Son of God, (Rom. 1. 17.) took down the body of Jesus, wrapped it in linen, and laid it in the sepulchre.——Ver. 11. Whilst some, by the necessity of removal, and others by the impulse of affection, are compelled to touch the dead, it should never be forgotten that death entered by sin, (Rom. 5. 12.) and that the very touch of sin pollutes in the sight of a holy God, Col. 2. 21.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1. This was in the first month of the fortieth year after the departure from Egypt, comp. ch. 33. 38. with ver. 28 of this chapter, and Deut. 1. 3. The intermediate thirty-seven years Moses passes over in silence. The reason of this silence may be collected thus:—Moses wrote, not for curiosity, that he might satisfy it; nor for national vanity, that he might flatter it: but for God, that he might glorify him; and for man, that he might instruct him. Moses wrote, as the historian of providence and redemption; by the one to show how the world is governed, how sin is restrained, overruled, and punished; by the other, how mercy is exhibited, sin pardoned, and holiness established.——Ver. 12. The sin of Moses and Aaron is recorded, but not particularized, unless in so far as it may be inferred from the narrative. Amongst the internal evidences of the divine mission of Moses, we must rank the unparalleled candour with which he records his sin and his punishment. No hypocrite, imposing upon others—no enthusiast, imposing upon himself, has ever recorded or admitted his own errors. The deceiving hypocrite cannot afford to let in the light. The self-deceived enthusiast has not discovered his own darkness. The sin of Moses seems to have consisted, (1) In angrily and provokingly calling the people "rebels." (2) In going beyond the divine command, (ver. 8.) merely to "speak unto the rock," and smitting it twice, either in anger or unbelief, or both. (3) In strange and unaccountable unbelief in the promise of God, of which he had had so many trials. (4) In the expression, "must WE fetch water," he seems to attribute the miracle to himself and Aaron, rather than to God. Lord! what is man! Moses thy servant, meekest of men, is chafed into unseasonable anger, and he that talked with thee face to face, has fallen under thy deserved displeasure! "Let us fear, therefore, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of us should seem to come short of it." Heb. 4. 1.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1. The word translated "spies" is in the Syriac and other ancient versions, rendered "places." The Septuagint and other authorities consider it a proper name, and render it, "the way of Atharim." There seems, however, no good reason for departing from our English version. For if, contrary to the ordinary opinion of geographers, it be incorrect, an opinion, be it observed, of no more than conjectural authority, and if Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea, be but two names for one place, (see note ch. 20.) then Israel, now at Kadesh, would naturally enter Canaan "by the way of the spies."——Ver. 9. It signifies such a pole as was the banner-staff of the tribes, to which they were accustomed to look in decamping and marching.——He lived.—The sending of the serpents was an acknowledged judgment, the cure an evident miracle. There seems no good reason for denying the serpent to be a type of Christ, (John 3. 14.) on the alleged ground of its being a name of Satan. Christ was made sin and a curse for us, (2 Cor. 5. 21. Gal. 3. 13.) and appeared, not a sinner, yet in the very "likeness of sinful flesh," Rom. 8. 3. The sight of this serpent healed—so, says our Lord, "Look unto me, and be ye saved." Is. 45. 22. Heb. 12. 2.——Ver. 14. Book or narrative. There is no necessity for translating it book, and then conjecturing whether the passage be a quotation from a Moabitish poem, or Mosaic book of directions to Joshua, and now lost.——Wars of the Lord, that is, wars directed by his providence and word, for punishment of wicked nations.——Red sea, or as some think "at Suph" which they suppose the name of a place in the neighbourhood. Does it not more likely mean the Red sea as in the text, and particularize it as the place where the wars of the Lord began, and closing with Pisgah, from which Moses viewed the full extent of the promised land?——Ver. 16, 18. They went, is supplied by the translators. The correctness of the insertion is questionable, as the passage seems rather to commemorate the progress of the wars of the Lord, than the journeyings of Israel. The words, "by direction of the Lawgiver with their staves," are rendered by some high authorities, "by a decree upon their borders." The authorized version is, however, admitted to be literal; and the mention of staves perfectly intelligible, as intimating the providential ease with which the work of digging was accomplished, and abundance of water obtained.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 4. Midian in which Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses was priest, was situated near Horeb. How then do the Moabites, who lay at a great distance to the north, enter into consultation with the Midianitish elders?

Digitized by Google

Some think there were two Midians, and it may have been so. But as Moses gives no note of distinction, this opinion does not seem probable. Those who reflect in how many parts of the world the British people are settled, will easily comprehend how the Midianites may have had possessions both at Horeb and in Moab. Nor are we to be surprised at the special consultation with the Midianites. The history of Jethro sufficiently testifies his political sagacity, (Exod. 18. 10—12, 14, 29.) and it is by no means improbable that his kindred in Moab may have been distinguished by similar qualities.——Ver. 30. The miracle of the ass has been a subject of perplexity to believers, and of banter, ridicule, and reproach to infidels. There is room for neither, unless the believer admit, or the infidel assert, a limit to omnipotence. This, we know, the believer will not, and we think the infidel, dare not. The narrative, therefore, rests upon the unimpeachable credibility of Moses as a man of God, the miraculous attestation to his divine commission which God so constantly and publicly afforded, and those unfulfilled, but progressive prophecies, which like a stream of living water, is flowing, in these latter days, as pure and abundant from the fountain of truth, as in the morning when the Spirit of the Lord taught Moses to send it forth.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 23. That ignorance and superstition may coexist with the profession, though not with the light and power of true religion, is a well known and melancholy fact. Ignorance and superstition are always prone to seek and to expect to accomplish their ends by some mysterious charm of their own invention, or derived from dark tradition. Such seems the state of Balaam, professing, and to a certain extent, uttering and obeying the truth, but ignorantly and superstitiously superadding a belief in enchantments, and seeking by repeated experiments to render them efficacious against Israel.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. Superstitious confidence in the repetition of a few words was common amongst the heathen, and constituted the principal part of their prayers, Matt. 6. 7. The Jews, in times of their ignorance, entertained, and many of them do still entertain a similar belief; hence they have as ignorantly, as superstitiously and falsely, accused our Lord of stealing the Tetragrammaton, or mysterious name of JEHOVAH out of the temple, and working his miracles by its repetition. Many have seen, even in professing Christian countries, a few words from the New Testament, or from some vain tradition, written on parchment or paper, and hung around the neck or on the shoulders for the cure of diseases. Such superstitious belief seems to have influenced Balaam, until having now made three experiments by sacrifice, he is compelled to give up the vain attempt at enchantment.——Ver. 7. Agag was king of the Amalekites, (1 Sam. 15. 8.) and it is probable it was the hereditary title of the monarchs of this people. For Israel to be higher than Agag, is to have power over the most inveterate of their enemies.——Ver. 8. The animal meant is uncertain—the rhinoceros, such as was seen by Campbell in south Africa, the head of which is lodged in the museum of the Missionary Society of London, seems to answer best both to the name unicorn, and to mighty strength: which is described as his distinguishing attribute.——Ver. 24. Eber is generally supposed to have given name to the Hebrews, though some eminent authorities assign a different etymology. It appears from Gen. 10. 25., that he had two distinguished sons, who became the heads of many distinguished tribes; for "he also," Boothroyd reads "they also," viz.: the Assyrian land force, and the naval power of Chittim, shall perish for ever. The Assyrian monarchy has already perished, so likewise have the Greek and Roman powers by which Eber (the Jews) was "afflicted."

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 9. Moses reckons them at 24,000, Paul (1 Cor. 10. 8.) at 23,000: is not this a contradiction? No! Moses speaks of all who died, both during the plague and the continuance of the trials and judicial executions; Paul of those who died by the plague "in one day."——Ver. 17. The assertion that the spirit of this Mosaic commandment is opposite to the Christian precept of "loving our enemies," is founded either in inexcusable inattention, ignorance, or perversity. To vex a wicked man by opposing, thwarting, exposing, and disappointing him, is no breach of charity: but an exercise of it in favour of his victims. To "smite" the seducer of innocence, the demoralizer of youth, is so far from being contrary to love, that it is frequently a merciful exercise of it, even towards the guilty whom it serves to arrest in his career of evil.

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 1. It is remarkable that Moses does not refer back to these commands as already given, but proceeds to deliver them as if promulgated for the first time: the reason is obvious—Moses not only means to show the things to be observed, but to exemplify God's method of teaching; which, like all other teaching, consists largely of repetition. See John 14. 26. It is also worthy of remark that the book of Leviticus is generally delivered as a directory how the ordinance is to be observed; here we have a positive command that it must be observed in due season. The phrase, due season, renders it probable that during the journeyings in the wilderness, religious ordinances had been greatly neglected; indeed there is a constant tendency, even in spiritual men, to "weary in well doing," and many an admonition and promise do they require to persuade them—that in due season they shall reap if they faint not, Gal. 6. 9.—Note. Regularity in closet and family worship is a necessary monitor and adjuvant to piety, and furnishes a most important and practical test in self-examination.

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 7.—The afflicting of the soul on the tenth day, and the offering of ten animals, seems here a memorial, not merely of protection and deliverance, as in the former case, but a recognition of the ten commandments the Israelites had covenanted to observe, yet perfidiously violated; and which violation they here sacrificially acknowledge with sorrow and humiliation.——Ver. 39. The annual sacrifices enjoined at the public charge were, according to these chapters of repetition: goats 15; kids 21; rams 72; bullocks 132; lambs 1101: in all, 1241. In addition there were vast numbers of sin, trespass, and peace-offerings, by individuals; together with the astonishing number of lambs offered at the passover. When Cestius, the Roman governor, sought the number of visitants at Jerusalem, the priests answered, that the lambs killed were 256,500.

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 2. This is one of the passages against which infidelity has uttered its fellest and fiercest assaults. We may not pollute the page, nor the reader's eye with its foul speeches. But we may ask the infidel, Do you believe God to be the moral Lawgiver and Ruler of the world? If you deny, we cease to argue with the madness of atheism. But if God be acknowledged as the Lawgiver, and Ruler, then has he not a right to enforce his own laws by appropriate penalties? Nature, as it is called, though surely nature is but another name for the will, laws and government of God, nature has often swept away by earthquake, pestilence, or famine, her tens and hundreds of thousands; yet surely nature has not been arraigned for the deed! Why then should God be arraigned at the bar of a proud and unholy infidelity for punishing a wicked people by the hand of man? No sane man will accuse God, under the name of nature, in the one case, and none but a hopeless infidel will accuse him under his real name on the other.——Ver. 5. The muster of the army, upon this occasion, seems to be neither in proportion to the population of the tribes, nor the military exigency of the case. That each tribe, however, comparatively weak, should be required to furnish a military contingent as numerous as the strongest, would to human wisdom seem unreasonable. But divine wisdom intends by this apparent disproportion, to teach some great and important lessons. (1) That every man, and every community, is to furnish for God's service, all that God requires, according as his providence bestows, without any relative comparison of what means others have, what sacrifices others make, or what service they render, or may be able to render to God and his cause. (2) This equality of draught from unequal numbers, is farther intended to inculcate the important lesson, that all real honour is derived from devotedness and zeal in the cause of God and his truth, and therefore, it was necessary that every tribe should have an equal opportunity of exhibiting those qualities and securing those honours. See John 12. 26.—Note. What an admonition does this equality of array suggest to churches! Some are few in number, and poor in worldly resources, but as God requires every one of his tribes to send its thousand to the war, so does he require each of his churches to make equal sacrifices to provide for his service, and equal exertions to bear witness to his truth. And true it is, for our encouragement, there are churches whose fewness in number, and poverty of means, have neither damped exertion, nor denied success.——Ver. 7. Not all the males of the whole nation, as appears from Judg. 6. 7. but of the "garrisons of the cities and castles," (ver. 10.) by whom and their accomplices they had formerly been seduced, (ver. 16.) and were now opposed. And these the Lord commanded them to slay for sins, that when individualized still continue in these countries to be punished with death, and which instead of being diminished in atrocity by being nationalized, as was the case with the Canaanites and Midianites, became by their universality, the more abominable in the sight of a holy God. See the horrible catalogue, Lev. 18. 21—27, and the sentence of the righteous judge, ver. 24—30.——Ver. 14. From the omission of any reference to Joshua as general, and the rebuke given indiscriminately to all the captains, it seems certain that the army had no commander-in-chief, but that each tribe had sent forth its own quota under their own leaders. This avoided all suspicion of favouritism, and removed every cause of jealousy, until circumstances required still greater concentration of counsel, and the character of Joshua, as a leader, had earned for him an indisputable claim to the first rank.——Ver. 17. Every male. The killing of "every male among the little ones," has been censured by infidels as an act of cruelty unworthy the character of a merciful God. That children, however, die in infancy, infidels cannot deny, and if that death takes place by God's will, wherein does it differ from the death here inflicted by God's command? If it be replied, the ordinary death of children is natural. The answer is easy: what in this case is nature but the result of certain organic laws? and what are organic laws, but the result of God's will? So that we arrive in spite of infidelity, at the point of God's will in the one case, and command in the other. If the infidel deny that death is the result of God's will, then he becomes an atheist, with whom it is generally vain to argue; for he who is mad enough to deny the being and government of a God, is certainly not sane enough to comprehend any rational argument. See Ps. 14. 1. The infidel who in this case accuses the "God of the Jews," accuses, at the same time, the "God of nature," whom infidels, in general, pretend to acknowledge and worship, and whom, therefore, even upon their own principles, they dare not openly condemn. The sentence against the males, is against the perpetuation of a wicked community; the sentence against the women, is in condemnation of lewdness, seduction and idolatry.——Ver. 18. The assertion that Moses, in this verse, permitted the people to retain the "women children" for concubines, is one of the most monstrous that frontless infidelity has ever had the hardihood to pronounce. For, not to speak of other parts of the law already promulgated, (as Exod. 20. 14. Lev. 19. 20.) the restrictions (Deut. 21. 11—14.) will sufficiently demonstrate that the direction in the text was merely a permission to hold them as bond-women, a class who were amply protected against every form of oppression, and endowed with many privileges, for which see note on Lev. 25. 46.——Ver. 20. The Jews were a brave, but never a warlike nation. Their bravery, in times of danger, arose from their doctrine of providence, and love of family and country; their unwarlike disposition, from their religious institutions, (as in the text) that never represented war, or aggression, or conquest, as glory, but rather as pollution contracted by the dire necessity of self-defence, or punishment of crimes committed against God and man.

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 37. The situation of Heshbon is fixed by Eusebius at twenty miles east of Jordan, and is described "over against Jericho," which place is still familiarly known to travellers. Besides these notes of identification, it is still in being, though in ruins, and bears its ancient name, merely transformed by pronunciation into Hesban.——Elealeh is described by Eusebius as situated a mile from Heshbon. It is now called El Aal, which in Arabic signifies "the high," which corresponds to its meaning in the Hebrew.——Kirjathaim continued a place of importance till the fourth century of our era, but amidst the ruins of Moab, is not now to be distinguished.——Nebo and Baalmeon are totally unknown.

CHAP. XXXIV. Ver. 3. The map commences at the south, because that was the quarter with which the Hebrews were best acquainted, as lying next

Digitized by Google

Egypt. South quarter, that is, south extremity eastward, before the line turns northwards.——Coast of the salt sea, that is, point of the Dead sea, called salt, because it is salter than other seas. So great is the quantity of salt in solution in its water, that bodies float in it that sink in any other water. By Salt sea eastward, some geographers understand Ezion-gaber, on the Red sea, and draw the southern line thence to the eastern or Pelusic branch of the Nile; but ver. 12. seems to fix the name Salt sea to the Dead sea, into which Jordan empties itself.——Ver. 4. A trifling and well authorized change in the translation by Boothroyd, completely reconciles this description with the geographical features of the country, and with history. "Your south border shall wind to the ascent of Akrabbim, and pass on to Zin, and thence extending to the south of Kadesh-barnea, and from Azmon the boundary shall wind about to the river of Egypt."——Ver. 17. This was a narrow territory when considered as a gift from God. But its very narrowness marks his wisdom as well as his goodness. God intends to make his people his witnesses to the world, and their narrow territory forces them to do their duty abroad; while their religious institutions are ever recalling them home. Besides, it is a gross mistake that the greatness of a nation depends upon its extent of territory. The most distinguished nations, both in ancient and modern times, have been cooped up in narrow territorial limits. And be it remembered, the great drama of providence, in which Israel still acts so conspicuous a part, is not yet closed. He was a Jew, according to the flesh, who will yet claim "the heathen for his inheritance, and the utmost ends of the earth for a possession."

CHAP. XXXV. Ver. 4. The Septuagint reads "two thousand cubits" both in the 4th and 5th verses; but the Hebrew MSS. are decidedly in favour of the present reading: how then are these two accounts of measure to be reconciled? Thus—the measure of 1000 cubits (ver. 4.) is from the wall: the measure of 2000 cubits (ver. 5.) is not from the wall, but from the city itself: the first 1000 cubits constituting the suburbs of the wall, a part which in the neighbourhood of walled cities is often occupied by houses; the second 2000 cubits constituting what is called the field of the suburbs, (Lev. 25. 34.) and appropriated to agriculture and cattle. The extent of the walls is not given, but the land thus measured would form a square of about three quarters of a mile, in every direction from the walls; a very small concession, when the cities thus appropriated were in all but 48, (Josh. 21. 41.) when it is remembered that the Levites are estimated at 46,000 males and females, (Lev. 26. 62.) a number that must be greatly increased by the requisite servants. Still more distinct will this moderation appear, when it is remembered that the Levites never had exclusive possession of these cities, but held them in common with the tribes amongst whom they resided; and what superiority in the possession of the whole city and district, the secular tribes conceded to the Levites, beyond their individual occupancy, does not appear: comp. Josh. 21. 17. with Judg. 19. 15, 16. and Josh. 21. 13. with 2 Sam. 5. 5.—Note. Amongst the incidental evidences of the divine mission of Moses, must be reckoned, (1) this extreme moderation in providing for his own tribe. (2) The ready acquiescence of the Levites to be literally disinherited, and allowed little more than a lodging place, where their brethren were so richly endowed: had either been impostors, they must have acted on worldly motives; and worldly motives have never yet produced self-denial, when there was power and opportunity to attain to self-aggrandizement. Let us be sure that to practise the self-denial of Christ, is always our best argument for Christ, Phil. 2. 6.——Ver. 11. According to the Jewish law, the kinsman of any one who was killed, had a legal right, and held it an imperative duty to avenge the death, by slaying the aggressor. The appointment, therefore, of these cities was an institution of great wisdom and mercy; while it afforded an expressive and eminent type of Christ as the refuge of sinners. (1) The slayer flees, (ver. 11.) because the avenger follows: so the sinner has fled to Jesus, Heb. 6. 18. (2) They protect till the judgment sits: so must all appear at the judgment-seat of Christ, (2 Cor. 5. 10.) when believers obtain a public acquittal through his grace, Mat. 25. 34, 40. (3) There were cities of refuge on both sides of Jordan, so the sinner finds Christ a refuge on earth, as he will find him his glory in heaven, John 14. 1—3. (4) These cities were not only for Israel, but for the stranger and sojourner: so is Christ a refuge for Jew and Gentile, (Rom. 2. 10.) and all who follow him count themselves strangers and pilgrims on the earth, Heb. 11. 13. (5) These cities refused protection to the murderer; so Christ refuses salvation to the unbelieving and impenitent, the unregenerate and unsanctified, Mat. 25. 41, 46. (6) The congregation being the legally constituted judges, were the administrators of this refuge and deliverance, (ver. 25.); so the church is appointed to afford instruction and comfort by the ordinances, and deliver penitent sinners, by a merciful discipline, from the snare of the devil, Gal. 6. 1—7. The guilty who have fled for refuge, must abide in the city till the death of the high priest; (ver. 25.) so must the sinner abide in Christ, (John 15. 4, 6, 7) constantly bearing about in his body the dying of the Lord Jesus, 2 Cor. 4. 10. (8) At the death of the high priest the guilty returns to his possession; (ver. 28.) so by faith in the death and resurrection of Christ, as delivered for our offences, and raised for our justification, (Rom. 4. 25.) we enter into possession of the earnest of the Spirit; (2 Cor. 5. 5.) and abide in faith, waiting for the adoption, the redemption of the body, Rom. 8. 23.

CHAP. XXXVI. Ver. 13. Moab proper lay to the south of the Arnon, yet Moses is now considerably to the north. How is this geographical difficulty or rather contradiction to be removed? Simply by a common occurrence in the world, conquest or colonization, and as conquerors and colonists carry old names to new countries, so the Moabites had called the plains they had conquered or colonized on the north, by the name adopted by their countrymen on the south.

THE FIFTH BOOK OF MOSES

DEUTERONOMY.

THIS book is so called because it contains a repetition of many laws formerly delivered. It records the history of Israel during one month before Moses' death, and another after it. Here we have scarcely any new history, but what relates to Moses' renewal of the covenant between God and Israel, his charge to Joshua, and his death. Never, except in chap. xxxi. 14—21. and xxxiv. 4., is God exhibited as speaking to Moses or the Israelites as in the three preceding books. But Moses, just going to leave them by death, in the most affecting manner rehearses to them what God had done for them; and the laws which he had given them, with several explications and additions. This rehearsal was extremely necessary and kind. (1) Many of the laws in respect of their matter, and all of them in respect of their Author and intent, were very important and worthy to be again and again inculcated. (2) The weakness of the Israelites made it necessary, that the laws, which immediately concerned them, should be represented separately from those which concerned the priests and Levites. (3) The persons to whom these laws had been originally published were now almost all dead, and a new generation was grown up, to whom God would have his laws repeated by Moses himself, that, if possible, it might make a lasting impression upon them. (4) They were just going to take possession of Canaan; it was therefore proper that they should be expressly admonished of the conditions upon which they were to hold it. In this, his last speech and dying words, (1) Moses gives a summary rehearsal of what events had happened to them in the wilderness; ch. i, ii, iii, ix. 7—29. x. 1—7. (2) He rehearses the moral laws which had been given from mount Sinai; and, by a variety of motives, drawn from the kindness of God towards them, and from the danger of disobedience, charges and calls upon them to obey them; iv—xi. (3) With a mixture of moral institutes he inculcates manifold ceremonial and judicial observances: some of which, as of extirpating false prophets and idolatrous cities; making battlements round the roofs of houses; expiating uncertain murder; taking down hanged malefactors in the evening; punishing of rebellious children; distinguishing apparel of the sexes; marriage of captive women, and wives of deceased brethren; of divorcing of wives, and trial of virginity; of runaway servants, &c., had not before been plainly established; xii—xxvi. (4) To enforce obedience to these laws, he charges them to surrender themselves solemnly to God at Ebal and Gerizzim, as his dutiful servants, who regarded his blessings, and stood in awe of his curses. He solemnly announces the blessings annexed to their obedience, and denounces the curses which would befall them if disobedient; xxvii—xxxi. (5) After encouraging Joshua his successor, and leaving a song for the people, warning them of their future sins, miseries, and deliverances, and a testamentary benediction for their encouragement, he views the promised land from mount Pisgah, where he dies, and is buried by God, and lamented by the Israelites; xxxi—xxxiv.

CHAPTER I.

After marking the time and place of his discourse, 1—5, Moses, in his farewell-sermon, reminds the Israelites (1) Of the promise of Canaan, which God had made to them: 6—8. (2) Of the provision of inferior judges he had made for them: 9—18. (3) Of their unbelief and murmuring upon the report of the wicked spies: 19—33. (4) Of the wrathful sentence which God had passed upon them for their sin, and the ratification thereof: 34—46.

2 (There are [c] eleven days' journey from Horeb, by the way of mount Seir, unto Kadesh-barnea.) [*]

3 And it came to pass [d] in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month, that Moses spake unto the children of Israel, [†] according unto all that the LORD had given him in commandment unto them;

4 [e] After he had slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, which dwelt at Astaroth in Edrei:

5 On [f] this side Jordan, in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare this law, saying,

6 ¶ The LORD our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt [g] long enough in this mount:

7 Turn you, and take your journey, and [h] go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto [‡] all the places nigh thereunto, in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

8 Behold, I have [§] set the land before you: go in and possess the land [ǁ] which the LORD sware unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them, and to their seed after them.

9 ¶ And I spake [ǁ] unto you at that time, [k] saying, I am not able to bear you myself alone:

10 The LORD your God hath [ǁ] multiplied you, and, behold, ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

11 (The LORD God of your fathers [m] make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and [n] bless you, as he hath promised you!)

12 How can I myself alone [o] bear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife?

13 [*] [p] Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.

14 And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do.

15 So [q] I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known, and [†] made them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes.

16 And I charged your judges at that time, saying, [r] Hear the causes between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him.

17 Ye shall not [*] respect persons in judgment: but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man, for the judgment is God's: and [s] the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it.

18 And I [t] commanded you at that time all the things which ye should do.

19 ¶ And when we departed from Horeb, we went through all that great and [u] terrible wilderness, which ye saw by the way of the mountain of the Amorites, as the LORD our God commanded us; and we came to Kadesh-barnea.

20 And I said unto you, Ye are come unto the [x] mountain of the Amorites, which the LORD our God doth give unto us.

21 [y] Behold, the LORD thy God hath set the land before thee: go up and possess it, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath said unto thee; fear not, neither be discouraged.

22 ¶ And ye came near unto me every one of you, and said, [†] We will send men before us, and they shall search us out the land, and bring us word again by what way we must go up, and into what cities we shall come.

23 And the saying [z] pleased me well: and I took twelve men of you, one of a tribe:

24 And [‡a] they turned and went up into the mountain, and came unto the valley of Eshcol, and searched it out.

25 And they took of the fruit of the land in their hands, and brought it down unto us, and brought us word again, and said, It is a good land which the LORD our God doth give us.

26 Notwithstanding [b] ye would not go up, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God.

27 And ye murmured in your tents, and said, [c] Because the LORD [§] hated us, he hath brought us forth out of the land of Egypt, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us.

28 Whither shall we go up? our brethren have [ǁ] discouraged our heart, saying, [d] The people is greater and taller than we; the cities are great, and walled up to [*] heaven; and, moreover, we have seen the sons of the Anakims there.

29 Then I said unto you, [e] Dread not, neither be afraid of them.

* Some high authorities are for transposing this verse between 19 and 20, and that position would certainly seem the most natural. Still it is dangerous to attempt such violent dislocations, when unauthorized by MSS. Were the geography of the journeyings better known, it is more probable the location of the verse would appear both natural and necessary. As the verse stands, it can be easily understood by throwing out the words supplied, and instead of reading it as a parenthesis, understanding it as commemorating that part of the history which terminated in the exclusion of Moses himself and the last generation from Canaan, (see ver. 19, 34, 35, 37.) and demonstrating upon how brief a period the most important events may depend.—ED.

§ Unbelief gives two characters to God, according to its circumstances. The unbeliever in prosperity and pleasure describes his God "all mercy." REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—It much becomes aged ministers, from time to time, to remind their people of the principal occurrences of Providence towards them, and of their carriage towards God under them: and, the nearer their end, the more serious and diligent ought they to be in this work. In repeated views of the providences and oracles of God, some new and affecting circumstances will readily present themselves, to which we had not formerly adverted, and call forth new expressions of gratitude and praise: and it is beautiful when all the kindness of God is enjoyed, as founded on his new-covenant promises. What a mercy is it to a nation when they have judges able, patient, pious, and impartial! But heinous is the guilt when, notwithstanding God's gracious promises and kind providences, we wickedly rebel against him; when, discrediting God's promise and care, we obstinately lean to our own understanding: and when we readily credit every thing;

30 The LORD your God, [f] which goeth before you, he shall fight for you, [g] according to all that he did for you in Egypt before your eyes;

31 And [h] in the wilderness, where thou hast seen how that the LORD thy God bare thee, as a man doth bear his son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came into this place.

32 Yet in this thing [i] ye did not believe the LORD your God,

33 [k] Who went in the way before you, to search you out a place to pitch your tents in, in fire by night, to show you by what way ye should go, and in a cloud by day.

34 ¶ And the LORD heard the voice of your words, and was wroth, and sware, saying,

35 [l] Surely there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land, which I sware to give unto your fathers,

36 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh; he shall see it, and to him will I give [m] the land that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because he hath [*] wholly followed the LORD.

37 [n] Also the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither.

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, which [*] standeth before thee, he shall go in thither: encourage him; for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.

39 Moreover, [p] your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, and your children, which in that day had no knowledge between good and evil, they shall go in thither, and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it.

40 But as for you, [q] turn you, and take your journey into the wilderness, by the way of the Red sea.

41 Then ye answered and said unto me, [r] We have sinned against the LORD, we will go up and fight, according to all that the LORD our God commanded us. And when ye had girded on every man his weapons of war, ye were ready to go up into the hill.

42 And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, [s] Go not up, neither fight; for I am not among you; lest ye be smitten before your enemies.

43 So I spake unto you; and ye would not hear, but [t] rebelled against the commandment of the LORD, and [†] went presumptuously up into the hill.

44 And the Amorites, which dwelt in that mountain, came out against you, and [u] chased you, as bees do, and destroyed you in Seir, even unto Hormah.

45 And ye [x] returned and wept before the LORD; but the LORD would not hearken to your voice, nor give ear unto you.

46 So ye [y] abode in Kadesh many days, according unto the days that ye abode there.

CHAPTER II.

Passing untouched the wanderings of thirty-eight years, which the Israelites had spent under the manifest tokens of God's wrath, Moses reminds them (1) Of the charge which God gave them not to disturb the Edomites, Moabites, and Ammonites, their kinsmen: 1—23. (2) The care which God took of them in the wilderness; and his complete fulfilment of his threatening: 13—16. (3) The order they received from God to conquer the kingdom of Sihon; their just quarrel with him, and seizure of his country: 24—37.

A. M. 2553. B. C. 1451.

THEN we [a] turned, and took our journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea, as the LORD spake unto me; and we [b] compassed mount Seir many days. [*]

2 And the LORD spake unto me, saying,

3 Ye have compassed this mountain [c] long enough: turn you northward.

4 And command thou the people, saying, [d] Ye are to pass through the coast of your brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir, and they shall be afraid of you: [e] take ye good heed unto yourselves therefore.

5 [f] Meddle not with them; for I will not give you of their land, [†] no, not so much as a footbreadth; because I have given mount Seir unto Esau for a possession.

6 Ye shall [g] buy meat of them for money, that ye may eat; and ye shall also buy water of them for money, that ye may drink.

7 For the LORD thy God hath [h] blessed thee in all the works of thy hand: he [i] knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness: these forty years the LORD thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing.

8 And when we [k] passed by from our brethren the children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir, through the way of the plain from Elath, and from Ezion-gaber, we turned and passed by the way of the wilderness of Moab.

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto me, [‡] [l] Distress not the Moabites, neither contend with them in battle: for I will not give thee of their land for a possession; because I have given [m] Ar [§] unto the children of Lot for a possession.

10 The [n] Emims dwelt therein in times past, a people great, and many, and tall as the Anakims;

11 Which also were accounted giants, as the Anakims; but the Moabites call them Emims.

* "Mount Seir" is not to be taken as a single mountain around which the Israelites continuously moved. It is evidently the name of an extensive mountain range of about 70 miles from south to north, and about 50 from east to west. To "compass," in the language of Scripture, signifies either to go round, or to be around a place. Josh. 6. 4. John 4. 20. will furnish an example of each application. In the text it evidently applies to an encampment, of which, the occasional movements were southward, towards the Red sea. Of these movements, Moses gives no special record. A melancholy, but accurate, emblem of human life, of which much is spent "in laboriously doing nothing" that is worthy of being rescued from oblivion.—Ed.

said in opposition to God's record, and disregard every encouragement to believe it! And men's wilfulness frequently manifests itself in such diversified contradictions to God's will! The most eminent saints share along with the wicked in their temporal miseries. And often they are forced to weep for their sufferings who would not weep for their sins. But, alas! to no purpose is weeping when the door of mercy is once shut. It is but the sorrow of the world, which worketh death.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—What regard God bears to his noted favourites; and what temporal favours he bestows, even on their wicked posterity, for their sake! But he hath appointed times for exercising his people's faith, and permitting his enemies' prosperity. He plants and plucks up nations; keeps them in, or turns them down from their property as he pleases; and the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. Thus the cursed offspring of Ham, after many ages,

* The expulsion and succession of these now obscure people, of whom we possess but the name, conveys the same lesson with the rise and fall of the mightiest empires, whose fates fill the pages of the most extended history. There is a lesson of mortality upon the gravestone of the unknown stranger, as intelligible to reason, as the inscription over the departed friend. The one may awaken more emotion, but gives no louder warning than the other. But as men read monumental inscriptions for curiosity or amusement, so do nations often study history. They see that others mighty and renowned have fallen; they have the causes in luxury or effeminacy; but seldom think, and if told, will not readily admit, that to "forgetfulness of God," are national calamities to be traced, and that, in submission to "the Son" lies the safety and stability of kingdoms, Ps. 2. 12. & 2. 10. While Moses impresses this solemn lesson of instability upon the Israelites, he also encourages them by the example of weaker nations expelling or conquering the mightiest, even as sinners are encouraged to turn to the Lord, by the triumphs of grace in rescuing "the chief of sinners," from the snare of the devil, 2 Tim. 2. 26.—ED.

When churlishly refused, he did not commence hostilities; but when Sihon came to assail him, he assailed him as an aggressor, and then took possession of the land which God had promised, and which God, as Creator and Lord, had a paramount right to bestow.—ED.

perish under the patriarch's curse. But the people of God ought to be always generous, forgiving, and disinterested; neither injuring their enemies, nor unnecessarily burdensome to their friends. And the more vain and changeable the possessions of this world are, the more solicitous we ought to be to secure a kingdom which cannot be moved. When nations are ripe for ruin, God permits their proud lusts to plunge them headlong into it: and their barbarous refusals of common kindness issue in their own and their neighbours' destruction. Let me be always content with such things as I have; always tender of dispossessing others of what the Lord has given them. Let my portion be the Lord himself, from which neither hell nor earth can turn me out, or mar my enjoyment, while I live in the hopes of exchanging all my wanderings, fightings, and fears, for that city of God, that house eternal in the heavens.

2 And the LORD said unto me, [b] Fear him not: for I will deliver him, and all his people, and his land, into thy hand; and thou shalt do unto him as thou didst unto [c] Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

3 So the LORD our God [d] delivered into our hands Og also, the king of Bashan, and all his people: and we smote him, until none was left to him remaining.

4 And we took [e] all his cities at that time; there was not a city which we took not from them, threescore cities, all the region of Argob, the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

5 All these cities were fenced with high walls, gates, and bars, besides unwalled towns a great many.

6 And we [f] utterly destroyed them, as we did unto Sihon king of Heshbon, utterly destroying the men, women, and children, of every city.

7 [g] But all the cattle, and the spoil of the cities, we took for a prey to ourselves.

8 And we took at that time, out of the hand of the two kings of the Amorites, [h] the land that was on this side Jordan, from the river of Arnon unto mount Hermon;

9 [i] (Which Hermon the Sidonians call Sirion, and the Amorites call it Shenir;)

10 [k] All the cities of the plain, and all Gilead, and all Bashan, unto Salchah and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan:

11 For only Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of [l] giants; [*] behold, his bedstead was a bedstead of iron: is it not in [m] Rabbath of the children of Ammon? [†] nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man.

12 ¶ [n] And this land, which we possessed at that time from Aroer, which is by the river Arnon, and half mount Gilead, and the cities thereof, gave I unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites.

13 And the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, being the kingdom of Og, gave I unto the half tribe of Manasseh; all the region of Argob, with all Bashan, which was called the land of giants.

14 [o] Jair the son of Manasseh took all the country of Argob, unto the coasts of Geshuri and Maachathi, and called them after his own name, Bashan-havoth-jair, unto this day.

15 [p] And I gave Gilead unto Machir.

16 [q] And unto the Reubenites, and unto the Gadites, I gave from Gilead even unto the river Arnon, half the valley, and the border, even unto the [r] river Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon;

17 [s] The plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from Chinnereth even unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, [t] under Ashdoth-pisgah eastward.

18 ¶ [u] And I commanded you at that time, saying, The LORD your God hath given you this land to possess it: ye shall pass over armed before your brethren the children of Israel, all that are [*] meet for the war.

19 But your wives, and your little ones, and your cattle, (for I know that ye have much cattle,) shall abide in your cities which I have given you,

20 Until the LORD have given rest unto your brethren, as well as unto you, and until they also possess the land which the LORD your God hath given them beyond Jordan: and then shall ye [x] return every man unto his possession, which I have given you.

21 ¶ And [y] I commanded Joshua at that time, saying, Thine eyes have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto these two kings: so shall the LORD do unto all the kingdoms whither thou passest.

22 Ye [z] shall not fear them: for the LORD your God he shall fight for you.

23 ¶ And I besought the LORD at that time, saying,

24 O Lord GOD, thou hast begun to show thy servant thy [a] greatness, and thy mighty hand: for what God is there in heaven or in earth that can do according to thy works, and according to thy might?

25 I pray thee, let me go over and see [b] the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain, and Lebanon.

26 But the LORD [c] was wroth with me for your sakes, and would not hear me: and the LORD said unto me, [d] Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter.

27 Get [e] thee up unto the top of [†] Pisgah, and lift up thine eyes westward, and northward, and southward, and eastward, and behold it with thine eyes: for thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

28 But [f] charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him; for he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit the land which thou shalt see.

29 So we abode in the [g] valley over against Beth-peor.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Haughty sinners scorn to be warned by their neighbours' fall, and dare to provoke their own judgments, in which they perish. But we, amidst the strongest enemies, all slavish fears are altogether groundless when we have the Lord on our side: he kindly proportions his encouragements to his people's fears, and the terrible appearances of their enemies. There is no might nor counsel against him. The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. Created force is of little avail when God is the opposer. He can deal with giants as with grasshoppers.—It highly becomes those, who, by faith have entered into their new-covenant rest, to look not on their own things, but every man also on the things of others; and to labour till their brethren, and especially Zion, enjoy rest along with them. Every experience of God's power and kindness ought to be improved as an antidote against slavish fears, and an encouragement to follow God in the hardest service: and every glimpse of God's glory quickens the desires after more abundant displays of it. Thankfulness for former mercies is an excellent

CHAPTER IV.

(1) Moses charges the Israelites to attend to God's statutes; to avoid idolatry; to instruct their children in the truths and ways of God; and never forget his covenant. He enforces these duties by arguments: 1—40. (2) He appoints three cities of refuge on the east of Jordan: 41—43. (3) He particularly describes the place where he delivered this repetition of the law: 44—49.

NOW therefore [a] hearken, O Israel, unto [b] the statutes, and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess [c] the land which the LORD God of your fathers giveth you.

2 [d] Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

3 Your eyes have seen [e] what the LORD did because of Baal-peor: for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the LORD thy God hath destroyed them from among you.

4 But ye that [f] did cleave unto the LORD your God are alive every one of you this day.

5 Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it.

6 Keep therefore and do them; for [g] this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.

7 For what nation [h] is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them,* as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for?

8 And what nation is there so great, that [i] hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?

9 Only take heed to thyself, and [k] keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life; but [l] teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons:

10 Specially the [m] day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb, when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

11 And ye [n] came near, and stood under the mountain; and the mountain burned with fire unto the † midst of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

12 And the LORD [o] spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, [p] but saw no similitude; ‡ only ye heard a voice.

13 And he [q] declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

14 And the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you [r] statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

15 ¶ [s] Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves, (for ye [t] saw no manner of similitude on the day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire,)

16 Lest ye [u] corrupt yourselves, and make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, the likeness of male or female,

17 The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air,

18 The likeness of any thing that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth:†

19 And lest [x] thou lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even all the host of heaven, shouldest be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath ‡ divided unto all nations under the whole heaven.‖

20 But the LORD hath taken you, and brought you forth out of [y] the iron furnace,‖ even out of Egypt, to be unto him a [z] people of inheritance, as ye are this day.

21 Furthermore, the LORD [a] was angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land [b] which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance;

22 But [c] I must die in this land, I must not go over Jordan: but ye shall go over, and possess that good land.

23 Take [d] heed unto yourselves, lest ye forget the covenant of the LORD your God, which he made with you, and make you a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, which the LORD thy God hath forbidden thee.

24 For [e] the LORD thy God is a consuming fire,* even a jealous God.

25 ¶ When thou [f] shalt beget children, and children's children, and ye shall have remained long in the land, and shall corrupt yourselves, and make a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, and shall do evil in the sight of the LORD thy God, to provoke him to anger; mean to obtain what blessings we need: and contentment under disappointments is a good evidence that our prayers were not rejected, though we obtain not what we ask. One single slip in the conversation of a saint sometimes renders his most earnest supplications unsuccessful; for God makes his own principal favourites the most distinguished examples of his righteous judgments. Often, for their own faults, as well as for the punishment of others, he removes them by death in a wrathful-like manner, when the continuance of their life seems to be most necessary; and yet readily he gratifies their innocent desires, as far as his own honour permits, whenever he finds them penitent. What a comfort is it for dying rulers, in church or state, to leave the flock of God in the hands of faithful successors! and it is pleasing to see aged saints on their deathbeds encourage their younger brethren.

26 I [f]call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that [h]ye shall soon utterly perish from off the land whereunto ye go over Jordan to possess it; ye shall not prolong your days upon it, but shall utterly be destroyed.

27 And the LORD shall [i]scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the LORD shall lead you.

28 And there [k]ye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, which [l]neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell.

29 But [m]if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart, and with all thy soul.

30 When [n]thou art in tribulation, and all these things [*]are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the LORD thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice.

31 (For [o]the LORD thy God is a merciful God,) he [p]will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers, which he sware unto them.

32 ¶ For [q]ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and ask from the [r]one side of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it?

33 Did ever people [s]hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live?

34 Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by [t]temptations, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm, and by great terrors, according to all that the LORD your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes?

35 Unto thee it was showed, that thou mightest [u]know that the LORD he is God; there is none else beside him.

36 [x]Out of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee; and upon earth he showed thee his great fire; and thou heardest his words out of the midst of the fire.

37 And [y]because he loved thy fathers, therefore he chose their seed after them, and brought thee out in his sight with his mighty power out of Egypt;

38 [z]To drive out nations from before thee, greater and mightier than thou art, to bring thee in, to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

CHAPTER V.

(1) Moses reminds them that the ten commandments at Horeb, were given to this present generation in the form of, and as the rule in, a covenant between God and Israel: 1—5. (2) He repeats these commandments themselves, subjoining some new enforcements to the fourth and fifth; and reminds them that they were delivered both by the word and the writing of God: 6—22. (3) He reminds them how God graciously settled an amicable correspondence with them, through his mediation and ministry: 23—31. (4) From the whole he infers what deep obligations they were under to the most exact obedience: 32, 33.

AND Moses called [a]all Israel, and said unto them, [b]Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and [*]keep and do them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Blind and hardened indeed are the hearts of men, which need such earnest and repeated inculcation of the plainest duties. And greatly important are the statutes and testimonies of God, which are worthy of all these enforcements. Oh with what solemnity and fervour ought ministers then to preach the truths of God! His glory, and the eternal salvation or ruin of mankind, are deeply concerned in them. Let me receive every article of their divine message with the deepest awe, and the most solemn regard: and, while I have an ear to hear, let me hear what the Spirit saith to the churches, as said to myself. Let me walk in all the commandments of the Lord blameless. Let every carnal representation of the true God, every deviation to idols, be the detestation of my soul. And, remembering God's covenant with me, and relation to me, let me exert all my care and skill in raising up a seed to the honour of Jesus Christ my elder brother. Let every manifestation of God's character or providence encourage and animate me to close walking with him. And, if I choose not that sin should become my punishment, let me never make it my pleasure. But let the immutability of God's love, and his readiness to show mercy to returning prodigals, lead me to a speedy and a hearty

2 [c]The LORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

3 The LORD [d]made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.

4 [e]The LORD talked with you face to face in the mount, out of the midst of the fire,

5 (I stood [f]between the LORD and you at that time, to show you the word of the LORD: for ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount,) saying,

6 ¶ [g]I am the LORD thy God, {which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of [*]bondage.

7 [h]Thou shalt have none other gods before me.

8 [i]Thou shalt not make thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth:

9 Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: [k]for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me,

10 [l]And showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

11 [m]Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

12 [n]Keep the sabbath-day to sanctify it, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee.

13 Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work;

14 But the seventh day is the [o]sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor [p]thy stranger that is within thy gates; that thy man-servant and thy maid-servant may rest as well as thou.

15 And [q]remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the LORD thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm: therefore the LORD thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath-day.

16 ¶ [r]Honour thy father and thy mother, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee; [s]that thy days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee, in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

17 [t]Thou shalt not kill.

A. M. 2553. B. C. 1451.

18 Neither shalt thou commit adultery.

19 Neither shalt thou steal.

20 Neither shalt thou bear false witness against thy neighbour.

21 [u]Neither shalt thou desire thy neighbour's wife, [*]neither shalt thou covet thy neighbour's house, his field, [†]or his man-servant, or his maid-servant, his ox, or his ass, or any thing that is thy neighbour's.

22 ¶ [x]These words [‡]the LORD spake unto all your assembly in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more: and he [y]wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me.

23 And it came to pass, [z]when ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness, (for the mountain did burn with fire,) that ye came near unto me, even all the [a]heads of your tribes, and your elders;

24 And ye said, Behold, the LORD our God hath showed us his glory, and his greatness, and [b]we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he liveth.

25 Now therefore why should we die? [c]for this great fire will consume us. If we [§]hear the voice of the LORD our God any more, then we shall die.

26 For [d]who is there of all flesh that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?

27 Go [*]thou near, and hear all that the LORD our God shall say; and speak thou unto us all that the LORD our God shall speak unto thee, and we will hear it, and do it.

28 And the LORD heard the voice of your words, when ye spake unto me; and the LORD said unto me, I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee: [f]they have well said all that they have spoken.

29 [g]Oh that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!

30 Go say to them, Get you into your tents again.

31 But as for thee, stand thou here by me, and I will [h]speak unto thee all the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possess it.

* The varieties of expression used, in relating the same thing, by "holy men of God," who spoke as they were moved by "the Holy Ghost," is never without some important use, that will sooner or later be found out. A remarkable instance occurs in this verse. In many of the catechisms, and other books, authorized by Romanists, the second commandment, forbidding image worship, is omitted; but to make up the number ten, the tenth commandment is divided into two. The transposition, however, in the text demonstrates the invalidity of the division, and the folly as well as sin, of adding to, or diminishing from, the words of the Lord.—ED.

† Moses, in this repetition and comment, appropriately introduces the word "field," as the people were now about to enter the promised land.—ED.

repentance for sin. And, recollecting the manifold, the distinguishing, manifestations of God to me, and to his people, let me never forget my superior obligations; but, while I enjoy his peculiar blessing, return him peculiar honour.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Sinful men must have God's will declared to them, line upon line, precept upon precept. But the covenant of grace, made with Jesus Christ, is the great foundation of all our holy obedience; and there can be no happy covenant of duty between God and a soul but through his mediation. Public covenants of duty, between God and parents, bind the children to all generations; and it is at their peril if they become ashamed of them. But all obedience 32 Ye [i] shall observe to do therefore as the LORD your God hath commanded you: ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

33 Ye shall [k] walk in all the ways which the LORD your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess.

CHAPTER VI.

(1) Moses enforces obedience to God's law, and warmly inculcates attention to the principal duties of religion; such as faith in God, and a superlative love to him, a mindfulness of him amidst prosperity, a filial fear of him, a serving of him, and swearing by him alone, a care not to tempt him: 4, 5, 10—16. (2) He prescribes proper means for maintaining true religion, in their hearts and families; viz., frequent reading and meditation upon God's word, pious conference, and careful instruction of children: 2, 6—9, 20—25.

NOW these are the [a] commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye [*] go to possess it;

2 That thou mightest [b] fear the LORD thy God, to keep all his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee; thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the days of thy life; and that [c] thy days may be prolonged.

3 ¶ [d] Hear therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it; that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in the land that floweth with milk and honey.

4 Hear, O Israel; [e] The LORD our God is one LORD:

5 [f] And thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.

6 And [g] these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart;

7 And thou [h] shalt [†] teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

8 And thou [i] shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes.

9 And thou shalt [k] write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates.

10 And it shall be, when the LORD thy God [l] shall have brought thee into the land which he sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities which thou buildedst not;

22 And the LORD showed signs and wonders, great and [*] sore, upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his household, [y] before our eyes;

23 And he brought us out from thence, that [z] he might bring us in, to give us the land which he sware unto our fathers.

24 And the [a] LORD commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the LORD our God, for our good always, that he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day.

25 And [b] it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the LORD our God, as he hath commanded us.

to God's law must be immediately founded on what God is, and is to us, and hath done for us. And, oh! what great pleasure God takes in granting himself to be our God in Christ! Often he repeats this grant even in the short abridgment of his law; and many hundred times in the Bible,—that wherever we read, hear, or meditate, we may be constrained to believe that he is God, even our own God, by his new covenant-grant of himself to us. Indeed, every peculiar circumstance which men can be in, hath its own peculiar enforcements of duty to God and our neighbour. In what a solemn manner was God's law delivered! and it is a mercy that we have his word written for us, for the greater certainty and the better spreading thereof. But it is still a greater mercy that we have one Mediator between God and men, —the man Christ Jesus; and so receive the law as fulfilled in Christ: and it is most acceptable to God, when sinful men, terrified by the holy law, kindly flee to Jesus and his mediation; when our hearts are right with him; and especially when the views of his covenant, his law, and the mediation of Christ, and our own vows, concur in animating us to the greatest exactness in all holy obedience.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Godliness is profitable for all things—it hath the promises of this life, and of that which is to come: and unbounded is the happiness of all those who have the one only God for their all and in all. But in the important business of religion, it is necessary to lay a good foundation, by faith

CHAPTER VII.

(1) The seven devoted nations of Canaanites: 1—4, 16, 24. (2) The Israelites must destroy all their altars and images; and not so much as take the metal thereof to their own use: 5, 25, 26. (3) He enforces these charges, from God's gracious choice of the Israelites to be his peculiar people; his readiness to reward their obedience, and revenge their disobedience; his promises to bless them, if they served him faithfully; and to drive out the Canaanites from before them, if they earnestly attempted it: 6—24.

A. M. 2553. B. C. 1451.

WHEN the [a] LORD thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than thou; [*]

2 And when the LORD thy God [b] shall deliver them before thee, and thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them; thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor show mercy unto them:

3 Neither [c] shalt thou make marriages [†] with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.

4 For they [d] will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: [*] so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

5 But thus shall ye deal with them; [f] ye shall destroy their altars, and break down their [‡] images, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven images with fire.

6 ¶ [§] For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

7 The LORD [h] did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; (for ye were the fewest of all people;) [§]

8 But [i] because the LORD loved you, and because he would [k] keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bond-men, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

9 ¶ Know therefore that the LORD thy God, he is God, the [l] faithful God, which keepeth covenant [m] and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments, to a thousand generations;

10 And [n] repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

11 Thou shalt therefore [o] keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them.

12 ¶ Wherefore it shall come to pass, if [*p] ye hearken to these judgments, and keep and do them, that the LORD thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he sware unto thy fathers:

13 And he [q] will love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee; he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee.

14 Thou [r] shalt be blessed above all people: there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle.

15 And the LORD [*] will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the evil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest, [†] upon thee; but [t] will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

16 And thou shalt [u] consume all the people which the LORD thy God shall deliver thee; thine eye shall have [‡] no pity upon them: neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be a snare unto thee.

17 If thou [x] shalt say in thine heart, These nations are more than I; how can I dispossess them?

18 Thou [y] shalt not be afraid of them; but shalt well remember what the LORD thy God did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt:

19 [z] The great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs, and the wonders, and the mighty hand, and the stretched-out arm, whereby the LORD thy God brought thee out; so shall the LORD thy God [§] do unto all the people of whom thou art afraid.

20 [a] Moreover, the LORD thy God will send the [‖] hornet among them, until they that are left, and hide themselves from thee, be destroyed.

21 Thou shalt not be affrighted at them: for the LORD thy God is among you, [b] a mighty God and terrible.

22 And the LORD thy God will [*c] put out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee.

23 But the LORD thy God shall deliver them [†] unto thee, and shall [d] destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.

in God as our God, and to attend to the various duties thereof according to the degree of their importance. In this respect, the word of God is a most precious treasure and useful instructor; and contains the most extensive ground of holy meditation and heavenly discourse. With awful reverence should God be regarded and enjoyed, particularly in swearing of oaths. And it is altogether inconsistent with the truth of religion to entertain sloth and unconcern for the glory of God, or the lasting welfare of his church. What an important and laborious work ought we to make of the religious education of our children and servants! It is very necessary to instruct them in the knowledge of God's remarkable appearances for his church, as well as in the doctrinal principles or laws of revelation; and that no obedience can be accepted of God, but what is performed in regard to him as our God in Christ, and is universal respecting all his commandments.

ALL [a] the commandments which I command thee this day shall ye observe to do, that ye may live, and multiply, and go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers.

2 And [b] thou shalt remember all the way which the LORD thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldest keep his commandments or no.

3 And he humbled thee, and [c] suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with manna, which thou knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the LORD doth man live.

with respect to their life or death, they having all forfeited whatever they have into the hands of his justice. It is dangerous to contract marriage, or cultivate intimacy with wicked persons, particularly such as are of a false religion; and absurd is the expectation, that by such means we shall convert them, when God hath warned us that they will corrupt and seduce us. The faith of God's free love and mercy in choosing and redeeming us, most effectually constrains to holy obedience; and what profit and pleasure is there in the faithful service of God! the most difficult duties are easily performed, when we attempt them in the faith of God's promised presence and assistance. Why should we fear our strongest enemies, though greater and mightier than we are! If God be for us, who or what can be against us! Though our conquest be gradual, it shall be complete at last: and in all our strugglings, let us beware of covetousness; for to enrich ourselves, even with the spoils of a false religion, may issue in our ruin;—and it is therefore very important to remove and avoid every temptation to sin.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—With great care and skill should ministers promote holiness among their people; and there is need to turn promises and providences every way, to lead men to Jesus, the tree of life. To mortify our pride,—commemorate our peevishness,—and render the wisdom, holiness, and mercy of God familiar, let us observe the frowns and smiles of God's providence towards us. Trials are as necessary as deliverances; nor can any thing hinder God from supplying us in the greatest straits. If the enjoyment of an earthly HEAR, O Israel; Thou art to pass over Jordan [a] this day, [*] to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, [b] cities great, and fenced up to heaven;

2 A people great and tall, the children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest, and of whom thou hast heard say, Who can stand before the children of Anak?

3 Understand therefore this day, that the LORD thy God is he which [c] goeth over before thee; as a consuming fire he [d] shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face: so shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the LORD hath said unto thee.

4 [e] Speak not thou in thine heart, after that the LORD thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, [†] For my righteousness the LORD hath brought me in to possess this land; but [f] for the wickedness of these nations the LORD doth drive them out from before thee.

5 Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land; but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and [g] that he may perform the word which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

6 Understand therefore, [h] that the LORD thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art a stiff-necked people. [‡]

7 ¶ [i] Remember, and forget not, how thou provokedst the LORD thy God to wrath in the wilderness: from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the LORD.

8 [k] Also in Horeb ye provoked the LORD to wrath, so that the LORD was angry with you, to have destroyed you.

9 When I was [l] gone up into the mount, to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the LORD made with you, then I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights; I neither did eat bread nor drink water:

10 [m] And the LORD delivered unto me two tables of stone, written with the finger of God: and on them was written according to all the words which the LORD spake with you in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, in the day of the assembly.

11 And it came to pass, at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the LORD gave me the two tables of stone, even the [n] tables of the covenant.

12 And the LORD said unto me, [o] Arise, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy people which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image.

13 Furthermore the LORD spake unto me, saying, [p] I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiff-necked people.

14 [q] Let me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven; and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they.

15 So [r] I turned and came down from the mount, and the mount [s] burned with fire: and the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands.

16 And [t] I looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against the LORD your God, and had made you a molten calf: ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the LORD had commanded you.

17 [u] And I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes. [*]

18 And [x] I fell down before the LORD, as at the first, forty days and forty nights: I did neither eat bread nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

19 (For [y] I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure wherewith the LORD was wroth against you to destroy you.) [z] But the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also.

20 And the LORD [a] was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him: and I prayed for Aaron also the same time.

21 And [b] I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust; and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

22 And at [c] Taberah, and at Massah, and at Kibroth-hattaavah, ye provoked the LORD to wrath.

23 Likewise when the LORD sent you from [d] Kadesh-barnea, saying, [e] Go up and possess the land which I have given you; then ye rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God, and ye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice.

† Let us mark with what specialty God dwells upon the fact, that the children of Israel were not installed in Canaan for their righteousness, but that the seven nations were driven out before them for their wickedness. Self-righteousness is the constitutional disease of human nature, a disease ever recurring, even under the regimen of grace. Canaan, much more should the faith of the heavenly inheritance, animate to an earnestness in universal holiness and gratitude. But how difficult is it to maintain humility of mind amidst remarkable prosperity! or fellowship with God amidst a flow of earthly enjoyments! for this purpose, let me always remember, that forgetfulness of God, ingratitude, and pride, bring into the prosperity by which they are occasioned the most fearful curse; and let me wisely observe the providences of God in my lot. To humble me, and discover my own naughtiness, let me remember the wilderness-straits to which I have been reduced. To recommend JEHOVAH to my heart, let me consider what he hath done for me, and promised to me. Let every peculiar excellency in my lot be a mean of elevating my heart to God himself, my goodly inheritance. In the day of my adversity, let me be joyful in him; and in the day of my prosperity, let me consider that all comes from him, and may be withdrawn at his pleasure: and, while the loving-kindness of God allures me to holiness, let his terrors awe and deter me from sin.

24 Ye have been rebellious against the LORD from the day that I knew you.

25 Thus [s] I fell down before the LORD forty days and forty nights,* as I fell down at the first; because the LORD had said he would destroy you.

26 I [h] prayed therefore unto the LORD, and said, O Lord GOD, destroy not thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

27 [i] Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin;

28 [k] Lest the land whence thou broughtest us out say, Because the LORD was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath brought them out to slay them in the wilderness.

29 Yet they are thy [l] people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power, and by thy stretched-out arm.

CHAPTER X.

(1) Moses here reminds the Israelites of the undeserved tokens of God's reconcilement to them; such as, 1. The renewal of the tables of the law or covenant: 1—5. 2. The new orders for their marching onward to Canaan: 6, 7, 11. 3. His continuing of the priesthood after Aaron's death: 6, 8, 9. 4. His accepting of Moses' intercession for the people: 10, 11. (2) From these; from the greatness, equity, and goodness of God; and from his peculiar kindness to Israel; he urges the fear and service of God, and the due love of their neighbours: 12—22.

AT [a] that time the LORD said unto me, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and make thee an ark of wood.

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark.

3 And [b] I made an ark of shittim-wood,* and [c] hewed two tables of stone like unto the first, and [d] went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand.

4 And he wrote on the tables, according to the first writing, the ten [†] commandments, which the LORD spake unto you in the mount, [e] out of the midst of the fire, in the day of the assembly: and the LORD gave them unto me.

5 And [f] I turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark which I had made; and there they be, [g] as the LORD commanded me.

6 ¶ [‡] And the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth of the children of Jaakan to Mosera: [h] there Aaron died, and there he was buried; and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office in his stead.

7 From thence they journeyed unto Gudgodah; and from Gudgodah to Jotbath, a land of rivers of waters.

8 ¶ At that time the LORD [i] separated the tribe of Levi, to [k] bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD, to stand before the LORD to minister unto him, and to bless in his name, unto this day.

9 [l] Wherefore Levi hath no part nor inheritance with his brethren; the LORD is his inheritance, according as the LORD thy God promised him.

10 ¶ And [m] I stayed in the mount, according to the * first time, forty days and forty nights; and [n] the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also, and the LORD would not destroy thee.

11 And the LORD said unto me, [o] Arise, [†] take thy journey before the people, that they may go in and possess the land, which I sware unto their fathers to give unto them.

12 ¶ And now, Israel, [p] what doth the LORD thy God require of thee, but to fear the LORD thy God, to walk in all his ways, and to love him, and to serve the LORD thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul,

13 To keep the commandments of the LORD, and his statutes, which I command thee this day [q] for thy good?

14 Behold, [r] the heaven, and the heaven of heavens, is the LORD's thy God; the earth also, with all that therein is.

15 Only the LORD * had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and he chose their seed after them, even you, above all people, as it is this day.

16 [t] Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no more stiff-necked.

17 For the LORD your God is [u] God of gods, and Lord of lords, a great God, a mighty, and a terrible, which [x] regardeth not persons, nor taketh reward.

18 He doth [y] execute the judgment of the fatherless and widow, and loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment.

19 [z] Love ye therefore the stranger: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

20 [a] Thou shalt fear the LORD thy God; him shalt thou serve, and to him shalt thou cleave, and swear by his name.

21 He is thy [b] praise, and he is thy God, that hath done for thee these great and terrible things which thine eyes have seen.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—The greater our enemies and impediments in the way of our duty, the more shall the power of God be magnified in our overcoming them. God can easily find instruments to execute his vengeance upon a people devoted to destruction; and his promises and threatenings are most certainly performed in their due time. Though judgment may be delayed, yet sin will at last make the most fearful havoc in nations and families, however great and powerful; and yet it is hard to keep the very worst of men from trusting and glorying in their own fancied works of righteousness. But to keep us humble amidst many and great mercies, let us search the records which conscience keeps of our sins. Nothing but obstinate blindness can support us in a good opinion of ourselves. But thanks be to God that, where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound; thanks for that infinite mercy, that such a wicked generation have a most prevailing Intercessor to stand in the gap to turn away the Lord's wrath and indignation from them.

10 ¶ For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with [‡] thy foot, as a garden of herbs:

‡ With thy own labour, digging trenches for rills of water, or by watering pans. —(Moses proceeds to contrast Egypt and Canaan. The first point of contrast lies in the irrigation of Egypt, where rain scarcely ever falls. This work is done by "the foot," that is, the laborious turning of a wheel by treading successively upon steps in the circumference, while the water is brought up in buckets, and thence conveyed through the level ground in trenches; whereas Canaan was watered without labour, by "drinking in the rain of heaven." The second point of contrast lies in the tame uniformity of Egypt, and the lovely succession of hills and valleys in Canaan, thus affording a succession of landscape pictures which in a level country such as Egypt, the eye searches for in vain.—Ed.)

‡ In countries near the equator, the seasons of wind and calm, and rain and drought, are almost perfectly uniform, and their changes can be prognosticated with considerable certainty; as we approach the north or the south, they become more variable and uncertain in time, duration, and degree. Still, that the seasons follow a law of nature, both observation and analogy confirm. But what is a law of nature, but another name for the will of God impressed upon any part of his works? The seasons therefore are neither from blind chance, nor material elements, but from the Almighty; and, like all his other servants, are made, at his will, the vehicles of his wrath, or of his blessing. Happy the husbandman, whose eyes, enlightened by grace, can read both the mercies and judgments of God, in the shower and the sunshine, in the drought and in the storm, who, when his "labour fails," can yet "joy in the God of his salvation," and who, when his "barns overflow" with plenty, forgets not the hand that gave it.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—What a mercy is it that the law, as a covenant, is fulfilled and hid in Christ, our gospel-ark! And what a sure token of divine favours yet in store for a people when God raises up faithful ministers and earnest wrestlers at a throne of grace! Marvellous indeed are God's returns of love for hatred,—of mercies for rebellion and provocation; and inexcusable, therefore, is disobedience to a God so great and gracious! But it is honourable and becoming to walk in love, as God himself walketh. It is a most fearful proof of the corruption of our nature, and the necessity of a gracious change, that we need so much urging to that which is so remarkably at once our great duty and interest. But let me always retain in mind the wonderful character, and the peculiar mercies of my God, the God of Israel; esteem it my glory to belong to him; and make him the only object of my fear, my praise, and joy.

CHAPTER XII.

(1) Israel must destroy all monuments of idolatry, and keep close to God's tabernacle, and form of worship instituted by him: 1—5. (2) They must bring all their oblations to God's altar and residence: 6, 7, 11, 12, 14, 18, 26—28; and always regard and support God's ministers: 18, 19. (3) They must neither do as they now did in the wilderness, nor as the Canaanites had done in their worship: 8—11, 29—32. (4) They are allowed to eat flesh, but not any blood, at their respective homes, and are appointed to eat their share of the sacred oblations only at the Lord's special residence: 1—18, 20—25.

THESE are the [a] statutes and judgments which ye shall observe to do [b] in the land which the LORD God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, [c] all the days that ye live upon the earth.

2 [d] Ye shall utterly destroy all the places wherein the nations which ye shall possess [*] served their gods, upon the high [e] mountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree.

3 And ye shall [†] overthrow their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images of their gods, [f] and destroy the names of them out of that place.

4 ¶ Ye [g] shall not do so unto the LORD your God.

5 But [h] unto the place which the LORD your God shall choose out of all your tribes to put his name there, even unto his [‡] habitation* shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come:

16 [y] Only ye shall not eat the blood; ye shall pour it upon the earth as water.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Thus let my love to the LORD always work in holy obedience to all his commandments. Let the remembrance of his early kindness to me and mine, and his awful judgments on others around me, stir me up to the utmost circumspection in my conduct. God's mercies should leave an impression on us which neither time nor age should ever efface. And, while sins shorten men's days, and cause countries to spue out their inhabitants, yea, often into hell fire, let me carefully observe God's kindness, even in outward things. Mercies coming from the immediate hand of God are doubly sweet. Godliness hath the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come. But if we refuse to be influenced by God's mercies, we must sink under his judgments. When the heart is filled with the knowledge and love of God's word, the tongue will be as the pen of a ready writer in speaking of divine things. Let me, therefore, by all means, labour to fix a deep sense of spiritual things upon my own soul, and be careful to transmit the knowledge of them unto my seed: for true religion stamps a reverence on its professors, which keeps even their enemies in awe of them; and godliness, transmitted with our possessions, is the surest way to perpetuate them in our families. How plain and evident, in God's word, is the way to happiness and misery! And if men will not see, will not walk aright, their blood must be on their own head. Since, then, the blessings and curses of time and eternity are set before me in the gospel, let me choose Jesus, and his inexhaustible fulness of blessings, as my portion, and my everlasting ALL!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Abominable to God is all will-worship. And it is impossible to reconcile the worship of God and mammon—of Christ and Belial, 30 [n] Take heed to thyself, that thou be not snared [†] by following them, after that they be destroyed from before thee; and that thou inquire not after their gods, saying, How did these nations serve their gods? even so will I do likewise.

CHAPTER XIII.

Having warned the Israelites against the peril of idolatry, arising from their Canaanitish predecessors, he now guards them against the rise of idolatry from among themselves; charges them to resist the temptation, and inflict the punishment of death upon such as attempted to seduce them to it; whether (1) By pretence of inspired direction from God, and foretelling future events: 1—5; or (2) Of friendship and relation: 6—11; or (3) Of the numbers who had already practised it: 12—18.

2 And the sign or the wonder [c] come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them;

3 Thou shalt [d] not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the LORD your [*] God proveth you, to know whether ye love the LORD your God with all your heart, and with all your soul.

4 Ye [f] shall walk after the LORD your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him, and cleave unto him.

5 And that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams, shall be [g] put to death; because he hath [*] [h] spoken to turn you away from the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed you out of the house of bondage, to thrust thee out of the way which the LORD thy God commanded thee to walk in: so shalt thou [i] put the evil away from the midst of thee.

But, in the best ordered churches on earth, something will still be defective. Perfect purity is reserved for the heavenly Canaan: and therefore, in cases of necessity, some ordinances of worship may be omitted, which in other circumstances would render us highly culpable. The excellency of worship lies not in any pompous form, but in its exact correspondence with God's prescriptions. Let me then not merely cease from evil, but learn to do well. Let me attend to, and improve, every instituted ordinance of fellowship with God. Let his institutions, not any custom or law of men, whether under the best or the worst of governments, be the standard of my religious observances. Let not only my solemn eating and drinking at his table, but even my ordinary refreshments, be conducted according to his prescriptions, and intended chiefly for his glory. And never should his ministers be straitened, or his poor starved, while I am able to relieve them.

* There is nothing more remarkable in the Mosaic institutions than the perfect publicity of trial in the court, the accuser and the witnesses. Such publicity is, far above all other devices, the best protection both of private safety and public liberty. Even where the cause is more the cause of God than of man, and where idolatry is the charge, the accuser can whisper nothing in the private ear of jealous and self-interested authority; the accused cannot be charged with a crime unknown to himself, and entrapped by examinations, or forced by torture to bear witness against himself. The accusation must be public; the court must be public; the witnesses must be two or more; they must be confronted with the accused; witnesses must agree; and, finally, the accuser, if the accused be found guilty, must in this case, become, in his own person, one of the public executioners, thus committing his character in the openest manner, to the truth of the charge alleged.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Provoking to God, and dangerous to men, is the sin of idolatry, with respect to the object or means of worship; yet sinners are much set upon it, and need to be held back by the greatest restraints. With what care, what zeal, what impartiality, ministers and magistrates ought therefore to oppose the very first appearance of it! No testimony, however strongly supported, is admissible against the revealed truths of God. No pretence of inspiration from God, no semblance of miracles, no tie of natural affection, ought to make us connive at the seducers. Though temptations be doubly bewitching which come through those whom we love, and hope of secrecy and security in sin is a great snare to lead men into it, yet let us remember, that to conceal or protect such criminals is to render ourselves partakers in their crimes. If they are become obstinate in their evil way, they ought no longer to be reckoned as conscientiously mistaken persons, but as children of Belial, who are perfectly lost to all manner of virtue, and become nuisances and plagues to both church and state. If their quality or multitude protect them from human justice, the vengeance of God will shortly find them out; for all that depart from him shall surely perish. But, in our zeal

* Why give gratis to a stranger, or sell to an alien that which the Jew was himself forbidden to eat? (1) Because many beasts die of acute diseases, whose flesh is in a perfectly sound and nutritive condition; and this permissive law afforded an opportunity of bestowing in mercy to a stranger, what must have gone to feed the dogs or the wild beasts. (2) It seems to have been intended by this law to teach the Jew that God gave not the law to the Gentile by the standard of the ceremonial law; a lesson which, under the New Testament, it required a miraculous vision, and a messenger from heaven to inculcate upon an apostle; and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit to render tolerable in the church, Acts 10. 3, 9—15. & 11. 1—18.

AT the end of [a] every seven years thou shalt make a release.

2 And this is the manner of the release: Every [b] creditor that lendeth ought unto his neighbour shall release it; he shall not exact it of his neighbour, or of his brother; because it is called the LORD's release.

3 [b] Of a foreigner thou mayest exact it again; but that which is thine with thy brother thine hand shall release;

4 † Save when there shall be no poor among you; ‡ for the LORD shall [c] greatly bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it:

5 [d] Only if thou carefully hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all these commandments which I command thee this day.

6 For the LORD thy God blesseth thee, as he promised thee: and [e] thou shalt lend unto many nations, § but thou shalt not borrow; and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee.

7 ¶ If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates, in thy land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou [f] shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother;

8 [g] But thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth.

9 [h] Beware that there be not a ‖ thought in thy * wicked heart, saying, The seventh year, the year of release, is at hand; and thine eye be evil against thy poor brother, and thou givest him nought, and he cry unto the LORD against thee, and it be [i] sin unto thee.

10 Thou shalt [k] surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that for this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto.

11 For the [l] poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, [m] Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.

12 ¶ And [n] if thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman, be sold unto thee, and serve thee six years, then in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free from thee.

13 And when thou sendest him out free

‡ The translators have placed on their margin, a different rendering, thus—"to the end that there be no poor among you"—which brings this verse into perfect consistency with ver. 11, which says, "the poor shall never cease out of the land," that is, the poor will never cease from time to time to arise for trial and exercise of your compassion and liberality; and you shall never cease from time to time to pity and supply their wants, to the end that there be no permanent poor among you, because none unrelieved.—ED.

for the pure worship of God, we must at once testify our detestation of idolatry or superstition, and plainly manifest that in our zeal we have no eye to promote our own carnal advantage. And whatever power magistrates may have from God to punish such evil-doers, for the preservation of the true religion where it is, they can show no warrant for the exertion of force in the propagation of it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—If I am the Lord's; if, by his choice, his blood, his grace, his power, he hath distinguished me from the world; let me never affect conformity to the foolish, sinful, and barbarous customs of it. If God himself be my God and my ALL, let me never idolatrously mourn for the death of relations, as if I had nothing left, or had no hope. If my body be the temple of the Holy Ghost, bought with Jesus' blood, let me never disfigure or deform it. If I live on meat which cometh down from heaven, let me never dishonour my Provider and Portion by a base lusting after, or catching at, any thing earthly and vile. Such as are not satisfied with the lawful gratifications which God allows them, will never be satisfied in the gratification of their lawless lusts. And though, under the gospel, I am not so restricted from the flesh of animals, yet I am no less restricted from intimacy and fellowship with unclean sinners, and their works of darkness and death. Here likewise I may learn, that there is need of frequent and diligent assembling before God, to render us faithful in his service; that the ways of religion abound with joys and pleasures, and afford the surest grounds of thankfulness; and that there is the greatest advantage in kindness to God's ministers,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—In this year of release I behold the acceptable, the evangelical, and the eternal year of God's redeemed; in which we, infinite debtors to the law and justice of God, are justified from all things: and we, bond-sinners of mankind, are restored to our liberty, and enriched by his grace with blessings innumerable and everlasting. But let me think also how irreligious and inhumane is severity towards poor but honest debtors; it entails a curse upon our property. And it is base to make God's kindness to the poor an occasion of our unkindness to them. To refuse lending to them, if industrious, when we have God to be their surety, who will repay us with usury, is absurd: but especially it is dangerous to have their cry ascending to heaven against us. And often will it be found, what we call prudence, in withholding from them, is held extremely sinful and criminal before God. He knows and remarks every thought of our hearts; and it is not so much the gift, as the temper of the giver, that he regards. Servants likewise ought to be treated with tenderness and kindness, especially if found faithful.—It is important to watch against every suggestion which may divert us from our duty, or discourage us in it.—But while in these firstlings I see Jesus, and all his redeemed, devoted to the honour of God, according to their respective purity

‡ This passage has been confidently pleaded for the power assumed by the priests of Rome in matters of faith, and for the implicit obedience she exacts to her decrees. But the decretal power here allotted to the Jewish priests, (ver. 9, 12.) is not extended to any authoritative definitions or expositions in matters of doctrine or faith, but to civil cases, between plea and plea; cases of assault, between stroke and stroke; and cases of felony, between blood and blood. In fact, the Levitical priests were not merely the servants of the altar, but certain of them were the civil and criminal judges of the land; and, in this point of view, serve as no example to the Christian minister, who, like his Master, must say to all such secular offices and duties, "Who hath made me a divider over you?" Luke 12. 14.—Ed.

and stations, let me think with what exactness every thing belonging to the Lord ought to be used in his service in the very manner prescribed by himself.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Is it not shameful, that even the most solemn ordinances of our fellowship with God should need to be so frequently inculcated upon us? But since Jesus, our passover, hath been sacrificed for us, and our pentecost, the effusion of the Holy Ghost, by an ascended Saviour, is fully come, and the tabernacle of God is in manhood, and is with men upon earth; with holy joy and gladness, let us, and others instigated by us, observe our solemn feasts, and keep our eyes always fixed upon the Lamb of God. And while we ourselves are comforted of Christ, let us remember that it is both honourable and godlike to follow his example, and to manifest a tender regard to the poor and afflicted. Let us observe likewise, that magistrates are necessary for the regulation of mankind: and should be so placed, that people may have easy access to them; and it is becoming, that, in all their ministration, they show themselves of proper abilities, and remarkable integrity. But dangerous is it, in the worship of God, to copy after the example of wicked and idolatrous men; his worship is pure and spiritual; he regards not the external appearance; but they who worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—We ought to honour the Lord with the best that we have—the best of our time and abilities, the best of our age and strength. But apostasy from the true religion to the worship of idols is extremely wicked and ruinous. It is necessary that the execution of malefactors be as public and solemn 13 And all the people shall hear, and fear, and do no more presumptuously.

14 ¶ [o]When thou art come unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, [p]I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me;

15 Thou [q]shalt in any wise set him king over thee whom the LORD thy God shall choose: one from among thy brethren shalt thou set king over thee: thou mayest not set a stranger over thee, which is not thy brother.

16 But he shall not [r]multiply horses* to himself, nor cause the people to return to Egypt, to the end that he should multiply horses: forasmuch as the LORD hath said unto you, [s]Ye shall henceforth return no more that way.

17 Neither shall he [t]multiply wives to himself, that his heart turn not away; neither shall he [u]greatly multiply to himself silver and gold.

18 And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of [x]this law in a book, out of that which is before the priests the Levites:

19 And [y]it shall be with him, and he shall read therein all the days of his life; that he may learn to fear the LORD his God, to keep all the words of this law, and these statutes, to do them:

20 That [z]his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left; [a]to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he and his children, in the midst of Israel.

as possible, that others may hear and fear. But, in matters of life and death, nothing less than the clearest evidence should be admitted. Great care must be taken at once to maintain the just rights of subjects, and the lawful authority of magistrates: and we must obey, not only for wrath, but also for conscience' sake. To rebel against the lawful orders of government, is to commit treason against the majesty of heaven. But, in order to secure respect to their government, magistrates ought to be deliberately set up: they ought to avoid whatever gratifies their lust, or tends to corrupt them. God's word should be the supreme standard of their determinations. Piety, prudence, humble condescension, and equity, should run through the whole of their conduct. No day should pass without reading of God's word. The fear of God powerfully induces to an obedience to his commands. And the higher our station is, the more exemplary and humble our conversation ought to be. Religion is the best security of thrones, and every other honour: and, even in this world, there is a great reward in keeping God's commandments.

(1) Repetition of the law for the appointment of cities of refuge, and for the punishment of wilful murder: 1—13. (2) Of the removal of landmarks: 14. (3) The extent of proof necessary in criminal cases; and punishment of perjury: 15—21.

WHEN the LORD thy God [a]hath cut off the nations, whose land the LORD thy God giveth thee, and thou *succeedest them, and dwellest in their cities, and in their houses;

2 [b]Thou shalt separate three cities for thee in the midst of thy land,† which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

3 ‡Thou shalt prepare thee a way, and divide the coasts of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that [c]every slayer may flee thither.

4 ¶ And this is the case of the slayer which shall flee thither, that he may live: Whoso killeth his neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not §in time past;

5 As when a man goeth into the wood with his neighbour to hew wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the axe to cut down the tree, and ‖the head slippeth from the *helve, and †lighteth upon his neighbour, that he die; [d]he shall flee unto one of those cities, and live:

6 Lest the [e]avenger of the blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot, and overtake him, because the way is long, and ‡slay him; whereas he was [f]not worthy of death, inasmuch as he hated him not §in time past.

7 Wherefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt separate three cities for thee.

8 And if the LORD thy God [g]enlarge thy coast, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, and give thee all the land which he promised to give unto thy fathers:

9 [h]If thou shalt keep all these commandments to do them, which I command thee this day, to love the LORD thy God, and to walk ever in his ways; then shalt thou add *three cities more for thee, besides these three:

10 [i]That innocent blood be not shed in thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and so blood be upon thee.

11 ¶ But [k]if any man hate his neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him †mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these cities;

12 Then the elders of his city shall send [l]and fetch him thence, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die.

13 [m]Thine eye shall not pity him; but thou shalt put away the guilt of innocent blood from Israel, that it may go well with thee.

14 ¶ [n]Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's land-mark,‡ which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

15 ¶ [o]One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established.

16 ¶ If a false witness rise up against any man, to testify against him §that which is wrong;

17 Then both the men, between whom the controversy is, shall stand [p]before the LORD, before the priests and the judges which shall be in those days:

18 And the judges shall [q]make diligent inquisition: and, behold, if the witness be a false witness, and hath testified falsely against his brother;

19 [r]Then shall ye do unto him as he had thought to have done unto his brother: so shalt thou put the evil away from among you.

20 And those which remain shall *hear, and fear, and shall henceforth commit no more any such evil among you.

21 And thine eye shall not pity; but [t]life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

God, accordingly, prohibits this sin, by sanctioning the prescriptive usages of antiquity, and asserting his own original gift of the land to Abraham and his descendants.—ED.

‖ Suits at law frequently originate from dishonesty, from covetousness, or from a contentious and revengeful spirit. But, such is the obscurity of rights, and the uncertainty of evidence, that they may originate where both parties are honest, disinterested and peaceable. The only case in which a Christian may go to law in defence of his rights, is, when he can "stand before the Lord," and refer to his examination and decision, both the justice of his cause, and the purity of his motives.—ED.

ministers, they ought never willingly to entangle themselves in worldly business; farming, merchandise, or the like: for those who love God's ordinances as they ought, will not grudge to contribute to their support. None ought to supplant another with respect to what the Lord hath allotted him. But a worldly-minded minister is a SCANDAL to his profession—a LIVING LIE! God, indeed, most highly regards such ministers as leave their worldly all, and follow him, and do more in the church than men could desire of them. But it is shocking to find in countries, privileged with gospel light, affecters of fellowship with devils, in charms, fortune-telling, witchcraft, and the like! and what a mercy it is if God has preserved us from these abominations! But, Oh! infinite grace! in order to destroy the work, and deliver us from the delusions of the devil, God raises up his Son, a prophet, who knows the whole mind of God, and who reveals a complete system of worship! Blessed are those who hear his voice; and infinite is the hazard and ruin of such as refuse to regard him! But since seducers arise in the church of God, it is necessary to try all, and to censure and punish such as are found notorious impostors.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—While in these cities of refuge I again view a crucified Redeemer, as my near and all-sufficient protection, and his ministers as assisting and directing me in my flight to it, plain and open is my way to it, and my warrant to enter. Yet so great is our ignorance, our unconcern, our unbelief, that we need many and repeated descriptions of him, and encouragements to flee to him; and God graciously affords them in his word. 2 And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the battle, that the [c]priest shall approach and speak unto the people,

3 And shall say unto them, Hear, O Israel; Ye approach this day unto battle against your enemies: let not your hearts [*]faint; fear not, and do not [†]tremble, [d]neither be ye terrified because of them:

4 For the LORD your God is he that goeth with you, to fight for you against your enemies, to save you.

5 ¶ And the [e]officers shall speak unto the people, saying, What man is there that hath built a new house, and hath not [f]dedicated it? [‡]let him go and return to his house, lest he [g]die in the battle, and another man dedicate it.

6 And what man is he that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not yet [h]eaten of it? let him also go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man eat of it.

7 [i]And what man is there that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? let him go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man take her.

8 And the officers shall speak further unto the people, and they shall say, [k]What man is there that is fearful and faint-hearted? let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart [‖]faint as well as his heart.

9 And it shall be, when the officers have made an end of speaking unto the people, that they shall make [¶]captains of the armies [1]to lead the people.

10 ¶ When thou comest nigh unto [m]a city to fight against it, then [n]proclaim peace unto it.

11 And it shall be, if it make thee answer of peace, and open unto thee, then it shall be, that all the people that is found therein shall be [o]tributaries unto thee, and they shall serve thee.

12 And if it will [p]make no peace with thee, but will make war against thee, then thou shalt besiege it:

13 And when the [q]LORD thy God hath delivered it into thine hands, thou shalt smite every male thereof with the edge of the sword:

14 But the women, and the little ones, and [r]the cattle, and all that is in the city, even all the spoil thereof, shalt thou [*]take unto thyself; and thou shalt eat the spoil of thine enemies, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

15 Thus shalt thou do unto [†]all the cities which are very far off from thee, which are not of the cities of these nations.

16 ¶ But [s]of the cities of these people, which the LORD thy God doth give thee for an inheritance, thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth: [‡]

17 But thou shalt utterly destroy them: namely, the Hittites, and the Amorites, the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee:

18 That they [t]teach you not to do after all their abominations, which they have done unto their gods; so should ye sin against the LORD your God.

19 ¶ When thou shalt besiege a city a [‖]long time, in making war against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees thereof by forcing an axe against them: for thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down, ([‖]for the tree of the field is man's life,) [*]to employ them in the siege:

20 Only the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat,[†] thou shalt destroy and cut them down; and thou shalt build bulwarks against the city that maketh war with thee, until [‡]it be subdued.

† In warm climates, fresh or preserved fruits constitute a principal article of food: a law for the preservation of fruit trees was, therefore, an ordinance of equal wisdom and humanity. the promise! But desperate is their case who sin presumptuously, and refuse this great salvation! Nay, how criminal, in God's sight, must wilful murder be, when nothing less than the blood of the offender can be admitted as the punishment of it! Every thing that marks out and ascertains men's property should be exactly preserved, that so disputes and unjust evasions may be prevented: and witnesses should be examined in the courts of judicature with accuracy and care, that none may suffer unjustly through false witnessing, and none that dare to bear false witness may escape condign punishment.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—While we remark how carefully piety towards God, tenderness towards others, and prudence towards ourselves, should be carried into war itself, let us ponder how necessary it is that armies and churches should be furnished with faithful ministers to encourage them in the Lord their God! Hopeful is the most difficult work when we are assured of God's presence in it, and encouraged with the former experience of what he hath done for us! Then we can triumph, in hopes of being more than conquerors through him that loved us. But there is little hope of men's prospering in their duty when their affections are engaged elsewhere: and therefore carnal worldlings, who are intoxicated with pleasure in temporal enjoyments, or the fearful and unbelieving, are unfit to fight with principalities and powers. God must be served heartily and willingly, or not at all. And, though every saint ought to be courageous, yet ministers, who go before the host in fighting the Lord's battles, need distinguished boldness. Amazing is the mercy and long-suffering of God; he is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance! And surely then we ought to be forward in accepting, or even offering, terms of peace to such as have offended us! But dreadful is the case if men will not hear the calls of God's mercy, or if the preservation of his people make it necessary to ruin them: for infallibly certain is the success of those enterprises in which God is the director! It is necessary to remove all occasions and temptations to idolatry, or other wickedness, and to preserve every means of comfort, as God pleases to direct us.

IF [a] one be found slain in the [b] land which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it, lying in the field, and it be not known who hath slain him;

2 Then [c] thy elders and thy judges shall come forth,* and they shall measure unto the cities which are round about him that is slain:

3 And it shall be, that the city which is next unto the slain man, even the elders of that city shall take an [d] heifer, which hath not been wrought with, and which hath not drawn in the yoke;

4 And the elders of that city shall bring down the heifer unto a [e] rough valley, which is neither eared nor sown, and shall strike off the heifer's neck there in the valley:

5 And the priests, the sons of Levi, shall come near; (for them the LORD thy God [f] hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the name of the LORD;) and [g] by their [†] word shall every controversy and every stroke be tried.

6 And all the elders of that city, that are next unto the slain man, shall [h] wash their hands over the heifer that is beheaded in the valley:

7 And they shall answer and say, Our hands have not shed this blood, neither have our eyes seen it.

8 Be merciful, O LORD, unto thy people Israel, whom thou hast redeemed, and [k] lay not innocent blood [‡] unto thy people of Israel's charge. And the blood shall be forgiven them.

9 So shalt thou put away the guilt of innocent blood from among you, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

10 ¶ When thou goest forth to war against [l] thine enemies, and the LORD thy God hath delivered them into thine hands, and thou hast taken them captive,

11 And seest among the captives a beautiful woman, and hast a [m] desire unto her, that thou wouldest have her to thy wife;

12 Then thou shalt bring her home to thine house, and she shall [n] shave her head, and [§] [‖] pare her nails;

13 And she shall put the raiment of her captivity from off her, and shall remain in thine house, and [o] bewail her father and her mother a full month: and after that thou shalt go in unto her, and be her husband, and she shall be thy wife.*

14 And it shall be, if thou have no delight in her, then thou [p] shalt let her go whither she will; but thou shalt not sell her at all for money, thou shalt not make merchandise of her, because thou hast humbled her.

15 ¶ If a man [q] have two wives, one beloved, and another hated, and they have born him children, both the beloved and the hated; and if the first-born son be her's that was hated:

16 Then it shall be, when he [r] maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved first-born before the son of the hated, which is indeed the first-born:

17 But he [s] shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the first-born, by giving him a double portion of all * that he hath: for he is the beginning of his strength; the right of the first-born is his.

18 ¶ If a man [t] have a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that, when they have chastened him, will not hearken unto them;

19 Then shall his father and his mother lay hold on him, and bring him out [u] unto the elders of his city, and unto the gate of his place;

20 And they shall say unto the elders of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice; [x] he is a glutton and a drunkard.

21 And [y] all the men of his city shall stone him with stones that he die: so [z] shalt thou put evil away from among you; and all Israel shall hear, and fear.

22 ¶ And if a man have committed a sin [a] worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou [b] hang him on a tree;

23 His body shall not [c] remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day; (for [d] he that is hanged is [†] accursed of God;) that [e] thy land be not defiled, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Murder ought by all means to be rendered as horrible and detested as possible: and every mean should be used to discover and bring murderers to condign punishment, and to avoid being partakers with other men in their sins; but, at the same time, no selfish affection ought to be regarded either in the giving or executing justice. However secretly sin be committed, God will discover and punish it at last: and if we cannot put away sin from our land, let us labour to pray it away.—Converts from idolatry ought not too rashly to be admitted into close connexion with us: and, before we take a partner for life, it is of infinite moment that we agree in religion.—Sudden passions ought to be restrained, till grace be given, and time taken for reflection: and we should labour to wean our affections from that which we inordinately love.—Kindness ought to be shown to such as God has sovereignly reduced to misery and trouble; and indulgence be allowed to sorrows which flow from natural affection.—Our engagements ought never to be rashly formed, lest our honour or conscience be afterwards wounded by them: and such as have been any ways wronged by us, are entitled to all possible satisfaction. But surely still greater regard ought to be shown to human souls, and care taken to prevent men's everlasting infamy and wo. But in these figures let me behold Jesus, the seed of the woman, brought down to our world, and slain by the rulers of Israel as an expiation for our murderous crimes!—Jesus reserving a bride for himself, a glorious church of the Gentiles, and betrothing her to himself for ever in loving-kindness and in mercies!—Jesus, with whom there is no respect of persons, redeeming us from the curse of the law, and by his crucifixion in our stead, removing the iniquity of the land in one day!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—What love, what decency, what humanity, what order, the laws of God inculcate! Surely it highly becomes us to remember and observe them. In what detestation God holds slanderers, whoremongers, adulterers, and unclean persons! Let them then be detestable among all Christians, especially in my heart. Let me be ever ready for friendly offices towards my neighbour. Let me never retain any thing of his that came secretly into my hands. Let it be my care to please God in my apparel: for indecency in dress is not the less sinful because it is fashionable. And, while I regard the life of my neighbour, let me shun every unhallowed mixture of works with grace: of nature with the Spirit of God; of my own righteousness with that of Jesus Christ: but never be ashamed to wear the distinguished badge of a true Christian. Let me reckon chastity a very precious jewel; and yet a tender plant that can easily be blasted; and the loss of which is very infamous and sinful. Always let me use every mean of resisting temptation, and particularly crying to Jesus for relief. And, if I wrong any, let me repair the injury as far as lies in my power, according to the law of God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—It is unseemly for saints to connect themselves in intimacy or marriage with profane persons: but whoremongers unnaturally mark their innocent posterity with shame and disgrace. God severely resents the injury done to his people in the day of their distress. But we ought quickly to forget the evil done to us by our relations or others; and carefully to remember the favours which we have received. Purity and cleanliness should be studied

A. M. 2553. B. C. 1451.

WHEN a [a] man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found [*] some uncleanness in her; then let him write her a bill of [†] divorcement, and give it in her hand, and [‡] send her out of his house.

2 And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and [b] be another man's wife.

3 And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement, and giveth it in her hand, and sendeth her out of his house; or if the latter husband die, which took her to be his wife;

4 [c] Her former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife, after that she is defiled; for that is abomination before the LORD: and thou shalt not [d] cause the land to sin, [e] which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

5 ¶ [f] When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, [§] neither shall he be charged with any business; but he shall be free at home one year, and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken.

6 ¶ [g] No man shall take the nether or the upper millstone to pledge: for he taketh a man's [h] life to pledge.

7 ¶ [i] If a man be found stealing any of his brethren of the children of Israel, and maketh merchandise of him, or selleth him; then that thief shall die: and thou shalt put evil away from among you.

8 ¶ [k] Take heed in the plague of leprosy, that thou observe diligently, and do according to all that the priests the Levites shall teach you; as I commanded them, so ye shall observe to do.

9 ¶ [l] Remember what the LORD thy God did unto Miriam by the way, after that ye were come forth out of Egypt.

10 ¶ When thou dost [‖] lend thy brother any thing, thou shalt not go into his house to fetch his pledge.

11 Thou shalt stand abroad, and the man to whom thou dost lend shall bring out the pledge abroad unto thee.

12 And if the man be poor, thou shalt not sleep with his pledge:

13 [m] In any case thou shalt deliver him the pledge again when the sun goeth down, that he may sleep in his own raiment, and bless thee; and it [n] shall be righteousness [*] unto thee before the LORD thy God.

14 ¶ [o] Thou shalt not oppress an hired servant that is poor and needy, whether he be of thy brethren, or of thy strangers that are in thy land within thy gates:

15 [p] At his day thou shalt give him his hire, neither shall the sun go down upon it; for he is poor, and [q] setteth his heart upon it: lest he cry against thee unto the LORD, and it be sin unto thee.

16 ¶ [r] The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers: every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

17 ¶ [s] Thou shalt not pervert the judgment of the stranger, nor of the fatherless, nor take the widow's raiment to pledge:

18 But [t] thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee thence: therefore I command thee to do this thing.

19 ¶ [u] When thou cuttest down thine harvest in thy field, and hast forgot a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow; that the LORD thy God [x] may bless thee in all the work of thine hands.[†]

20 When thou beatest thine olive-tree, [‡] thou shalt not go over the boughs again: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow.

21 When thou [y] gatherest the grapes of thy vineyard, thou shalt not glean it [§] afterward: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow.

22 [z] And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt: therefore I command thee to do this thing.

together with godliness, as they are both healthful and honourable, especially that of the heart and life, before God. How becoming is a tender compassion towards the afflicted, especially young converts to Christ! For great is the mercy of God to such—he will never deliver up a poor fugitive, that flees to him from the servitude of sin, or of the broken law. Let me admire his grace, and imitate his goodness—let me carefully abstain from fleshly lusts, which provoke God, and war against my soul. In all my dealings, let brotherly love continue. And if I have vowed unto the Lord, let me in no wise go back. Let me be kind to strangers, ready to distribute, and never insist upon trifling rights and claims.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—Harmony in sin often issues in mutual hatred and angry separation. And it is mournful to observe, that, for the cruelty and hatred of husbands to wives, or other injurious effects of sin, God should see it necessary to permit the divorcement of them. But such a separation ought to be taken with great deliberation, as there is such hardship connected with it, and no recalling of it. Happy is it when the mutual affection of married persons is fixed at first, and remains with prudent tenderness. How necessary is it to observe God's ordinances, however shameful they may be to us! It is better now to confess our sin, and be pardoned, than to conceal it and be damned. Superiors, and especially judges, who are the substitutes of God, ought to conduct themselves in every case with equity and truth. And with great compassion ought we to treat our neighbours, especially the poor, as their circumstances may require: though they cannot recompense us with their wealth or labour, they may do it with their prayers. And let us consider the great compassion God has towards them. But how great his kindness in leaving to us, sinners of the Gentiles, in his word, such plentiful gleanings of divine truth!

‡ This order has been stigmatized by infidels as implacable resentment, and unnatural perpetuation of an old injury. It is, however, neither the one nor the other. It is a righteous command to punish a wicked nation, according to their wickedness. Time may appease resentment, but can never change crime. Murderers who had escaped punishment long, have been condemned to death by the most civilized modern nations, after a lapse of half a century. Why should the infidel censure Moses for what all just laws enforce?—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—Inhuman cruelty, even towards evil-doers, nay, towards brute beasts, especially when serviceable to us, is very unbecoming the professors of Christianity. It is impossible to force affection, or to render a marriage happy without it. But the Christian in every situation must attend to the path of duty: and they deserve reproach themselves who give occasion to cast reproach on others. What fearful shame and dishonour must then await those ministers and Christians who reproach, and attempt to ruin, Christ and his church, by refusing to exert themselves in winning souls to them! Nothing is more shocking in a woman than immodesty, whether it be in the outrage of passion, or in wanton lewdness. When once the hedge of modesty is broken through, the grossest unchastity may soon follow. Detestable to God, and hurtful to the user at last, is every act of fraud and dishonesty: and terrible and lasting, though often slow in the execution, is God's vengeance against the unprovoked injurers of his people.

7 And when we cried unto the LORD God of our fathers, the LORD heard our voice, and looked on our affliction, and our labour, and our oppression:

8 And the LORD [1] brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with great terribleness, and with signs, and with wonders:

9 And [m] he hath brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, even a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 And now, behold, [n] I have brought the first-fruits of the land which thou, O LORD, hast given me. And thou shalt set it before the LORD thy God, and worship before the LORD thy God.

11 And thou [o] shalt rejoice in every good thing which the LORD thy God hath given unto thee, and unto thine house, thou, and the Levite, and the stranger that is among you.

12 ¶ When thou hast made an end of tithing all the tithes of thine increase the third year, which is [p] the year of tithing, and hast given it unto the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, that they may eat within thy gates, and be filled;*

13 Then thou shalt say before the LORD thy God, I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, to the fatherless, and to the widow, according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me: I have not transgressed thy commandments, neither have I forgotten them:

14 I have [q] not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use, nor given ought thereof for the dead:† but I have hearkened to the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me:

15 [r] Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

16 ¶ [s] This day the LORD thy God hath commanded thee to do these statutes and judgments: [t] thou shalt therefore keep and do them with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

17 Thou hast [u] avouched‡ the LORD this day to be thy God, and [x] to walk in his ways, and to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and to hearken unto his voice:

AND Moses, with the elders of Israel, commanded the people, saying, [a] Keep all the commandments which I command you this day.

2 And it shall be, on the day [b] when ye shall pass over Jordan unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, that thou shalt set thee up [c] great stones, and plaster them with plaster.*

3 And thou [d] shalt write upon them all the words of this law, when thou art passed over; that thou mayest go in unto [e] the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, a land that floweth with milk and honey; as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee.

4 Therefore it shall be, [e] when ye be gone over Jordan, that ye shall set up these stones, which I command you this day, in mount Ebal, and thou shalt plaster them with plaster.

5 And there [f] shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones: thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them.

10 [l] Thou shalt therefore obey the voice of the LORD thy God, and do his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day.

11 ¶ And Moses charged the people the same day, saying,

* That the Hebrews were versant in castings in brass and other metals, and acquainted with cutting on stone, even precious stones, there can be no doubt. Why then are these stones merely plastered? An emblem, most probably, of the superficial impression the law was to make upon Israel: easily impressed, but easily effaced—a fact, which their facility in promising obedience, and readiness to forget and rebel repeatedly testifies.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—God faithfully and exactly fulfils his promises, even to the most unworthy. And a grateful acknowledgment thereof, and of our own meanness and guilt, is but a just tribute to him for his goodness. Past deliverances, granted to ourselves or others, ought never to be forgotten: and all our gifts of providence, as well as of redemption, must be acknowledged as coming from God's hand. The first and best thereof of all that we have ought to be offered up to his service: and our earthly blessings will then be doubly sweet to us when we receive them as coming to us from God's mercy and love. Let our distributions to the Lord's ministers and poor be such as we can answer for at the judgment-seat of God. Faithfulness in these will draw his blessing on our enjoyments; but, if we rob him in them, we may expect his curse on our basket and on our store. Let us then be hearty friends and wellwishers to the welfare of his church and people.

† There are those who profess approbation of the law of God, as a system beautiful, pure, and perfect in its morality, and who conclude that such approval is all that the law requires. But no approval, short of fulfilment can satisfy the law, or constitute legal righteousness. Neither can any partial observance of a few precepts suffice to satisfy the law, and atone for the breach of the remaining requirements. In truth, a partial observance is impossible; for "he that offends in one point, is guilty of all." The sinner has no refuge but Christ "made a curse for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.—ED.

* Whether this promise includes political, commercial, literary, and military superiority, is of little consequence before God, however highly estimated with men. Real superiority lies not in these things, but in the knowledge of God, in the possession of his oracles, ordinances, grace, and promises—in all these, and notwithstanding their sins, the Jews are "high above all nations." But their preeminence lies chiefly in this, that of them, "according to the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen."—ED.

Let our covenant relation to God, our solemn obligation in it, and the honours which he has given or promised to us, excite us to the most exact and universal obedience to his laws.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—Such as are in authority ought to exert all their influence in promoting the service of God. And when ministers and magistrates show themselves zealous in their station for God, people are ready to follow their example. Every privilege that we enjoy ought to be an incitement to universal holiness: and God's law is so plain, that every one may attain a moderate knowledge of it; but, to become effectual, it must be written on our hard hearts by the Spirit of God; and all obedience to it must be founded on the atoning and peace-procuring blood of Jesus Christ. In this order, what solid peace and joy are found in believing, and in cordial dedication of ourselves to God's service! In keeping his commandments a blessed reward of grace is to be expected: but most terrible curses await those who, after professed subjection to God, and solemn acquiescence in his law and sanctions of it, do voluntarily apostatize from his ways, and indulge themselves in secret or open wickedness.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. XXVIII.—This chapter is nearly allied to Lev. xxvi. 3—39: only it more largely insists upon the mercies, and especially the judgments, that were to befall the Israelites after their entrance into Canaan, till the end of the world. It is not to be considered as a mere sanction of the laws formerly declared, but also as a real prediction of future events. The first fourteen verses had their accomplishment in the various mercies which the Jews met with before their last dispersion by the Romans: particularly in the days of Joshua; chap. iii—xxiv.; in the rests under the Judges; Judg. iii. 11, 30, 31. and viii. 28.; and under Samuel; 1 Sam. 5. 2.—David; 2 Sam. v, x. 1 Chr. xii—xxix.—Solomon; 1 Kings i, x. 2 Chron. i—ix.—Asa; 1 Kings xv. 9—15. 2 Chr. xiii—xvi.—Jehoshaphat; 2 Chr. xvii—xx.—Joash; 2 Kings xi, xii. 2 Chr. xxiii, xxiv.—Uzziah and Jotham; 2 Chr. xxvi, xxvii.—Hezekiah; 2 Kings xviii, xix. Is. xxxvi, xxxvii. 2 Chr. xxix—xxxii.—Josiah; 2 Kings xxii, xxiii. 2 Chr. xxxiv, xxxv.; and in the days of Ezra; i—x. and of Esther; i—x. and of Neh. i—x; and under the Maccabees, Judas, Jonathan, Simon, Hircanus, and Alexander Janneus, from about one hundred and sixty, to about eighty years before Christ's birth.—From ver. 15. to the end are delineated the various and manifold miseries which their sin should bring upon them, from thei

12 The LORD [p] shall open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven to give the rain unto thy land in his season, and to bless all the work of thine hand: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow.

13 And the LORD [q] shall make thee the head, and not the tail; and thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath; [r] if that thou hearken unto the commandments of the LORD thy God, which I command thee this day, to observe and to do them:

14 And thou shalt [s] not go aside from any of the words which I command thee this day, to the right hand, or to the left, to go after other gods to serve them.

15 ¶ But it shall come to pass, [t] if thou wilt not hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day, that [u] all these curses shall come upon thee, and overtake thee.

16 [x] Cursed* shalt thou be in the city, and cursed shalt thou be in the field.

17 [y] Cursed shall be thy basket and thy store.

18 [z] Cursed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy land, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

19 [a] Cursed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and cursed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

20 [b] The LORD shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke, in all that thou settest thine hand unto † for to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me.

21 The LORD [c] shall make the pestilence cleave unto thee, until he have consumed thee from off the land, whither thou goest to possess it.

22 [d] The LORD shall smite thee with a consumption, and with a fever, and with an inflammation, and with an extreme burning, ‡ and with the § sword, and with blasting, and with mildew; and they shall pursue thee until thou perish.

23 And thy [e] heaven that is over thy head shall be brass, ‖ and the earth that is under thee shall be iron.

24 The LORD shall [f] make the rain of thy land powder and dust:* from heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

25 The LORD [g] shall cause thee to be smitten before thine enemies: thou shalt go out one way against them, and flee seven ways before them; and shalt be [h] removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.*

26 And thy ‖ carcass shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray them away.

27 The LORD will [k] smite thee with the botch of Egypt, and with the emerods, and with the scab, and with the itch, whereof thou canst not be healed.†

28 The LORD shall ‖ smite thee with madness, and blindness, and astonishment of heart:

29 And thou shalt [m] grope at noon-day, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways; and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore, and no man shall save thee.

30 Thou shalt [n] betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: thou shalt build an house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not ‡ gather the grapes thereof.

31 Thine ox shall be slain before thine eyes, and thou shalt not eat thereof: thine ass shall be violently taken away from before thy face, § and shall not be restored to thee: thy sheep shall be given unto thine enemies, and thou shalt have none to rescue them.

32 Thy [o] sons and thy daughters shall be given unto another people, and thine eyes shall look, and fail with longing for them all the day long: and there shall be no § might in thine hand.

33 The [p] fruit of thy land, and all thy labours, shall a nation which thou knowest not eat up; and thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed alway:

34 So that thou shalt [q] be mad for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

35 The LORD shall [r] smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of thy head.

36 The LORD shall § bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone.

Such of them, or of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who returned to their own land by order from Cyrus, (Ezra I.) were not only harassed by the neighbouring nations of Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Arabians, Philistines, and others, but also by the Persian and Grecian emperors; but most terribly by Occhus the Persian, about three hundred and fifty; and Antiochus Epiphanes; (Dan. viii. 23—25. and xi. 28—35.) about one hundred and sixty years before Christ. ‖ The Chaldeans were comparatively near to Judea, and their language was a kindred dialect of the Hebrew. The Romans, however, were from afar, and their language totally unknown to the Jews. The Roman standard was an eagle, the appropriate emblem of their soaring pride, their far-sighted cupidity, their swift descent, and their insatiable rapacity.—ED.

‖ When we read of the attempt made to extirpate the Jews by Haman, (Esther 3. 6.); when we read in Josephus how atleast, 1,100,000 perished in the siege of Jerusalem, while 90,000 were carried captive; and when we read in Roman history the subsequent persecutions they endured; when we examine their more modern history (see, for example, Adam's History of the Jews,) and observe how frequent and determined have been the efforts at their extirpation, we are astonished the Jews are so many—some think 1,500,000, some more, but the amount is uncertain—still, when compared with their ancient numbers, they are reduced to few. But the Lord has still a seed amongst, and "a remnant according to the election of grace," therefore are they nationally preserved.—ED.

x Ch. 30. 9. Jer. 32. 41.

52 And he shall [m] besiege thee in all thy gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down, wherein thou trustedst, throughout all thy land; and he shall besiege thee in all thy gates, throughout all thy land, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

53 And [n] thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own * body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, † which the LORD thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee:

54 So that the man that is tender among you, and very delicate, [o] his eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward the wife of his bosom, and toward the remnant of his children which he shall leave:

55 So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children, whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in [p] the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates.

56 [q] The tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter,

57 And toward her ‡ young one that cometh out from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear: for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates.

58 If [r] thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book, that thou mayest fear this glorious and fearful name, THE LORD THY GOD;

59 Then the LORD * will make thy plagues wonderful, and the plagues of thy seed, even great plagues, and of long continuance, and sore sicknesses, and of long continuance.

60 Moreover, he will bring upon thee [t] all the diseases of Egypt, which thou wast afraid of; and they shall cleave unto thee:

61 Also every sickness, and every plague, which is not written in the book of this law, them will the LORD § bring upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

62 And ye shall be left [u] few in number, ‖ whereas ye were as the stars of heaven for multitude; because thou wouldest not obey the voice of the LORD thy God.

63 And it shall come to pass, that, as the LORD [x] rejoiced over you to do you good, and

Romans repeated their terrible slaughter of such Jews as they found in Canaan, and even in other places of their empire; and annual fairs were held for the sale of the captives. Since which, hated of all nations in Europe, Asia, or Africa, among which they have been dispersed, and often deluded by pretenders to Messiahship, they have, for these seventeen hundred years, been distressed with the most fearful calamities, persecutions, and massacres, from the Persians, Saracens, Turks, and Christians; but chiefly the Greeks, Spaniards, French, English, and Germans.

Thus every promise or threatening respecting the Jewish nation is but a repetition or enlargement of what we have in this chapter and the first part of the XXX. 1—9; and every event of Providence respecting that nation, from their entrance into Canaan till the end of time, is the accomplishment thereof.—See Introduction.

to multiply you; so the LORD will [y] rejoice over you to destroy you, and to bring you to nought: and ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it.

64 And the LORD shall [z] scatter* thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other; and there thou shalt serve other gods,† which neither thou nor thy fathers have known, even wood and stone.

65 And [a] among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest:‡ but the LORD shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind:

66 And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life.

67 In the morning thou shalt say, [b] Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

68 And the LORD shall [c] bring thee into Egypt again with ships, by the way whereof I spake unto thee, Thou shalt see it no more again: and there ye shall be sold unto your enemies for bond-men and bond-women, and no man shall buy you.

(1) A rehearsal of God's remarkable favours, as an incitement to keep the covenant: 2—9. (2) A solemn charge to fulfil this covenant: 9—15. (3) The great end of the covenant to preserve from that idolatry: 16—18. (4) A dreadful denunciation of God's vengeance against those who should presumptuously promise themselves peace in idolatry or other sinful courses: 18—28. (5) A declaration of the general end of God's revelations to men: 29.

THESE [a] are the words of the covenant which the LORD commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the land of Moab, besides the covenant which he made with them in Horeb.*

2 ¶ And Moses called unto all Israel, and said unto them, [b] Ye have seen all that the LORD did before your eyes in the land of Egypt unto Pharaoh, and unto all his servants, and unto all his land;

3 The [c] great temptations which thine eyes have seen, the signs, and those great miracles;

4 Yet the LORD hath not [d] given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day.

5 And I have led [e] you forty years in the wilderness: your clothes are not waxen old upon you, and thy shoe is not waxen old upon thy foot.*

* Some think these words simply mean that they had been providentially enabled to supply new raiment by their own industry. Had this been the case, why should the matter be mentioned as any thing remarkable? The reference of Moses seems to be raiment miraculously preserved; for it is conjoined (ver. 6.) to food miraculously given. How strange, some may say, that forty years of such miraculous evidence, had not led the people to know, to love, and obey the Lord! Alas! why do men wonder at this stupidity! Do not threescore years and ten still pass away amidst greater evidence, and with less regard or improvement!—ED.

6 Ye have not [f] eaten bread, neither have ye drunk wine or strong drink; that ye might know that I am the LORD your God.

7 And when ye came unto this place, [g] Sihon the king of Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, came out against us unto battle, and we smote them:

8 And we took their land, and gave it for an inheritance unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh.

9 [h] Keep therefore the words of this covenant, and do them, that ye may prosper in all that ye do.

10 ¶ [i] Ye stand this day all of you before the LORD your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Israel,

11 Your little ones, your wives, and thy [k] stranger that is in thy camp, from [l] the hewer of thy wood unto the drawer of thy water;

12 That thou shouldest † [m] enter into covenant with the LORD thy God, and into his oath, which the LORD thy God maketh with thee this day;

13 That he may [n] establish thee to-day for a people unto himself, and that he may be unto thee a God, as he hath said unto thee, and as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.‡

14 Neither with you only do I make this covenant and this oath;

15 But with him that standeth here with us this day before the LORD our God, and also with him that is [o] not here with us this day:

16 (For ye know [p] how we have dwelt in the land of Egypt, and how we came through the nations which ye passed by;

17 And ye have seen their abominations, and their § idols, wood and stone, silver and gold, which were among them:)

18 [q] Lest there should be among you man, or woman, or family, or tribe, whose heart turneth away this day from the LORD our God, to go and serve the gods of these nations; lest there should be among you a root that beareth ‖ * gall and wormwood; sinful men!—What blessings on soul and body!—what blessings, in time and in eternity, his love can bestow! Let us therefore be steadfast, immoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. In keeping his commandments there is a great and gracious reward. But who can stand before this holy, this jealous, this great and dreadful Lord God, if once he be angry? Deep and large is the cup of indignation that is in his right hand; the dregs of which the wicked must wring out and drink. Let the sinners in Zion be afraid. Let fearfulness surprise the hypocrites. Who among us shall dwell with devouring fire? who shall dwell with everlasting burnings? In this dreadful cluster of threatenings, let us observe that sin is the only deserving cause of trouble; and that God, in innumerable forms, can execute his vengeance on the bodies, the minds, the families, the nations, the property, of his opposers. Let the tremendous condition of the Jewish nation, when oppressed by Mesopotamians, Moabites, Canaanites, Midianites, Ammonites, Philistines, Syrians, Persians, Greeks, and others; and when harassed, murdered, and carried into captivity, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Romans; and all the miseries which they have suffered in their present dispersion, of more than seventeen hundred years' continuance, establish my faith in God's word:—and let it warn the British nation, and those connected with her, to take heed to themselves, lest their contempt of Christ, their breach of covenant with God, and other abounding wickedness, entail upon them similar judgments.

21 And the LORD shall [a] separate him unto evil out of all the tribes of Israel, according to all the curses of the covenant that [§] are written in this book of the law:

22 So that the generation to come of your children that shall rise up after you, and the stranger that shall come from a far land, shall say, when they see the plagues of that land, and the sicknesses [‖] which the LORD hath laid upon it;

(1) Promises for encouraging Israel to repent; particularly in the latter days, after their dispersion: 1—10. (2) The righteousness of faith set before them in the plainness and easiness of the injunctions given them: 11—14. (3) Death or life, blessing or cursing, for their choice: 15—20.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—Unbelief and unconcern are so deep rooted within us, that, till God himself enlighten and renew our heart, we can never know, love, or serve him. Many of the most affecting providences pass unheeded by ignorant and unbelieving men: and yet a right observation of providence would powerfully induce us to a solemn surrendering of ourselves to God, and a careful fulfilment of our vows. Holy obedience is so contrary to the heart of man, that, notwithstanding we are already bound by the infinite authority of God's law, we need to be also bound by solemn vows and covenants, and these again and again repeated. But every thing in public covenanting with God ought to be made with great plainness and solemnity; that every one concerned, whether present or absent, may understand, and be duly affected with it: and especially must all our covenanting with him be founded on his grant of himself to us as our God, and his claim of us for his people. How ready are men to copy after bad examples, and to defile themselves with idols! And who knows what indwelling lusts may lead us to in our practice: for followers of iniquity often become presumptuous at last, and bless themselves, while the curse of God hangs over their heads, and his wrath abideth on them! and to what terrible and shameful judgments are such presumptuous sinners exposed! The greater the mercies we sin against, the greater judgments we may expect. The obstinate abuse of God's mercies will at length deprive men of them. And heathen beholders are sometimes sooner awakened by God's judgments, than the hardened professors who endure them. Men's inquiries into religious concerns are frequently rather curious than practical; and many sinfully pry into futurities, and things which he hath concealed, rather than search and practise what he hath revealed in his word, and manifested in his providence. But may I and my children always search and practise the scriptures, as the only effectual means of averting the plagues appointed for the ungodly.

say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart,[*] that thou mayest do it.

15 ¶ See, [n] I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil;

16 In that I [o] command thee this day to love the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

17 But [p] if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them;

18 I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it.

19 [q] I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore [r] choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live;

[†] The allegation so often made by infidels —that Moses in the law, did not draw his arguments from immortality, but solely from temporal good and evil,—an allegation, sometimes so thoughtlessly admitted, and so feebly palliated by Christians—receives here a total overthrow; for if "the Lord God," was his people's "life and the length of their days," then, either God is mortal—which it were blasphemy and absurdity to suppose or assert—or his people are immortal, since he himself is their life. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—In returning to the Lord, and resting in him, men must be saved. Our gracious God is always ready, not only to receive repenting prodigals, but to qualify them with faith and repentance. And great is the happiness and honour that is to be found in fellowship with a reconciled God. The future return of the Jewish nation to the Lord shall be a delightful and glorious season to them; and even to us Gentiles it will be as life from the dead: we shall share and rejoice in their mercies. God's manifestation of his special love, and his renovation of our heart, shall qualify and induce us to all holy obedience. We shall run in the way of his commandments when he shall enlarge our heart. But now let us consider how great a mercy it is that the laws and the gospel of Christ are set before us in so plain, affecting, and applicable a manner. And, since eternal life is so exhibited, so offered to, so urged upon us, God forbid that we should entail this people will rise up, and [t] go a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land whither they go to be among them, and will forsake me, and break my covenant which I have made with them.

17 Then [u] my anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and I will [x] hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall [*] befall them; so that they will say in that day, [y] Are not these evils come upon us because our God is not among us?[†]

18 And [z] I will surely hide my face in that day, for all the evils which they shall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods.

19 Now therefore write ye [a] this song for you, and teach it the children of Israel: [b] put it in their mouths, that this song may be a witness for me against the children of Israel.

20 For when I shall have brought them into the land which I sware unto their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey, and they shall [c] have eaten, and filled themselves, and waxen fat; then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant.

21 And it shall come to pass, when [d] many evils and troubles are befallen them, that this song shall testify [‡] against them as a witness; for it shall not be forgotten out of the mouths of their seed: for [e] I know their imagination which they [§] go about, even now, before I have brought them into the land which I sware.

22 Moses therefore [f] wrote this song the same day, and taught it the children of Israel.[‖]

23 ¶ And he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, [g] Be strong, and of a good courage: for [h] thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I sware unto them; and I will be with thee.[*]

24 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finished,

25 That Moses commanded the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, saying,

26 Take this book of the law, and put it [k] in the side of the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee.

27 For I know thy rebellion, and thy [l] stiff neck: behold, while I am [m] yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the LORD; and how much more after my death?

28 Gather unto me [n] all the elders of your tribes, and your officers, that I may speak these words in their ears, and [o] call heaven and earth to record against them.

29 For I know that [p] after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you; and [q] evil will befall you in the latter days; because ye will do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands.

30 And Moses spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel the words of this song, until they were ended.

redoubled damnation on ourselves by a contemptuous rejection of it. Not Moses, but Jesus, sets before us life and good.—Let us see that we refuse not him that speaketh from heaven.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—It highly becomes ministers, or others, to exert themselves to their utmost, that their church and nation may be happy after their death: and, when they become more active in the Lord's work as their end approaches, and wish others the happy enjoyment of that comfort and honour which God hath denied to themselves, it is both honourable to the cause of God, and strengthening to his people. Great pains ought to be taken, to make those of the present or rising generations to understand, believe, and obey God's word: and certain is our success when God is our assistant, and we do nothing but what he has commanded. And, the more experience we have of gospel liberty, the more shall we delight to hear and obey him. God graciously warns men of their sin and danger before it come upon them: yet so desperate is the wickedness of men, that they ruin themselves by their apostasy from God, after their own vows, and the most solemn and often repeated warnings of God and his faithful ministers. These exactly correspond together in discovering the sure consequences of sin, and leave

20 And he said, [f]I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be: for they are a [g]very froward generation, children in whom is no faith.

21 They have [h]moved me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked me to anger with their vanities: and I [i]will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation.

the blame of their ruin entirely upon themselves. It is necessary therefore that God's truths be laid up in men's heart and conscience, that they may hear, and fear, and do no more wickedly.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—In the most serious and solemn manner ought ministers to deliver the truths of God to their people; and terrible will be the judgment of despisers of them, when both heaven and earth shall witness against them. How great, how unalterable, how faithful, holy, and just is God! and how perfect, wise, and righteous are all his works! But how ungrateful, disobedient, and apostatizing are many of his professed children! It is necessary, therefore, to ponder both the character of God and our own, to prevent our sinning, to draw instructions from ancient records, and that children should receive information from their fathers, who are more acquainted with them. But, while I behold God preparing a country for the Israelites, as his peculiar people, marvellously conducting them to it through the Arabian deserts, subduing the land before them, and enriching them with the product of it, let me think of the great wonder of redemption, of God's preparing it for men, and bringing them now to the begun, and hereafter to the full enjoyment of it. But surely most vile is the ingratitude of men, who render him hatred for his love, cursing for his blessing! Yet much more aggravated is the wickedness of professors, and especially saints, than that of mer-alive; I wound, and I heal: neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand.

40 For [h] I lift up my hand to heaven, and say, I live for ever.

41 If I [i] whet my glittering sword,* and mine hand take hold on judgment, [k] I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me.

42 I will make mine arrows [l] drunk with blood, and my sword shall devour flesh; and that with the blood of the slain, and of the captives, from the beginning of revenges upon the enemy.†

43 ‡[m] Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people; for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people.

44 ¶ And Moses came, and [n] spake all the words of this song in the ears of the people, he and [o] Hoshea the son of Nun.

45 And Moses made an end of speaking all these words to all Israel:

46 And he said unto them, [p] Set your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law.

47 For it is [q] not a vain thing for you; because it is your life: and through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

48 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses that self-same day, saying,

49 [r] Get thee up into this mountain Abarim, unto mount Nebo, which is in the land of Moab, that is over against Jericho, and behold the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel for a possession;

50 And die in the mount whither thou goest up, and be [s] gathered unto thy people; as Aaron thy brother died in mount Hor, and was gathered unto his people: §

51 Because [t] ye trespassed against me ‖ among the children of Israel at the waters of * Meribah-kadesh, in the wilderness of Zin; because ye sanctified me not in the midst of the children of Israel.

52 Yet thou shalt [u] see the land before thee; but thou shalt not go thither unto the land which I give the children of Israel.

‖ The honesty of the Bible in revealing and condemning the faults of its most distinguished characters, is a peculiarity in which it stands apart from all mere human compositions—a proof of its divine origin to which the infidel can produce no refutation. CHAPTER XXXIII.

After preaching to the Israelites a long farewell sermon, Moses here finally dismisses them with a solemn blessing. (1) He declares them blessed; particularly in God's love, his protection, and giving them his law: 1—5. (2) A particular blessing upon each tribe, the Simeonites excepted; which was at once a prayer for them, and a prediction of what should befall them: 6—25. AND this is the [a] blessing wherewith Moses the [b] man of God blessed the children of Israel before his death.

2 And he said, [c] The LORD came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; he shined forth from mount Paran, and he came [d] with ten thousands of saints: from his right hand went [* e] a fiery law for them.

3 Yea, he [f] loved the people; all his saints [g] are in thy hand: and they sat down [h] at thy feet; every one shall receive of thy words.

7 ¶ And this is the blessing of Judah: and he said, [n] Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people: let his hands be sufficient for him; and be thou an help to him from his enemies.

8 ¶ And of Levi he said, [o] Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy [p] holy one, whom thou didst prove at Massah, and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah;

9 Who [q] said unto his father and to his mother, I have not seen him; neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor knew his own children: for they have observed thy word, and kept thy covenant.

10 †[r] They shall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Israel thy law: ‡[s] they shall put incense §before thee, and whole burnt-sacrifice upon thine altar.

11 Bless, LORD, his [t] substance, and [u] accept the work of his hands: [x] smite through the loins of them that rise against him, and of them that hate him, that they rise not again.

heathens. The Lord highly abominates all sin; and righteous are all his judgments of desertion, sword, famine, or pestilence, nay, of utter and everlasting destruction. But his mercy waits long: he is unwilling to inflict judgments on his people, and to give his enemies any cause of triumph over them, even when they have provoked him to the most shocking degree; and earnestly he wills that their serious consideration should prevent their ruin. Seasonable, gracious, and wonderful, have, and shall be, God's deliverances of his ancient people from the nations which harassed, murdered, or carried them captive; and terrible his judgments on their destroyers, particularly the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Greeks, Romans, Antichristians, and others. But how much more remarkable the new covenant deliverances of the saints, and terrible the destruction of their implacable enemies! How remarkable the joy of their souls, whether they be Jews or Gentiles, when they behold it! Happy is it, when ministers, young and old, fully harmonize in the work of the Lord; and when they are so intent upon commending Jesus and his ways, that they must be, as it were, half forced from it, even into the joy of their Lord! But God finds it frequently necessary to remind his people of their sins, and likewise to warn them of their death, while he assures them of his reconcilement to their souls.

warfare successful, their labours prosperous, and should enjoy peace and safety; that the Levites, who had acted so disinterestedly in punishing the principal worshippers of the golden calf, should be the honoured ministers of God, and useful instructors and judges of the people; that the Benjamites should enjoy much divine protection, and live near to the temple of God; that the descendants of Joseph should enjoy great favour from God, noted plenty from their fields, and great power and authority among their brethren; that the men of Zebulun in their sea-faring trade, and those of Issachar in their husbandry, should enjoy much comfort to themselves, and be remarkable promoters of a religious attendance on God's solemn feasts; that the Gadites should enlarge their territory, punish their enemies, and faithfully assist their brethren in conquering Canaan; that the Danites should unexpectedly seize on Laish, near the springs of Jordan, and, under Samson, molest the Philistines; that the Naphtalites, when stationed on the west of the sea of Tiberias, should have most fertile fields, and their country be peculiarly blessed with the ministrations of Christ; and that the Asherites should mightily increase, live in noted friendship with their brethren, and have valuable mines of iron and brass in their territory.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIII.—The people of God are a peculiar and chosen generation; safe in the hand of their God, from whence none can pluck them; taught of God, and sweetly constrained to receive and obey his instructions; and privileged with the law of God, sounded in their ears, and written on their hearts. Unbounded blessings are with God for them; blessings suited to every tribe, every station in life, whether warriors, ministers, sailors, husbandmen, miners; blessings suited to every relation, and to every change of circumstance. And who can express their blessedness who have God's law for their rule, God's land for their residence, and God himself for their helper, refuge, Saviour, shield, portion, and infinite ALL! It is happy to be separated from the world, in order to enjoy him. But it is ravishing to leave this world, quite transported with the glorious excellencies of God in Christ, and of our new covenant interest in him, to behold his face, and to enter upon the unveiled, uninterrupted, enjoyment of him in glory.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIV.—Happy and honoured is the last end of such as have been active and faithful for God in their generation; and their death would be an irremediable loss to churches and nations, if the all-sufficient Jesus did not supply their room. But precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints; and he makes it pleasant and joyful to them, when ushered in with views of the king in his beauty, and of the land that is afar off. But let me not dismiss this wonderful man of God; this deliverer and leader of his people; this mediator between God and Israel; this extraordinary prophet, occasional priest; this lawgiver, and king in Jeshurun, till I consider him as a noted figure of my infinitely more glorious and useful Redeemer. He was a proper, a divine child, early and often exposed to danger. O the exile, the reproach, the contradiction of sinners, the persecution even unto death, which he endured! and how divine his support under his unnumbered trials! How amiable his qualities!—his contempt of the world, in its pleasures, honours, or riches—his compassion and tender regard to his injurious brethren—his amazing meekness—his distinguished fidelity—his prudence, boldness, and holy zeal! Solemn and express was his call to his work; and, by a multitude of miracles in favour of his people, and with the most tremendous destruction of his Jewish, Heathen, Antichristian, and other enemies, has that call been confirmed. Extensive is the office to which God has appointed him. He is the Almighty Deliverer, who rescues us from the worse than Egyptian slavery of sin, Satan, and the world; and of Heathenism and Popery. He is the all-sufficient Provider, who bestows upon us spiritual entertainment, hidden manna, living water, and unchanging robes of righteousness. He is the Leader given to the people, who opens a safe passage through every Red sea of difficulty; and by power and prayer subdues every opposer; and brings us not merely to the borders, but to the full enjoyment of our promised, evangelical, new covenant, and eternal rest. Nor can their murmuring unbelief or rebellion, ever provoke him to forsake those who have been given to him by his Father. He is the Mediator between God and men, with whom the covenant of grace is made; and who confirms it with many, by the shedding and sprinkling of his blood. He had his Father's law in his heart, fulfilled it for us, and gives it to us as our rule. He not only fasted and prayed, but died for a stiff-necked and rebellious people. He infallibly prevents our utter rejection. He is the incomparable Prophet, who knows the full mind of God, and can teach us by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and make us wise unto salvation. He speaks as never man did. He is the brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image of his person, which we can behold, and be familiar with, only as veiled with our nature. He is our glorious Priest, who shed his blood, and sprinkled it on the altar, to satisfy JEHOVAH's justice; and on the book of the law as a covenant, fulfilling it in our stead; and he sprinkles it on his people's conscience, to purge them from dead works to serve the living God. He authorizes all the true ministers of the church, and consecrates the saints as spiritual priests, and all the ordinances thereof, unto the service of God. He is King and Lawgiver to his Israel indeed, appointing the whole form and ordinances of his church; and to him is the whole government thereof committed by God. His whole life was remarkable for fidelity in the service of God, and his death was marvellous and voluntary. His grave was appointed of God; but in it he saw no corruption; and with him were buried all the ancient ceremonies, the law as a covenant, and all the sins of his people.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES TO THE BOOK OF DEUTERONOMY.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Unto all Israel. Taking two scriptural examples as our guides, viz., 2 Kings xxiii. 2; Neh. viii. 1—8; 2 Chr. xxxiv. 30., in which we find "all the people, great and small," assembled to hear the reading of the law; both "the men and the women, and all that could hear with understanding;" and, considering the great extent to which a strong human voice, with a distinct enunciation, and in a still assembly, may be heard; and remembering that Moses might continue each day as long, at least as Nehemiah did, (viii. 3.) "from morning until mid-day," and repeat, day after day, the same instructions to different auditors, there will be no difficulty in understanding, that he literally addressed this book in consecutive discourses to all Israel "who could hear with understanding."——Ver. 1. Red sea.—It appears from ver. 5. that Moses was now in the land of Moab, on or near the east side of Jordan, and at a distance of at least 140 miles from the Red sea. This circumstance of distance, and the absence of the Hebrew word for sea, render it all but certain, that Suph, (which does not when alone signify red,) is rather the name of a place, and that Paran, Tophel, &c., are either the names of places in the neighbourhood of the camp of Israel, at the delivery of Deuteronomy, or, according to the Jewish rabbins, of the places where the principal events of the Mosaic history were transacted.——Ver. 14. To do.—In Exod. xviii. 24, Moses, by advice of Jethro chooses men to be (ver. 25.) "heads over the people, rulers of thousands," &c., who "judged the people at all seasons; the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves." Again, in Num. xi. 16. JEHOVAH directs Moses to gather seventy elders to "bear the burden of the people," so that he should not "bear it alone." But this burden is not the burden of their legal questions, but of their murmurings and complaints; and these are distinct both in time, office, and endowments, from the rulers of thousands, &c.; for these rulers were appointed while Jethro was still at Sinai, Exod. xviii. 27., but the seventy, after Jethro was gone, and Hobab his son remained, Num. x. 29., and after the camp had moved from Sinai, Num. x. 12. Between the accounts of the appointment of the rulers of thousands, &c., in Exod. and Deut. there is evident difference, but no contradiction. Jethro suggests, referring the decision to God, Exod. xviii. 23.; God directs, and Moses submits the matter to the people's approval, and the rulers to their free election.——Ver. 44. As bees do.—Creatures, each of which might be crushed beneath the finger of a child; and yet by their courage, fierceness, activity, and numbers, they either put their strongest assailants to flight, or destroy them by their stings. In well inhabited and cultivated countries, where bees are comparatively few, the force of the comparison will not be easily perceived. Yet, even in the most improved districts, they have been known to destroy dogs and horses. Pliny states, that from some districts of Crete, they actually expelled the inhabitants; and Ælian declares that some parts of Scythia, north of the Danube, were so infested with bees as to be inaccessible; and Park, in his Travels in Africa, records an instance in which, not only himself and his party were put to flight by them, but several beasts of their caravan actually stung to death. It is possible also there may be more in the comparison than meets the eye; for though we may not on a few examples affirm it for a general or universal rule, yet more than once have we seen it tried and verified, that he who has the coolness or courage to stand immovably still, and allow the exasperated bees to alight upon him, will remain untouched and unharmed, while those who run away are the object of their deadly hostility. May not the text, therefore, remind a people well accustomed to the dispositions of bees, that had the Israelites stood still, the very show of courage would have repelled their enemies?

CHAP. II. Ver. 29. In Seir.—In Num. 20. 21., the king of Edom refuses to let Israel pass through his land, and even comes out to battle—here Moses implies that Israel passed through Edom and purchased necessaries: can both accounts be true? perfectly so. The king of Edom refuses to allow Israel to pass through his immediate personal territory; but the Edomites of another part of Seir, acknowledging, it may be, an imperial superiority; but exercising at the same time a local and independent jurisdiction, allow them to pass through, and trade in their peculiar province. This is a state of things, of which both the ancient and modern history of Europe could furnish many examples.

CHAP. III. Ver. 11. Rabbath of the children of Ammon.—This statement has been employed by objectors, as evidence that this book was not written by Moses; while it is charged with an extravagance that is alleged to render the narrative incredible. For neither allegation is there the least ground; (1) Metallic bedsteads have been common in all ages, and are so till this day: in warm countries they would be a real luxury, as preservatives from the annoyance of vermin. (2) That Moses should record the fact for posterity, though well known to his contemporaries, is a matter exemplified in the historical occurrences of every day; and as comparatively few of the Israelites could have actually seen it, to the rest it was therefore a most interesting description. (3) But as Rabbath was not yet taken, how could Moses tell where the bedstead was? Without our referring to the constancy of Divine revelation, does the objector seriously mean to insinuate that no man can tell where any article of curiosity is, unless he has actually been in the place? No! this would be too much even for infidelity to assert. (4) But then what shall we say to the dimensions of the bedstead? "the cubit of a man," about eighteen inches, would give for the bedstead thirteen and a half feet in length, and six in breadth; and allowing the bedstead to be according to common computation, one-third longer, than the body, Og would be about nine feet in height. (5) To escape from the apparent difficulties of the narrative, Boothroyd and others pronounce the passage an interpolation; but for this there appears no sufficient authority; nor does the gigantic size of the monarch present any insuperable difficulty; for, remembering the reverence paid by a semibarbarous people to gigantic height and strength, and allowing that Og might take advantage of this feeling, and do as other unusually tall men have done, elevate himself a few inches on his sandals, and we find a height rarely indeed attained, but still at times actually exemplified in Europe.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 8. I set before you this day.—The great evidence for the divine origin of the Bible, is in the Bible itself, just as the great evidence for the being and perfections of God is in the works that he has made. "The heavens declare the glory of God." None but a God of power, and wisdom, and goodness, could frame a world so mightily, so wisely, and so excellently. And just so, none but God could reveal a law so excellent as that of Moses. It stands as much above all other laws, as the works of God in nature do, above the works of men in art. The philosophers and legislators of the world, if met in one great conclave, could not if they would, and would not if they could, compose and promulgate the ten commandments. Were the stars extinguished, and did the sun alone remain in heaven, it would evince, in its solitary majesty, the divinity of its Creator; and were the Bible lost in another deluge, and did the ten commandments alone survive, they would manifest, even to the sinner whom they condemned, that they were the work of a God of infinite wisdom and holiness.——Ver. 33. Hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire.—The tribes were numbered from twenty years old and upwards (Num. 1. 3.), and of these none now remained alive, save Caleb and Joshua, (Num. 26. 64, 65.); but multitudes were still alive, who, at nineteen years of age and downwards, had been present at Sinai, and had heard "the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire." These now form a host of witnesses to the truth of the Mosaic narrative, to which no event in merely human history can furnish any parallel. Had their parents had the slightest ground of suspicion against the reality of the miracles of Sinai, or the slightest charge against the veracity of Moses, they would have trained up a generation still more unbelieving, more fickle, more ungrateful, and more rebellious than themselves. But truth and grace have triumphed in the conversion of the children, while appetite and habit have effected the destruction of the parents.—Note. How exactly do these two generations correspond, on the great national scale, with the condition of every descendant of Adam! The "old man" walks by "sight," disbelieves, and dies disinherited; the "new man" walks by "faith," lives, and enters into rest.——Ver. 34. Take him a nation.—Hitherto God had called only individuals or families, as Abraham and his family; now he calls a whole nation—emblem of the glorious time when "the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ (Rev. 11. 15.); and this nation he calls (1) by temptations, preparing them for liberty by the yoke of bondage; (2) by signs of power, and of mercy, and of truth, understood by Moses; (3) by wonders, which produced in Pharaoh and his court amazement, without knowledge of their true origin or meaning; (4) by war, as in the warlike pursuit of Pharaoh; (5) by a mighty hand, in working those miracles of power, which even Jannes and Jambres acknowledged to evidence "the finger of God;" (6) by a stretched-out arm, even that of Moses, which God commanded him to stretch over the river and the sea, (Exod. 7. 19. & 14. 26.) the emblem of the power of God, from whom he derived his commission; and (7) by great terrors, as that of Pharaoh and the Egyptians when God smote the first-born. (Exod. xii. 33.)

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Called all Israel.—How could "all Israel," even limiting the phrase to all males from twenty years old and upwards, attend in one place to hear this discourse of Moses? The answer is easy; (1) It is not said they all attended, but that all were called. (2) But even if all, in the widest application of the word, were required to attend, and actually did attend at one place, it is not necessary to infer that they attended at one time: but successively.——Ver. 5. Saying.—On comparing Exod. 20. with Deut. 5, there appear such varieties in the fourth, fifth, and tenth commandments, that infidels have charged the whole with contradiction; and consequently, either part or whole with untruth—whilst the opponents of the plenary verbal inspiration of Scripture have adduced them as evidence that whilst the thought was inspired, the words were resigned to the selection of the writers. A single answer will serve to refute the objection of the infidel, and to remove the difficulty of the believer—the answer lies in recollecting (1) That Israel had now been in possession of the ten commandments for almost forty years, and must therefore have been well acquainted with such a brief original document. (2) That to such well known and original document Moses refers when he says, "keep the sabbath-day to sanctify it, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee;"—that is, not as he does now for the first time command, but as he hath already commanded at Sinai. This view is farther confirmed in ver. 15, where the time of the commandment is again referred—not to the present repetition and comment, but to a past and acknowledged occasion. Again it is said in ver. 16, "Honour thy father and thy mother, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee:" clearly referring to the Sinai original of the commandment, a reference which evidently continues to the end of ver. 21.——Ver. 29. The verse may be translated thus: who will grant that there may be such a heart in them? as much as if he had said, notwithstanding all their professions, they refuse to receive such a heart from me: how then can they produce it of themselves, or derive it from another source?

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. Commandments.—These include all things ordered, permitted, or prohibited, whether they be things moral, ceremonial, or evangelical.—Statutes.—These include the delineations, descriptions, types, shadows, and likenesses, by which "outward and visible signs represent inward and spiritual grace."—Judgments.—These include God's purposes, determinations, and decisions, in regard to actions past, as the monitions to present duty, and the exemplars of judgments to come.——Ver. 4. Hear, O Israel.—This is one of the passages the Jews inscribe on their phylacteries, and which they regard as one of the most pregnant with divine truth and instruction. The words are spoken not merely as instructions from Moses to Israel, but as a confession of faith common to Moses and Israel: "Hear, O Israel, JEHOVAH our Elohim, is one JEHOVAH." The words assert most emphatically, the unity of the Godhead in the singular—JEHOVAH; while they equally assert the plurality of the persons by the plural—ELOHIM. The unity of the Godhead is asserted in opposition to "the gods many, and lords many" of the heathen; while the plurality of persons is asserted as the foundation and key to the great mystery of redemption. That the Jews understood ELOHIM to be plural, and that it included the doctrine of the TRINITY, is beyond question. Hear Simeon Ben Joachi, "Come and see the mystery of the word Elohim. There are three degrees, and each degree is by itself alone; and yet they are all one, and joined together in one, and are not divided from each other."

CHAP. VII. Ver. 2. Nor show mercy.—Was not this prohibition of mercy cruel? No. It is a prohibition enforced upon every judge who tries and condemns a criminal. The judge who shows mercy to the murderer, is himself a guilty copartner in the next murder the culprit perpetrates. See Lev. 18, for the fearful counts of the indictment upon which these nations were most righteously condemned; and let infidels dare to tell what milder sentence they would have passed.——Ver. 6. Holy people.—A special, or peculiar people, as quoted from the Septuagint, 1 Pet. 2. 9: the original import of the word is that of a private property fenced around for protection. This protection lies in God's special providence which watches over and guards his people, and in the promises and provisions of the "everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure." 2 Sam. 23. 5.——Ver. 10. Hate.—Thoughtless sinners often imagine or pronounce it impossible to hate God. But did not Ahab hate Michaiah because he told him the truth of God; and did not the Jews hate Christ even to death, because he preached mercy to the chief of sinners, while he discovered and rebuked the hypocrisy of the Pharisees, and denounced the immorality of an adulterous generation? To hate God, is not merely to hate him personally—which thoughtless sinners think impossible—but it is to hate the restraint of his commandments, or the holiness of his injunctions, which the feelings and the conduct of sinners do constantly exemplify.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 2. To know.—Not as if God sought to make a discovery of something unknown to God in the heart of man; "for he knew what was in man," (John 2. 25.) but that, by showing man to himself, he might humble him, by making him sensible of "the plague of his own heart." 1 Kin. 8. 38.——Ver. 3. By every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live.—Our Lord quotes these words in answer to the temptation of Satan, (Mat. 4.) exciting him to command "stones to be made bread." They contain three important facts; (1) That man is naturally supported by food. (2) That the production of food, and the power of digestion and nutrition, greatly and mainly depend upon the "word of God." The truth of this statement is evidenced by the productive powers of all countries where the gospel even comparatively prevails, when contrasted with the "parched land" of the "rebels" against God; (Ps. 68. 6.) and still farther, when the power of conscience is taken into account in all its bearings upon guilt, enmity, pardon, or peace with God; the influence of which, upon bodily health, is matter of daily experience. (3) That the real life of man resides not in the body, that bread can sustain, but in the soul; of which "the word of God" heard and believed, is the only efficient nutriment, Is. 55. 3

CHAP. IX. Ver. 9. I neither did eat bread.—Unlike most of the miraculous recitals of Moses, for which we have the national attestation; for this we have no direct evidence beyond his own personal testimony; and wherefore should infidelity question, doubt, or deny that testimony? What end of self-interest had Moses to serve by it? what vain-glory could he derive from it?—None! Independent of the evidence which his miraculous works, and prophetic endowments bear to his divine commission, his character alone is sufficient pledge for the veracity of his statement. Should infidelity deny the truth of the statement on any alleged impossibility of Moses sustaining so long a fast; it must do so, not merely by denying the miraculous power of God, but by forgetting all the laws by which mind operates upon body; and by which certain organic functions may be indefinitely suspended, while the vital energy of the mass is still unimpaired.—Note. This miraculous fasting is intended to afford a practical illustration of the fact declared, (chap. 8. 3.) that "man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord."

CHAP. X. Ver. 6. Mosera.—Biblical critics generally concur in rejecting ver. 6—9. as an interpolation originating in the mistake of some transcriber. But this is a mode of solving a difficulty always to be regarded with much jealousy; and when, as in this case, it is unsupported by authority of Hebrew MSS., it is utterly to be rejected, The two itineraries stand thus: Num. xxxiii., Moseroth, Bene-jaakan, Hor-hagidgad, Jotbathah. Deut. x. Beeroth of Bene-jaakan, that is, of the children of Jaakan, Mosera, Gudgodah, Jotbath. Now where in all this lies any insuperable difficulty? Let Bene-jaakan, as is common with other names, signify both a large district, and a particular place, and the whole difficulty disappears. Thus, in the itinerary of Deut., they depart from Beeroth in the district of Bene-jaakan, and encamp at Moserah, another name of the place called Bene-jaakan; and in the itinerary of Numb., they depart from Moseroth, another name for Beeroth, and encamp in the particular place called Bene-jaakan, another name for Mosera. The difficulty supposed to arise from the separation of the tribe of Levi at mount Sinai, and not at Jotbath, as here asserted, will be solved by recollecting that the special separation of Levi here recounted refers to the disinheritance of the tribe, ver. 9. Upon the apparently different localities assigned to the death of Aaron, no stress can be laid, inasmuch as we are totally ignorant of the exact geographical positions of the several stages of the journeyings, and of the extent of the districts designated by the different names. To account for the introduction of these four verses without any seeming connexion—let it be recollected, that it is to account for the safe-keeping of the tables of the law and the ark, by the special appointment of Eleazar to succeed Aaron in the priesthood, and the whole tribe of Levi to attend upon the ordinances.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 26. Curse.—For the meaning of a blessing and a curse, see notes on Gen. 1. 22, 28. & 2. 14, 17.——Ver. 29. Gerizim and Ebal.—These two mountains lie to the westward of Jordan, in the lot of Ephraim. They are in height from 700 to 800 feet, extending from east to west in lines nearly parallel, with the beautiful valley of Shechem or Sychar, now called Nablous, about 200 paces in width, between them. They are about a league in length, and approach in form to a semicircle. Mount Ebal to the north. Travellers have represented mount Gerizim as more fertile and picturesque than Ebal, so that the two mountains in their natural aspect and condition, were, in some degree, emblems of the blessing of fertility and beauty, and the curse of barrenness and deformity.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 12. Ye shall rejoice.—The Mosaic institutions had their days "to afflict the soul," because of sin, but their general aspect was joy, because of righteousness. Nor was this joy merely personal, but extended to all the household, embracing in its benevolence the Levite, the widow, the poor, and the stranger.—Note. Family religion is an indispensable Christian duty, but to be efficient, it must be united with that "charity which is kind," and instead of being exhibited in moroseness or austerity of aspect, manner, or government, should be conducted with that "joy in the Holy Ghost," that "adorns the gospel of God our Saviour," and governs the household by the authority of love, rather than by the hand of power. ——Ver. 31. Burnt in the fire to their gods.—This horrible worship was notoriously practised by the Carthaginians, a people who had emigrated from Canaan. Christians can now scarcely imagine such combined folly and wickedness possible. But, alas! if they look around them on society, do they not see, "sons and daughters," as recklessly sacrificed to the "pomps and vanities," and "fashion of this world that passeth away," 1 Cor. 7. 31.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 3. Proveth you.—Our Lord informs us (Mat. 24. 24.) that "there shall arise false Christs and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that (if it were possible) they shall deceive the very elect." And Josephus relates the fulfilment of this prophecy, (Ant. b. 20. c. 7. Wars, b. 2, c. 13.) when many impostors persuaded the people to follow them into the desert, promising to show them great signs and wonders in evidence of their commission; and again (Wars, b. 7. c. 11.) he records the influence of one to entice the Jews to go up into the temple, which being set on fire, even contrary to the anxious wish of Titus, by one of his soldiers, 6000 perished in the flames. A sign or wonder requires three things to render it evidence of a divine commission, (1) Prophecy, in which we have the assertion of omniscience. (2) Fulfilment, in which we have the evidence of power. (3) Consistency with known and divinely established principles, in which we have the evidence of truth, which is uniform and necessarily accordant in all its parts. The first evidence might be imitated by great sagacity; the second, by extraordinary skill; and therefore the third is required, which never can be imitated by any impostor.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 26. Whatsoever thy soul desireth.—This permission gave no license to gluttony, epicurism, or drunkenness, the eating or drinking being "before the Lord." Did men eat and drink under the full faith of the words—"thou, Lord, seest me," in the spirit of thanksgiving to him that "furnishes their table," and to "the glory" of him, whose glory should be their "chief end;" their table would never become "a snare" to their souls, nor "the wine in their banquets," banish God from "all their thoughts."

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1. Release.—The intelligent Brown Patterson in his note on this passage, in the commentary of his revered relative, understands by release, a mere suspension of the demand for the current year. Le Clerc and Michaelis are of the same opinion, and Josephus must be understood as agreeing with them, as he mentions the extinction of debts every fiftieth year, and is silent about it on the seventh. From considering the whole passage to ver. 12., we are nevertheless convinced, that this was another specimen of the Mosaic poor laws, and that it required the entire extinction of all the money debts (but no others) of the absolutely poor. A law, which as an auxiliary to the other Mosaic poor laws, we believe to be more preservative of good character in the poor, more exciting to benevolence in the rich, more encouraging to individual industry, and in the end, more economical to the nation, than any other poor law of mere human devising.——Ver. 8. Lend.—Exod. 22. 25. provided against the extortion of usury from the poor; the text enforces the duty of lending. Together they form an important branch of the Mosaic poor laws, and an essential requisite in Christian character.——Ver. 9. Cry unto the Lord against thee.—Not in the language of imprecation or curse against him who refuses to supply the idle or the profligate, but in the language of a suffering child, crying to its heavenly Father in its distress, and making known its wants to him who "feeds the ravens when they cry," and "will not disregard the sighing of the needy."

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 18. In all thy gates.—The constant reference to gates indicates a state of society in the midst of enemies; these gates were consequently not merely the places of exit and entrance, but of watch and guard. This state, requiring the presence of civil and military officers, rendered the gate or the adjoining guard-rooms the most convenient places of summary jurisdiction; for cases requiring more deliberate consideration, places of greater privacy and retirement were provided; and these in Jerusalem seem to have been either in the private palace appropriated to the high priest, (Mat. 26. 3, 58—69.) or a public court of civil and criminal law, John 18. 28, 29, 33. & 19. 9.——Ver. 21. Trees near unto the altar of the Lord.—The famous Roman law of the twelve tables enjoined the planting and preservation of sacred groves—the law of God expressly and repeatedly denounces them, Deut. 12. 3. The reason of the difference is plain; heathenism sanctioned a system that not only legalized, but attempted to sanctify impurity by the character of its deities, and the nature of their worship; nay, according to the testimony of Pliny, (b. 12. c. 1.) the heathen not only adored the images glittering with gold and silver, but the groves themselves, and their solemn silence. In a warm climate, the temptation to retire to shady groves being great, God proportions to that circumstance the frequency and speciality of their prohibition.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 8. Too hard for thee in judgment.—The necessity of courts of appeal, and of final resort, has been discovered in all civilized countries; but in such courts of human institution, much is left to the opinion of the judge, in cases of a novel form; and much to the influence of former decisions, without any very special regard to the principle upon which they were founded. The Mosaic supreme court differed from such courts chiefly in this; it allowed no latitude for the personal opinions or feelings of the judge; no influence to precedent, by whomsoever pronounced; but tied both the interpretation of the living judge, and the influence of ancient precedent down to the letter and spirit of the divine law, (ver. 11,) as strictly as it bound the people to implicit obedience.——Ver. 14. I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me.—Moses foreseeing, by the prophetic spirit, that the tide in popular opinion would one day turn in favour of monarchy, so far from pronouncing any authoritative opinion concerning theoretical forms of government, addresses himself, by divine direction, to propound the true maxims and principles of all government. And when the period foreseen by Moses arrived, and the people demanded a king, (1 Sam. viii.) the displeasure of Samuel neither arose from any sense of wounded pride, or disappointed ambition; nor from any abstract objection to the kingly form of government, but from the self-will and practical atheism of the people, who never thought of consulting God upon so great an organic change, though Samuel was with them with Urim and Thummim.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 3. And the two cheeks, and the maw.—There is a difference between the Levitical portion here described, and that in Lev. 7. 3. The reason of the difference seems to be, that the direction in Leviticus referred to the temporary allowance in the wilderness, that of the text to the permanent provision in Canaan. See Deut. ch. 12. 1.——Ver. 10. Divination.—This appears to be a general name for all the particular forms that follow, viz.—Observer of times. Some derive it from a word signifying a cloud; others, amongst whom is Gesenius, from a word signifying an eye. This is the most probable meaning, and includes every form of threatened injury to person or property from what is called an evil eye.—An enchanter. A pretended diviner by serpents; or the positions and movements of other animals.—A witch. One who resorts to charms, &c., for the injury of another.—A charmer. Most probably those who pretended to charm serpents, and produce strange effects by rhymes and incantations.—Consulter with familiar spirits. According to the Heb., a consulter with Ob. Thus, the Pythoness at Delphi in Greece, pretended to be inspired by Apollo.—Wizard. "A cunning man," one who pretended to know secret things, past, present, or future.—Necromancer. One who pretended to consult or raise the dead, as the word signifies.—All these pretended arts are the products of ignorance, the nurses of superstition, and the forerunners and abettors of idolatry, and therefore most righteously condemned of God.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 18. False witness.—On few points is modern jurisprudence more defective, and by consequence, more injurious to the cause of truth and justice, than in the case of false witness or perjury—in fact so difficult, so problematical, if not impossible, is conviction, that a false witness is seldom prosecuted in a European Christian court of law. The Mosaic jurisprudence proceeded on a different principle, and pointed its judgment, not against constructive malice, but against simple, intentional falsehood—and required no second prosecution, but proceeded at once to convict upon the review of the evidence on record.—Note. Christian legislators have yet much to learn from Moses, in whose inspired laws, eternal moral principle, and not temporary expediency, constitutes the rule of procedure and decision.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 12. Make war against thee.—The Mosaic institutes were decidedly opposed to wars of aggression, and the spirit of foreign conquest and acquisition. A single example will establish this fact: "Three times a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord God," Exod. 23. 17. A people so organized could never become aggressively warlike. The text, however, admits that there might be wars beyond the borders of Canaan, but provides only for cases where enemies will not make peace; and where, consequently, safety is best and soonest secured by seeking the enemy in his own country. Hasten, O Prince of peace! hasten the time, when "nation shall no more rise against nation, nor kingdom against kingdom, and men shall learn war no more!"

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 18. A stubborn and rebellious son.—This provides for an extreme case of filial rebellion; for nothing but an extreme case could ever induce both a father and mother deliberately to accuse and witness against their own child. The sentence of death against drunkenness and gluttony (ver. 20, 21.) may, to the modern inventors of fine and imprisonment, appear unreasonably, or even inhumanly, severe. But, let it be remembered, the sentence could not be inflicted, unless in the scarcely supposable case, in which a father and mother were the hapless accusers; and, then, let it be remembered, that this was the sentence of him "who knew what was in man," and who never applied the judgment of severity, till the remedies of mercy had been found unavailing; and whose judgments of severity were, in the end, the most merciful to the individual whom they sought to intimidate and deter from sin; and to society, whom they relieved from a nuisance, an infection, and a curse. O! that drunkards and gluttons would read first this sentence, and then sentences ten thousand times more awful, 1 Cor. 6. 10. and Phil. 3. 19.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1. Go astray.—This law, so benevolent in every state of society, was peculiarly important in a country unenclosed, and where the straying of animals would be proportionately frequent and dangerous. The laws of man's devising, in case of straying animals, bind to restitution or justice; human laws, in some other instances, reward humanity with honour or emolument; the divine laws alone bind to humanity and benevolence, on the ground of principle, and that without fee or reward, beyond the approbation of conscience, and the will of our God. ——Ver. 11. Of woollen and linen together.—In warm countries, an important law in relation to health, and the prevention of infection; in commercial countries, important to the honesty of manufactures; and, in religion, emblematical of that singleness of eye and of heart, so essential to the constitution of a child of God.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 6. Shalt not seek their peace.—It is vain to seek the peace of wolves; it were mad to seek their prosperity. But wicked, idolatrous, and licentious nations are worse than they. The precept does not, however, forbid to seek the instruction, conversion, and improvement of wicked men; but merely such companionship as would endanger our becoming "partakers of their sins and their plagues," 1 Tim. 5. 22. Rev. 18. 4.——Ver. 9. Keep thee from every wicked thing.—War is at all times, and in all cases and events, to be deplored; and, whenever it is possible, to be avoided. But when defensive war is inevitable, there is no military code, there are no articles of war, comparable to the Mosaic. In all Gentile nations, glory has been the excitement of the brave; plunder, of the mercenary; licentiousness, of the profligate: but of the Jewish soldier, it is required that "when the host goeth forth against enemies, he keep himself from every wicked thing."

Translate this ancient ordinance into modern words, and it will form "an order of the day," unparalleled in the annals of nations.——Ver. 18. Abomination unto the Lord thy God.—Impurity constituted a part of heathen worship, and a dedicated prostitution was employed to support some of their temples. The Egyptians worshipped Anubis under the form of a dog; and hence such unhallowed gains are specifically rejected from the house of the Lord.—Note. God abominates the principle, that makes the price of sin, the purchase of pardon.——Ver. 19. Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother.—The former laws of loan, (Exod. 22. 25. Lev. 25. 36.) forbade the exaction of usury from the poor only. Here there is a total prohibition of usury for money lent by one Jew to another, whether rich or poor. Why this addition? why this prohibition? and, why especially when the Jew is freely permitted to lend on usury to a stranger? (1) This addition, like several others, is now made to the law, with a view to the state of society in Canaan, into which the people were about to enter. (Deut. 12. 1.) While they were in the wilderness, without any fixed residence, there could be little, if any occasion for the rich to borrow, and as little apparent security for any to lend. The poor only required protection. (2) The prohibition of usury between Jew and Jew, rests first, upon the implied principle of brotherhood in the whole nation; secondly, upon the fact, that God did not intend them for a commercial, but for an agricultural people, as all their institutions testify. (3) The permission, and implied encouragement, of lending on usury to a stranger, founded upon the general principle, that a fair profit on the loan of money, is in itself, as just, as profit upon any other property, was a wise speciality; as, by bringing commercial men, the great political peace-bonds of the world, into contact with the Jews, some knowledge of the true religion would be diffused in the nations; and, when prospectively considered, it was mercifully calculated to accustom the Jews to such foreign management of money, as would prepare them either for the disasters of threatened exile, or, for the period of their promised return to their own land.

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 9. The Lord shall establish thee.—The general character of these blessings has led some Christian divines to conclude and admit that Moses employed none but temporal promises and threatenings as incentives to obedience, omitting altogether the mention of immortality. That he employed temporal promises is certain; for "godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." But that he likewise employed spiritual promises, even immortality and glory, this verse testifies; for he promises to establish them, not their posterity, "a holy people:" "unto himself," implies and promises life coeval with his own.

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 4. The Lord hath not given you an heart to perceive.—That is, the Lord hath given you indestructible raiment, bread from heaven, water from the rocks; and all to lead you "to know that he is the Lord your God—yet all has neither opened the eyes you have closed, the ears you have stopped, nor softened the hearts, that, like Pharaoh, you have hardened.——Ver. 23. Nor any grass groweth therein.—Canaan has continued since the Christian era to be a land of much attraction to travellers, and all, as with one common consent, have expressed their astonishment at the general aspect of barrenness and desolation in a country once so fertile and populous. So evident is this judgment, and so palpable the fulfilment of this prophecy, that infidels have affected to question the scriptural account of its population and fertility. But, independent of the scripture testimony, which is always sufficient to establish the truth of its own narratives, it is well known that at least large portions of the Chinese empire are as populous, and by extreme industry rendered as productive as Palestine, even in its best days. And if God permit his blessings to a land of heathenism, why should he not bestow his blessings upon a land of his true worshippers?——Ver. 29. The secret things.—There are two classes of secret things; (1) The times and seasons of determined prophetical blessings, such as Is. 19. 18—25. & 52. 1. & 60. 1. And though there be a few examples of precise chronological prophecy of this kind, such as the seventy weeks, (Dan. 9. 25—27.) yet, even as this revealed time depended upon another unknown, the time foretold was secret. (2) The times and seasons when God will inflict determined prophetical judgments, and these depending on the filling up of national iniquity, must ever abide secret until the "signs of the times" begin to reveal their approach. Things revealed are likewise of two kinds; (1) The nature of the blessings and judgments foretold; so that men may desire the one, and flee from the other. (2) The duties of God's people while in possession of his blessings, or when lying under his wrath.—Note. The secret and the revealed departments of the divine government, are not to be practically dissevered; for they are not separate things, but merely distinct parts of the same government. It were vain to apply ourselves to discover the secret things, but it were impious to neglect the revealed duties connected with them.

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 2. I am an hundred and twenty years old this day.—During an equal period of one hundred and twenty years did Noah preach righteousness to the antediluvian world. The life of Moses divides itself into three remarkable periods; (1) Forty years of education in the literature and sciences of Egypt, Acts 7. 20, 23. (2) Forty years in the retirement of Midian, in the management of a flock and the cares of a family. (3) Forty years in instructing and governing an ignorant and unmanageable generation; a chequered, an eventful, a toilsome, a troublous, but a glorious life—exhibiting especially the triumphs of grace in the temper, and shadowing out to the church in the wilderness the patience and meekness of Jesus.——Ver. 27. Rebellious against the Lord.—All leaders of great movements, who traffic in popularity, either benevolently, as Solon and Lycurgus in Greece, or Numa at Rome; or selfishly and seditiously, as Absalom at Jerusalem; or fanatically and ambitiously, as Mahomet at Mecca, all must flatter the people. Moses and the prophets in the Old, and Christ and the apostles in the New Testament, furnish the only examples of legislative effort uniting popular influence with moral honesty. A special evidence of a divine commission not to be overlooked by any who profess to admire moral honesty as an ornament of man, and a feature of the image of God.

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 10. Howling wilderness.—It was literally so, because of the wild beasts howling by night through its dreary wastes. Sad emblem of an evil world filled with enemies who love to prowl in darkness, and watch for whom they may devour.——Apple of his eye.—Those who would fathom the depths of God's providence in the selection of Abram, and the leading of the patriarchs, must recollect that two things were required for God's purposes: (1) The separation of a people from idolatry and idolatrous friends, with all their prejudices, influence and interests. (2) Instruction in the knowledge, of the nature, character, and worship of the true God. Now, all this absolutely required the separation of Abram, Isaac, and Jacob, from their idolatrous friends, and their frequent removals, lest their families should form idolatrous connexions.——Ver. 24. Serpents in the dust.—Serpent lying, grovelling, lurking, in the dust, beneath the primal curse, Gen. 3. 14.——Ver. 29. Latter end.—Not their death, which is commonly called the latter end, but their latter end in dispersion and restoration, in judgment and in mercy, both of which are essential elements in a wise consideration of man's state, duty, and prospects.——Ver. 33. Dragons.—Some species of venomous reptile. For the spiritual meaning of these two verses, see Gal. 5. 19—21, compared with ver. 22, 23.——Ver. 40. I lift up my hand to heaven.—The lifting up of the hand to heaven, was a form of oath. The expression is no figure, but a reality; for, to the church, the Lord appeared in bodily form, "in fashion as a man." And this is he who saith, (Rev. 1. 18.) "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen.——Ver. 42. I will make mine arrows.—This also is no rhetorical figure, but a reality; for, while the arrows of men are reeds, wood, or iron; the arrows of God are his judgments, executed by the elements of nature, (Psal. 18. 13—15.) or those divine denunciations, and terrors of conscience, which fly as lightning, and pierce and subdue the hearts of his enemies, Job 6. 4. Psal. 45. 5.

CHAP. XXXIII. Ver. 2. A fiery law.—As in the margin, "a fire of law," to burn up all hopes of self-righteousness. It is then the sinner cries, "what must I do to be saved?" Rom. 7. 9—11, 13, 24.——Ver. 5. King in Jeshurun.—Not Moses, but the Lord was king. (Compare ver. 2, 3.)——Ver. 6. Let not his men be few.—Two copies of the Septuagint, and some valuable MSS. adopted by Houbigant and other learned authorities insert here, "and Simeon, let his men be few;" and as this is the only tribe omitted in the authorized version, this variation being so supported, is worthy of attention.——Ver. 7. Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah.—Judah signifies Praise the Lord, therefore this prayer. It includes a petition likewise for Messiah who was to come of Judah, (Gen. 49. 10.) and whom God the Father "heareth always."——Ver. 10. They shall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Israel thy law.—There is a remarkable difference between the blessings of the tribes as delivered by Jacob, (Gen. xlix.) and Moses in this chapter. But the blessings of Jacob were principally temporal, those of Moses, chiefly spiritual. Those of Jacob to members of the nation, those of Moses to members of the church. The one chiefly to Israel "according to the flesh," the other to Israel "according to the spirit." The two lines of prophecy sometimes diverging, sometimes coincident; yet always equally true.——Ver. 12. Dwell in safety by him.—Near the place where God shall choose for his temple; and in point of fact, Jerusalem was a joint property of Judah and Benjamin, and the two tribes dwelt together. Between his shoulders, some translate "on his sides, or borders," but it seems rather to refer to a parent tenderly covering a child and carrying it upon his shoulders.——Ver. 14. Precious things put forth by the moon.—That, even in latitudes distant from the equator, the moon has a ripening power, can scarcely be doubted. In the central lands of the earth, where the moon is described as astonishingly bright, the ripening power must be proportionably increased. It describes a land of great fertility, in which every month produced a new succession of fruits. See Rev. 22. 2.——Ver. 28. The fountain of Jacob.—This seems first an allusion to Jacob's well, mentioned (John 4. 5, 6, 12.); and then to the fountain of human life, of which he was the prolific source.

CHAP. XXXIV. Ver. 1. And Moses went up, &c.—Most commentators consider this whole chapter an addition by Joshua, Phinehas, Ezra, or some other prophet; others consider it as the ancient commencement of the book of Joshua, which, by the act of some transcriber, as subjoined, was a conclusion to Deuteronomy; whilst others would terminate Deuteronomy with verse 4, and commence Joshua at verse 5. But all this is mere conjecture, and, unless aided by an additional conjecture, part must be self-evidently wrong. For, unless it be conjectured that Joshua went with Moses, who could tell what Moses saw; or know, or say any thing of his death, and the manner, or place of burial? But why all this profusion, this waste of unsupported conjecture? especially why such conjecture, seeing a simpler solution lies at the very threshold? Could not the Spirit of the Lord which enabled Moses to summon up and record the past events of the world from the morning of creation, and to foretell the future fates and character of a whole nation, up till this day, enable him also to describe the circumstances that preceded his own death but a few hours, and to foretell the manner of his burial, and to describe his own character, and typical superiority to all other prophets.——Ver. 6. Buried him in a valley in the land of Moab.—This is evidently a special delivery of the Spirit in four particulars. The burial, the valley, Moab, and the neighbourhood of Peor, which serves to strengthen the opinion advanced in the preceding note.——His sepulchre.—The conjecture that the tomb of Moses was concealed lest his bones should become objects of idolatry, seems unfounded, inasmuch as hero worship, or relic or bone worship, never was a sin that beset Israel. They were imitators, not originals in idolatry. Is it not rather the last Mosaic type of him, who was dead, yet hath no tomb? who, being sought, was not found in the grave, but "risen as he said;" as Moses also certainly was when he appeared on the mount talking with Christ, Mat. 17. 3.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE FIRST TWO BOOKS OF THE PENTATEUCH.

GENESIS.

CHAP. II. Ver. 3. Blessed. This is the third recorded blessing; see ch. 1. 22, 28; and when applied to the sabbath-day, endows it with the gift of peculiar fruitfulness and multiplication of good. The honour or dishonour of the sabbath, has ever been the means and the evidence of a fruitful or barren, a growing or a withering church.——Seventh.—Here commences that remarkable reference to the number SEVEN, that will be found to continue to the end of the Scriptures. Six days of blessed work, closed by a seventh of sanctified rest, is the original week of creation, and well represents every form of perfection exhibited in the subsequent working of God.——Sanctified.—This sanctification includes the separation of the day from common uses, and the dedication of it to the service of God.——Ver. 5. Plant. The creation and ordering of sun, moon, stars, and earth, are mighty works, not unworthy of omnipotence; but the lowliest plant or herb, equally owes its origin and qualities to God: rightly considered, it no less illustrates his wisdom, power, and goodness. There is no difference to God between the formation of a sun and a blade of grass.——Rain.—Rivers, springs, rain, and dew, are appropriate emblems of grace. They are formed without man's aid, they are continued without his deserving, and they produce, by their diffusion, a universal fruitfulness, which no plan of human wisdom, and no combination of human agency could ever possibly effect. Springs, (John 4. 14.), rivers, (John 7. 38.), rain, (Is. 55. 10.), dew, (Hos. 4. 5.), are appropriate.——Ver. 9. Tree of life.—The tree of life is an emblem of Christ, "that eternal life that was with the Father, and was manifested to us," 1 John 1. 2. Knowledge of good, as emanating from obedience, evil, as emanating from disobedience.——Ver. 10. Eden.—Nothing with certainty is known of the precise situation of Eden, but two points: that it was situated somewhere on the banks of the Euphrates and Tigris. To the Euphrates Moses refers (ver. 14,) as to an object of perfect familiarity to the people whom he was leading from Egypt; and Hiddekel is identified, (Dan. 10. 4,) with the Tigris. The Pison has been supposed to be the Phasis, a river running into the Euxine; the Gihon, to be the Araxes, which runs into the Caspian. This account cannot be received, as it appears from ver. 10, that a single river went out of the garden, which was, in its course, parted into four heads. Of these the united streams of the Euphrates and Tigris form two heads, and of these again divided into two, as there is reason to believe, we have the four heads geographically described by Moses.——Ver. 12. Gold.—The Bible is essentially a geographical book, and this is the most ancient specimen of geography on record. Moses, who wrote by divine inspiration, for the instruction of a people familiarly acquainted with working in gold and precious gems, describes the lands watered by the rivers of paradise, by means of these natural productions. God has gifted different lands with different forms of riches, yet exposed every country to some inconvenience or want, and by this means he has provided, that, where better principles are wanting, the self-interest of nations shall promote social intercourse and prevent want. The possession and right use of riches is good, it is the love of money that the apostle pronounces "the root of all evil."

CHAP. III. Ver. 3. Some have supposed that Eve here stated the first untruth, by adding to the commandment of God, (ch. 2. 16, 17.); but there is no reasonable ground for this charge, as God may have graciously added those other limitations which she here enumerates, though not previously recorded by Moses. ——Ver. 6. Saw.—It is hence probable that our first parents avoided to approach or look upon the tree of knowledge of good and evil. God is of purer eyes than to look upon iniquity, (Hab. 1. 13.) man, his image and his servant, must not contemplate sin, Job 31. 1. Ps. 119. 37.——Ver. 22. One of us.—When, in ch. 1. 26, God said, "let us make man in our image," the counsel of the DIVINE ELOHIM, or Holy Trinity, in the formation of man is revealed. When in ch. 3. 22, God says, "the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil," the word "us" must refer as in the former case, to the Godhead, but who in the Godhead had knowledge of good and evil? even the Son, whose eternal delights were with the children of men, (Prov. 8. 31.), who loved his people "before the foundation of the world," and who, in the fulness of time, was "made a curse for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." The word evil here, does not signify moral evil, but that sorrow, toil, and death, inflicted as natural evils, with which alone, he that "knew no sin," yet who "bore our griefs, and carried our sorrows," was acquainted.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 7. Rule over him.—There is no cause for jealousy, for Abel, though specially honoured of God, is still ready to obey Cain, as his elder brother. ——Ver. 8. Field.—The field, and not the altar of worship, as painters frequently represent, is mentioned as the scene of this melancholy transaction. Does not this suggest the probability that the immediate occasion of quarrel, was some division of the land becoming necessary in consequence of the different occupations of the brothers—pasturage and tillage.——Ver. 15. Sevenfold.—Why was not Cain sentenced to death, according to Gen. 6. 9? Simply because his crime, however aggravated, was not murder, but manslaughter.

CHAP. V. Ver. 29. Moses does not mention that Enoch was a prophet, but this information was supplied by Jude 14. So Moses does not expressly say of Lamech (not the son of Cain, of the same name, but of Methuselah,) that he was a prophet. Yet the name Noah, which he gives to his son, signifying rest or comfort, intimates a prophetic foresight of the work he was destined to accomplish in the salvation of the church by water, (Heb. 11. 7. 1 Pet. 3. 20, 21.) at the very time when his faith condemned, and water destroyed an unbelieving and rebellious world.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 7. The land of Canaan so called from the son of Ham, had the Mediterranean to the west, Egypt to the south, Arabia to the east, and Phenicia to the north. From Dan on the north, to Beersheba on the south side. It is in length about 200, and its average breadth is about 90 miles. But this did not include the entire possession promised to Israel, as appears from Josh. 1. 4, which extension was realized in part to David, and completely to Solomon, 1 Kin. 4. 21.—Builded he an altar.—That Abram, before this time, knew and worshipped God, there can be no doubt; but this is the first altar erected by him; that is, the first decided and public establishment of the worship of Jehovah in his family.—Note. It is well known, that young Christians, who worship God in private, often find considerable difficulty in commencing family worship. Let them remember Abram's faith, and Abram's altar, and Abram's blessing, and take courage.——Ver. 8. Abram, in his new habitation, erected a second altar to God.—Note. It is not uncommon for men to speak and act religiously in one company or place, where religion is prevalent, or if it may be so called, fashionable, who yet totally lay it aside in another place or company, where religion is less regarded, or, perhaps, altogether despised. Abram testifies for God wherever he goes.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 15. The title of the Jews to the land of Canaan, is as valid now, as in the day it was granted by Jehovah to Abram, as no adverse possession of the Gentiles can invalidate the right of the Creator to give it to whom he pleases. The return of the Jews to Canaan, is an event clearly predicted in the Scriptures. See especially Ezek. 37. 21, 22, so that their title for ever, though for a time suspended, will, in God's good time, be finally resumed.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1. This is the first time in the Scriptures that the Word of the Lord, is employed as a descriptive title of him "that was with God, and was God, see John 1. 1. It is impossible to read and believe this chapter, and deny that the "Word," is Jehovah. In verse 1, the Word of the Lord comes, saying:—I am thy shield; and here, (ver. 2.) Abram addresses him as the Lord God, see also 4, 8.—— Ver. 18. Those pieces.—The first emblem, a smoking furnace, was an apt representation of the state of Abram's seed under the Egyptians and the Gentiles, see Jer. 11. 4. Zech. 13. 9. The second, a burning lamp, was a no less expressive emblem of that word of which they were made the preservers, (see Ps. 119. 105. Rom. 3. 7. & 9. 4.) of that Light of the world, (John 1. 9.) that was to arise amongst them, and of that finally glorious state of light, that, in the covenant of truth and mercy, still awaits them, Is. 60. 1—3. & 62. 1.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 14. Against every man, and every man's hand against him.—The descendants of Ishmael were divided into tribes, after the manner of the Jews, differing to a certain extent, in dispositions, habits, character, and government. Many of them made great advances in civilization and learning; and exhibited the ordinary aspect of powerful, settled, and regular communities. Still there has been a vast number, of whom the Bedouins are most generally known, who have, in all ages, practically and literally realized this prediction, and lived, as they still do, in a state of uninterrupted hostility with all men; seeking no home but the desert, submitting to no law but their will, and acknowledging no right but their sword; "their hand against every man, and every man's hand against them."——And he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren.—To ascertain the meaning of this phrase, we must recollect that, one peculiarity in the prophecies concerning the Jews—another branch of the Abrahamic tree—was, (Deut. 28. 64.) "and the Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other." Now this was foretold of the child of the promise, the descendants of Isaac; but of Ishmael, the son of the bond-woman, it is said, he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren; that is, while Israel shall be scattered, dispersed, and outcast, (Is. 11. 12.) from the land promised to Abram, Ishmael shall abide in the land promised to Hagar. The event has verified the prediction, and proved that it proceeded from him who "determined the bounds of their habitation. Israel is scattered in judgment as chaff of the threshing-floor; Ishmael abides immoveable as Sinai.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. Almighty God.—This is the first time Jehovah calls himself Almighty; or, as some render it, and the word will bear, all-sufficient. It is important to remark, that God, whose perfections are infinite, can never, in the language of a finite being, fully bring out the catalogue of his attributes. But, on all occasions, he puts forth that special view of his perfections which is best calculated, in his special circumstances, to be the pillar of the believer's faith. Abram was a stranger, and surrounded by enemies, God, therefore, declares himself the Almighty, able to protect him in all dangers, as well as to fulfil all his promises.——Ver. 22. God went up from Abraham.—The best comment on this passage is found in Acts 1. 9, 10; in which it is recorded that the Son of God, after his resurrection, and forty days converse with his disciples, "was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight;" and in which it is prophesied that "he shall come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 11. Women go out to draw water.—In most countries there are certain kinds of labour appropriated by common consent, some to men, others to women. In Mesopotamia, it seems the drawing of water, as a domestic work, was the woman's part: while, as afterwards appears, the care of the flocks was allotted to the man.——Ver. 53. Jewels.—So named from the word Jew, because the Jews being, at an early period, (see Exod. 28. 34. & 9. 11, 17, &c.) expert in the polishing and cutting of precious stones, and formation of gold and silver ornaments, continued to be the chief artists and dealers in that department of trade; and, accordingly, gave name to the products of their ingenuity, verses 31, 50, 51, 60. The language of Laban, verse 31, and of both Laban and Bethuel, verses 50, 51, in which they ascribe the ruling of all events to the LORD; but above all their parting blessing in the name of the LORD, verse 60, exhibit the quality of that religious system under which Rebekah was nurtured, and the grounds of the choice that Abraham made!

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 27. And the boys grew.—The early development of different propensities in Esau and Jacob is very remarkable, and the visible causes of their respective characters, may be traced to the dispositions and partialities of the parents. Isaac loves venison, and first to please his father, and then to gratify his own acquired habits, Esau becomes a cunning hunter. Rebekah loves domestic retirement, finds her comfort in the society of her infant Jacob, and forms his future character on the model of her own.—Note. These things are to be carefully observed, (1) How early, and insensibly, some part of the character of a father or mother may be propagated in their children. (2) The consequent importance of well considering all the habits in which a child is indulged or encouraged, as part, and often the most influential part, of its education. (3) The danger of parental partialities, from which, in this remarkable instance, many of the future troubles of Isaac and Rebekah, and Esau and Jacob, arose.

CHAP. XXVI. Ver. 31. Notwithstanding the defect in Isaac's character, and his sin in the case of Abimelech, verse 10, yet, like the sun emerging from a cloud, the prevailing excellence of his character is acknowledged, the blessing of the Lord is visibly perceived to rest on him, and his integrity is admitted by reliance upon his covenant and oath; and a heathen people are led by his residence among them, to the knowledge of the true God.

CHAP. XXXIV. Ver. 7. Were very wroth.—A sensitive regard to family honour, when conjoined with personal purity of principle and conduct, in all its members, is one of the most important public feelings, and one of the surest indexes of public morals. That this noble sentiment, may, when dissevered from religion, produce deceit and violence, as in the case of Jacob's sons, (ver. 13, 25.) is no charge against the sentiment itself; but rather an admonition to cherish it, in conjunction with that fear of God, without which every human principle of morals is either too weak to ensure its observance, or speedily degenerates into some specious vice.

CHAP. XXXV. Ver. 2. Put away.—Whilst "wicked men and seducers wax worse and worse," Jacob labours to make the sin and sorrow of his family an occasion of family reformation; and thus, out of evil, to extract good. That he did not sooner attempt to purge them from idolatry, cannot be charged against Jacob; for, though the narrative is silent about any such attempt, no one can thence infer that the attempt was never previously made. Let the extent of Jacob's family, (for he was a prince in the land,) be considered; let the idolatrous materials of which it was originally composed, be taken into account; and let Jacob be judged, not by those who neglect or despise family religion, but by those who, in circumstances somewhat similar, have most efficiently introduced, and most successfully maintained it; and they, instead of censuring past failure as evidence of past neglect, will admire that grace of God, which led Jacob to reform his family religion, and that moved his children and household to renounce every rite of idolatry to embrace the truth and worship of God. ——Clean.—Compared with Exod. 19. 10., this verse furnishes the first recorded example of washing, as a ceremonial picture of regeneration.—"Ye must be born again," and "except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God;" John 3. 5—7.

CHAP. XXXVII. Ver. 3. Son of his old age.—Benjamin was younger than Joseph; may we not therefore rather understand the phrase, with Onkelos, "the son of Elders," that is, what is sometimes still found, a child as wise as an aged and experienced man.——Colours.—A garment of several colours, is a mark of honour in all countries, more especially in the East. In Europe, every dignity has its appropriate colour and garment, in every profession and employment, civil or military.

CHAP. XLII. Ver. 15. By the life of Pharaoh.—"As Pharaoh liveth." Booth. If an oath, the words would be sinful, and a proof that Joseph had not altogether escaped the infection of the world. But as the charity "that thinketh no evil," can assign a harmless sense, that of a mere assertion, (compare 2 Sam. 20. 3.) there can be no good reason for dogmatically accusing Joseph of a sin of which he may be innocent.

CHAP. XLVI. Ver. 27. Were threescore and ten.—The statement of Moses in this verse, seems not to agree with that of Stephen, Acts 7. 14. Moses makes the number that came into Egypt, to be only threescore and ten, Stephen makes Joseph call his father and all his kindred, threescore and fifteen souls. Now is there here either an error, or a contradiction? Neither. Moses first rates the descendants of Jacob who accompanied him to Egypt at sixty and six, who are found thus:—Jacob's own children, eleven sons and one daughter, 12; Reuben's sons, 4; Simeon's sons, 6; Levi's sons, 3; Judah's three sons and two grandsons, 5; Issachar's sons, 4; Zebulon's sons, 3; Gad's sons, 7; Asher's four sons, one daughter, two grandsons, 7; Dan's son, 1; Naphtali's sons, 4; Benjamin's sons, 10; in all, sixty-six. To these add, Jacob himself, Joseph and his two sons born in Egypt, and the result is seventy, the whole of Jacob's family that settled in Egypt, according to verse 27. In this statement, the wives of Jacob's twelve sons are omitted, and they amounted but to nine. For, Judah's wife was dead, (chap. 38. 12.) Simeon's also appears to have been dead, (chap. 46. 10.), and Joseph's wife was already in Egypt. Now, these nine added to sixty-six, give seventy-five, the whole amount of Jacob's kindred that Joseph called into Egypt.——Ver. 34. Abomination.—Deep, inveterate, and almost inconquerable prejudices, against whole nations, and particular professions and employments, have been common in all ages; and, have never been eradicated but by Christianity, which teaches, "in Christ there is neither Jew nor Greek, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free; but Christ is all." The Egyptian prejudices against shepherds are ascribed to two causes; the one recorded by Josephus, the inroads, conquests, and cruelties of the borderers, called shepherd-kings; the other mentioned by Tacitus, the sacrifice by the shepherd nations of the bull and the ram—the one representing Apis, the other Jupiter Ammon, two principal deities of Egypt. The first was most probably the sole ground of prejudice in the days of Joseph, as there is no evidence that in his time the Egyptians had sunk into that idolatry, for which, by apostasy from the patriarchal religion of Abraham and Joseph, they became liable to the divine judgment, some centuries afterwards in the days of Moses.

CHAP. XLVII. Ver. 21. Cities.—The removal of the people to cities was necessary, for, in a rural distribution of houses, it would have been difficult, if not impossible to provide them food. It is most probable, however, that Joseph found many of the Egyptians, what they are at this day, an unsettled, a nomadic people. By bringing them into cities during the famine, he accustomed them to stationary dwellings, and settled habits, and where infidelity has accused him of cruelty, civilization must hail him as one of her chief benefactors. The habits of the wandering tribe, called Gypsies in England, will abundantly illustrate the evils of an unsettled condition; and the success of at least one minister in Scotland, in inducing a village of these wanderers, situate in his parish, to resign their nomadic habits, and come under the permanent inspection of the ministry, and regular preaching of the gospel, and afford opportunities for the systematic education of their children, will be cause of gratulation to every Christian philanthropist, and will form the best illustration and defence of the conduct of Joseph in this regulation.——Ver. 24. Fifth.—From chap. 41. 34, 35, it would appear that the produce collected as a royal rent, was but the fifth part of each year's crop, and whether this was, or was not, an increase on the customary amount does not appear; but, at all events, it was a moderate impost, and there appears no symptom of public dissatisfaction or complaint. How far private individuals may have availed themselves of Joseph's interpretation, and laid up in store against the anticipated famine, does not appear. But to estimate Joseph's management aright, Pharaoh must be considered as a merchant-king, one chief part, at least, of whose revenue consisted in agricultural produce, and not in direct or indirect pecuniary taxes; an arrangement still common in some eastern nations, and relics of which may still be traced in the seignorial rents of some parts of Italy, and other European nations. It was, therefore, not merely Joseph's right, but his duty to sell to the best advantage, his employer's merchandise. Nor was his employer bound by any principle of even charity to bestow his goods, while the purchaser was able to buy. Let the infidel scoffers who revile Joseph for his wisdom and fidelity, set the example of bestowing their goods to men able to pay for them; and then, but not till then, can they escape from the weight of their own revilings. Had Joseph, indeed, enslaved the people, or had he taken advantage of their necessities to inflict an overwhelming rack-rent, there might, and there would have been ground for accusation; but he did none of these things, but after an administration of justice and mercy, left the people grateful, contented, and prosperous.

CHAP. XLVIII. Ver. 8. Beheld.—Jacob, who is here said to behold Joseph's sons, is represented (ver. 10.) as not able to see; some have therefore supposed the verses contradictory. They are not so. Jacob's eyes are only said to have been dim, not blind, so that he could not see more than dimly, and not being familiar with Joseph's sons, he had to inquire who they were.——Ver. 16. Angel.—The Messenger, the Redeemer, or kinsman appointed, in the law of Moses, to redeem any alienated inheritance, Lev 25. 25. Ruth 3. 12. In chap. 32. 24, we find Jacob engaged in prayerful wrestling with him, whom, in verse 30, he calls God. Again, in Hosea 12. 4, 5, this same person is called the Angel, even the Lord God of hosts; and by combining these passages with 2 Tim. 4. 18, this glorious person is seen to be the Lord Jesus Christ, who is of "the seed of David according to the flesh;" but, at the same time, "God over all, blessed for ever." Rom. 9. 5.

CHAP. XLIX. Unstable as water.—Obstinacy in our own opinions, when these are not founded on the sure word of God; perseverance in our own plans, when these are not guided by divine wisdom, nor prosecuted in love, are dangerous rocks upon which many have been shipwrecked. But not less dangerous are their opposites, vacillation of opinion, and instability of purpose. Unstable as water! moved by every breath of air, a spirit veering with "every wind of doctrine," descending to every lower level, even as "wicked men and seducers wax worse and worse." Thus water, which is never fixed but when frozen, is the emblem of the unconverted heart; never fixed on any purpose, but "enmity against God."——Ver. 10. Feet.—In Chap. 48. 12. we find Joseph bringing his two sons from between his knees, as a place of parental endearment and protection. By the Lawgiver never departing from between Judah's feet, we may accordingly well understand a succession of rulers in the tribe of Judah, till the coming of Christ, the Shiloh, our peace, our peace-maker.——Ver. 21. Words.—Or on the authority of the Septuagint, Chaldee paraphrase, and Arabic version, a spreading tree, shooting out goodly branches. But as the noun translated words, signifies divergencies, may we not retain the translation, "a hind let loose," that giveth forth goodly branches or antlers? The image of freedom and grace and fruitfulness, is thus complete.——Ver. 33.—The phrase gathered to his people, occurs also chap. 25. 8, 17. & 35. 29, and intimates not, that the parties who died were buried, but that they still lived, and were gathered in immortality to the people of the living God. It is the phrase employed by Paul, 2 Thes. 2. 1. "Now, we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him."

CHAP. L. Ver. 5.—It is customary even in European nations for the official attendants on royal courts, never to withdraw without the special leave of their sovereign.——Ver. 10. Beyond Jordan.—Not from Egypt, whence the funeral procession went, but from near mount Sinai in the wilderness, where Moses wrote.——Ver. 11.—Mourning for the dead is both lawful and salutary for believers; provided it be not accompanied with murmuring against God, and be mingled with the blessed hope of the immortality of the spirit, (2 Cor. 5. 8.) or the resurrection of the body, 2 Thes. 4. 13.——Ver. 16. Thy father did command before he died.—There is no reason to infer because this command is not previously mentioned, that, therefore, it is a fiction of Joseph's brethren. Joseph's employment about the court, and his brethren's residence in Goshen, allowed but little time for intimacy, and that full restoration of confidence which is best confirmed by habitual intercourse. Their recollection of their offence against Joseph, makes them anxious for a renewed confirmation of his forgiveness.—Note. How should the recollection of our offences against Christ, our brother, (Heb. 2. 11.) lead us, with Peter, to "weep bitterly" at the "throne of grace, that we may both obtain mercy, and find grace to help us in time of need." Heb. 4. 16.

EXODUS.

CHAP. I. Ver. 16. Shall kill him.—To persons educated in the principles of Christianity, this deliberate cruelty of Pharaoh seems almost incredible. But, when it is recollected that infanticide was tolerated by the laws of Solon at Athens, and of Lycurgus at Sparta, (and these were the two most renowned legislators of Greece) and that it is still legally practised to a vast extent in Hindostan, China, and elsewhere, this record of a decree, to us so apparently improbable, becomes an internal evidence of the truth of the Mosaic history.——Ver. 21. Made them houses.—The original Hebrew refers the houses or increase of families, not to the midwives, but to the Israelites.

CHAP. II. Ver. 3. Bulrushes.—The reed, the Cyperus papyrus of Linnæus, whence the word paper, was an article of the greatest importance to Egypt. The pith served as food, and the remainder was frequently formed into boats, as may be seen in many ancient Egyptian engravings on stone. The reeds were first tied up in small bundles, and then formed into boats, being united together, in a manner somewhat similar to the practice in many countries in the formation of bee-hives of straw.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Horeb.—Sinai and Horeb were the names of two eminences of the same mountain range.——Ver. 2. The angel of the Lord.—That God is essentially "invisible," is the revealed doctrine of Scripture, (1 Tim. 1. 17.) and when his infinity is considered, must be the deduction of reason. Yet to deny God the power of rendering himself visible were to limit both his omnipotence and his wisdom. Nay, it were to deny to God the capacity that he has actually bestowed upon the spirit of man; which, though invisible to the eye, makes its presence, its will, and its excellence, visible by spirit and action in a body. On this occasion, God renders himself visible by a flame of fire, by speech, promise, and command; and this appearance is called "the angel of the Lord," verse 2; "JEHOVAH," and "God," verse 4; and the "God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob," and "God," verse 6. Now, it is declared, John 1. 18. "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared (educed) him." Therefore, this manifestation of the invisible God, was "the WORD that was with God, and was God."——Ver. 5. Holy ground.—The eastern shoe, or sandal, was so constructed, as to be easily removed, like the European slipper. In eastern countries, to take off the shoe, both in ancient and modern times, closely corresponds with the European custom of taking off the hat.——To render a place, a garment, or a vessel, or other inanimate object, holy, signified to set it apart from its common use to the service of God.——Ver. 24. Borrow.—This statement has often become the butt of the infidel's arrow, on the ignorant supposition that the God of the Hebrews meditated, planned, and approved robbery, under pretence of borrowing. The passage obtains a triumphant defence upon two principles. 1. The word translated borrow, simply signifies to ask. 2. Let the objector reflect how long Israel had served Egypt, in a state of cruel and unremunerated slavery; and then say, were all the treasures of Egypt sufficient to pay them reasonable wages? He that buys a slave has some pretence (and but a pretence,) to use him as his property, and render him nothing beyond food and raiment; but he that makes a freeman a slave, as Pharaoh did, has not even that pretence. Let it be farther remembered, that the Hebrews were, at this period, not merely field-labourers, but practical architects, (verse 14,) and accomplished artisans (chap. 31. 3—6. and 35. 30—35;) and the amount of wages due will be still farther increased, and the "spoiling of the Egyptians," such an act of common justice, as an upright judge, in modern times, would inflict upon any one, refusing to pay his servant's wages.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 25. A bloody husband art thou to me.—In verse 14, "The anger of the Lord was kindled against Moses," and this seems to point him out now, and not the child, as the object of the angel's displeasure. Zipporah, a tender, faithful, and religious wife, takes a sharp stone, the instrument commonly employed in those times and countries, for incisions in the human flesh. She circumcises the foreskin, as a religious rite of obedience to God; and she casts, not it, but herself, before the angel—the same that had appeared to Moses in the bush; and to him, and not to Moses, she says—surely a bloody husband, that is, by the covenant blood of circumcision, art thou to me; and therefore, as she urges in prayer, by that covenant, bound to protect herself and her family. Thus, at his wife's intercession, the angel let Moses go; then said the affectionate wife, with joy at his recovery—surely a bloody husband, rejoicing to reiterate the title, by which she had addressed the angel, and, by her intercession, saved her husband.—Note. The main difficulty in this passage, arises from supposing a previous neglect of circumcision, and accusing Zipporah of anger. But surely where a good motive can be assigned, charity will prefer it to a bad one. The blessed result of a husband praying for his wife, or a wife for her husband, 1 Cor. 7. 16. Husbands and wives, give yourselves to prayer for one another!

CHAP. XI. Ver. 10. Out of his land.—The refusal of liberty to emigrate is one of those infringements of natural rights, that will be clearly comprehended by the inhabitants of free states; and, when it is recollected that Moses was instructed merely to ask time and liberty for the worship of God—that is, liberty of conscience—the picture of Egyptian bondage is complete. Yet is not the history of Pharaoh's oppression an accurate emblem of that more cruel tyranny which sin exercises over unconverted men? "Whosoever committeth sin, is the servant (bond-slave) of sin." Lord, let the Son make us free, then we shall be free indeed!

CHAP. XII. Ver. 15. Let it be recollected that the Passover furnishes one of the most glorious titles of Christ, as it is written, (1 Cor. 5. 7,) "Christ our PASSOVER is sacrificed for us," and then we will be prepared to see, in this history, an accurate type of many things concerning him. A few of the most remarkable we shall notice. (1) Egypt, ver. 1, the land of bondage, is the emblem of that slavery and oppression of sin in which Christ finds every man whom he delivers. (2) The new commencement of the sacred year sets forth (ver. 2.) that "newness of life," to which the believer is called, and in which he walks. (3) The Lamb without blemish, (verses 3, 5,) furnishes another of Christ's titles, (John 1. 29. 1 Pet. 1. 10. Rev. 5. 6—8, 12, 13, &c.) The Lamb, as the first sacrifice, (Gen. 4. 4,) aptly sets forth him, who, in the purpose of God, and in types and prophecies, is the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world," Rev. 13. 8. (4) The blood, (verses 7, 23,) sprinkled on the posts of the lintel, but not on the threshold of the door, portrays that blood which is not to be "trodden under foot," Heb. 10. 29. (5) The unleavened bread (ver. 8,) (bread uncombined with any yest or barm) is the emblem of that "sincerity and truth," with which Christ must be served, 1 Cor. 5. 8. (6) Bitter herbs, (ver. 8,) (as medicinal beyond what are sweet,) set forth the renewing and healing power of Christ, while they remind us of that bitterness of repentant recollection with which the believer contemplates his past sin. Thus, "Peter went out and wept bitterly," Mat. 26. 75. (7) The loins girded, (ver. 11,) that is, the tucking up of every loose and flowing robe under the girdle, removing its obstruction to movement, sets forth the necessity of "laying aside" in the Christian life, the "sin that doth most easily beset (or entangle) us," Heb. 12. 1. (8) The shoes on the feet, contrary to the custom in the East, where the feet, at table, were bare, (see Luke 7. 38. John 13. 5.) indicate the necessity of every spiritual defence against the asperities of the way in which the believer must walk. (9) The staff in the hand—a living hand grasping, and a living man borrowing support from a dead material, aptly sets forth the aid which a living faith receives from lifeless ordinances, whilst the haste of eating forcibly reminds us, that in all concerns of the soul, we must "haste and delay not, to keep God's commandments," Ps. 119. 60.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 13. From Num. 18. 15, we learn that "the firstlings of unclean beasts," were to be redeemed; but in this passage we find an alternative, viz. breaking the neck in the case of the ass. By referring to the fourth commandment, we find that the ox and the ass are alone enumerated as the representatives of the clean and unclean beasts; and hence we may infer, that as the firstling of the ass might either be redeemed with a lamb, or destroyed, so, a like rule of redemption or destruction, might be applied to the firstlings of all other unclean animals.—Note. (1) Infidels have cavilled against this law, as an alleged instance of cruelty. But will these infidels refuse to put an animal to death to satisfy the demand of their natural appetite? They will not refuse. How then dare they to accuse God, when he orders an animal to die, to teach avarice to sacrifice its property to him that bestows it all? (2) This law of redemption or destruction is expressively symbolic of the state of the unclean sinner, he must be redeemed by the "blood of the Lamb," or he must be destroyed with "everlasting destruction."

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 15. "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." —The miserable depression of the Israelites, will be best understood by recollecting that, though more numerous than the Egyptians, they had submitted to have their male children drowned. Had such a people been led directly into Palestine, a march of but a few days, the warlike inhabitants, unless prevented by a sweeping miracle, would immediately have attempted to extirpate or enslave them; and, to avoid either, the Hebrews, in desponding cowardice, would have returned to Egypt. God mercifully leads them to a distance from their enemies, and, by that distance, prevents any sudden occasion to return.—Note. God seldom or never leads the young convert into immediate trial of his faith, hope, love, or patience. There is often also a wonderful estrangement between a new convert and his former acquaintances. He is led away from them, lest, in weakness, he should return to them. It is not until, "prepared to endure hardness," the soldier of the cross is called to "fight the good fight of faith."

CHAP. XV. Ver. 25. The waters were made sweet.—The bitter well of Hawara, is said to answer geographically to the position of Marah. And were we certain of their identity of themselves, and were we acquainted with the composition of the water, we might be enabled to judge whether the infusion of any wood might chemically effect a precipitation of the bitter ingredients. But if the "sweetening" of the waters were purely a chemical result, the miracle was not lessened; for God showed Moses the tree in answer to earnest prayer. From comparing, however, the passage with 2 Kings 2. 20, where a similar permanent "healing of the waters," was miraculously effected by the infusion of a little salt, we must rather consider the "sweetening" at Marah to be wholly miraculous, and the infusion of the wood a mere sign that the miracle was wrought in compliance with divine direction.—Note. Israel was proved by thirst and bitter water—they murmured against Moses, but cried not, as Moses did, to God. In some such way, God still proves his people; but let them not murmur against the world, but appeal to him who is able to help and relieve. The bitterest water of affliction is made sweet to him who commingles with it the knowledge of Christ "the power of his resurrection," and the "fellowship of his sufferings."

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 14. From under heaven.—This is one of those judgments of God against a nation, which infidels have most frequently assailed, as indicative of implacability, and therefore, as they assert, unworthy of God. The answer is plain. 1. If God be holy, he must be implacable against sin; and if against sin, he must also be implacable against impenitent sinners. 2. It is to be presumed that every shepherd holds it right to be implacable against the wolf—the cruel and insatiable destroyer of his defenceless flock. Such was the crime of Amalek (Deut. 25. 17.) Cruel and cowardly, he attacked the defenceless rear of the Israelites' line, when "feeble, faint, and weary." 3. Has any philanthropist denounced the punishment of pirates, robbers, and murderers? Have the merchants of the Mediterranean wept over the fall of Algiers, or the travellers of India protested against the extirpation of the Thugs? No. How then, dare infidels accuse God for a sentence which all men pronounce righteous, when they judge in another case? Out of their own mouths, and on their own principles, will they be condemned, and God will be "justified when he speaks, and clear when he judges." Psal. 51. 4. 4. Besides, the remembrance of Amalek, which God determined utterly to put out, implied, not the extirpation of individual, but of national life, an occurrence of which history affords many striking examples. Do men ever, in such cases, accuse Providence for what is actually done? No. How then, dare they accuse God for denouncing the same judgment he intended to inflict?

NOTES ON EXODUS.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1. Jethro.—Jethro was a believer in Jehovah, and a patriarchal, though not a Levitical priest; that priesthood being not yet instituted, and Moses, Aaron, and the elders, enter into church fellowship with him, (see ver. 7—12.) The domestic part of the scene described, presents a lively example to Christian families. (1) Moses' care to send his wife and children to a place of safety, (ver. 2.) during his dangerous negotiation with Pharaoh. (2) Jethro's affectionate restoration of them, (ver. 6.) when the danger was past. (3) The religious character of their entire intercourse, truly worthy of priesthood, prophets of the most high God. The political part of the narrative may afford the noblest lesson to all statesmen. Jethro speaks in the name of God, and no doubt, by his inspiration, (ver. 19, 23.) when he draws the true character of rulers, (ver. 21.) viz., "able men," in modern language, men of talent, such as fear God, men of heart-religion, "men of truth," who abhor the temporary aid of falsehood, "hating covetousness," who endure the toils of state, not for the advantage it may bring to the ruler, but for the blessing it may enable him to confer upon others. Lord, hasten the time when the "kings of the earth will be wise," when the "judges of the earth will be instructed!" when the "officers" of Israel "shall be peace," and her "exactors righteousness."

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1. Sinai.—Mount Sinai, which the Arabians call Tor, or the mountain, (a word of most extensive diffusion,) and Gibel Mousa, or, the mount or rock of Moses, is situate between the two northern arms of the Red sea, which thus formed a natural defence to the Israelites on the east, the south, and the west, while the mountains of El Tyh defended them to the north. Sinai and Horeb are often used promiscuously by the sacred writers: Horeb being probably the general name of the region, Sinai of a particular mountain. The cavils of infidels arising from this promiscuous use of the names of Sinai and Horeb, are founded upon the presumption of an accurate geographical knowledge of the Mosaic localities, which no one now possesses.——Ver. 5. Now.—This is God's second national promise since the Exodus. The first (chap. 15. 26.) included merely exemption from the diseases of Egypt; the second appropriates the nation as a precious treasure, and exalts them to a royal priesthood, and holiness. An apt illustration of the progress of grace in the heart. The guilty sinner, galled by the yoke of bondage, is drawn first to God by the promise of pardon and deliverance; and, anon, as the glories of the covenant of grace open upon his view, he finds himself "made accepted in the Beloved,"—"a king and a priest to God, even the Father," while Jesus is made to him of God, "wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption."

CHAP. XX. Ver. 5. A jealous God.—Paul (2 Cor. 11. 2, 3.) says, "I am jealous over you with a godly jealousy; I fear lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve, so your minds should be corrupted." It is thus God is jealous, lest his people should be corrupted to idolatry.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1. Judgments.—The ten commandments, or words, of chap. xx. contained the principles of divine law, as between God and man—this chapter enumerates certain judgments, or judicial application of these principles, where the cases are between man and man.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 22, 23.—To those who have had little actual experience of human life, the multiplicity, the minuteness, and the impressive sanctions of the laws on behalf of widows and orphans, may appear almost superfluous. But by those who have carefully observed how these defenceless parties are sometimes treated, the benevolence of these laws, and the deep practical acquaintance with human life, on which they are founded, will be readily perceived, and gratefully acknowledged. ——Ver. 26. Raiment.—The raiment of the poor modern Arab of the desert is, most probably, near akin to that of the poor Jew supposed to be given in pledge. It is generally woollen, nearly square, reaching from the shoulders to the calf of the leg, or the ankles. Two slits admit the arms, and it is joined at the neck, so as to form a hole, through which the head passes. It is open before from top to bottom; and is wrapped round the body, or let loose at the pleasure of the wearer. This, with an under shirt, forms all the poor Arab's dress. It is generally both his bed and covering at night; and a mat, or carpet, if it can be obtained, is all he requires to constitute perfect luxury. If nearly such was the raiment of the poor Jew, and there is good reason to believe it was, the law that restored it in the evening, when pledged through the day, indicates the Lord's minute and benevolent regard to the health and comfort of his creatures.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 3. Countenance a poor man in his cause.—The foregoing law forbids to follow; the succeeding forbids to court the multitude. A high profession of sympathy with the poor, loud and pretended boasted efforts to alleviate their sufferings, and redress wrongs, have ever distinguished the traffickers in popularity; from Absalom, who rebelled against his king, and his father, (2 Sam. 15. 2—6.) to Judas who, for thirty pieces of silver, betrayed and sold his Lord, (John 12. 5, 6.)—Note. The believer must follow Christ, and seek no praise but that which cometh of God, John 12. 23. Rom. 2. 29.——Ver. 21. Name.—According to the scriptural method, every name of a person was significant of his qualities or circumstances. God's name, as given, Exod. 34. 5—7, is an enumeration of many of his attributes, which attributes are descriptive of the essence of God. God's name in the angel, is therefore the "fulness of the Godhead," dwelling in his WORD. See Gen. 15. 1, 2. & 48. 15, 16. Hos. 12. 3—5.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 10. Body of heaven in his clearness.—It is only in the unclouded skies of the countries within, or approaching, the tropics, that the power of this expression can be fully appreciated.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 5. Shittim-wood.—The particular wood called Shittim, Sittinus and Sittah, is merely matter of conjecture. The Septuagint translate it incorruptible wood,—a name that, in some degree, may apply to many species. Jerome says it grows in Arabia, and resembles the white thorn in colour and leaves; and is so large as to yield long planks, which are hard, tough, smooth, and extremely boautiful. It is thought that the wood described by Jerome is the black acacia. It is abundant in the mountains of Sinai, and the surrounding desert. In Isaiah 41. 19, the shittim is joined with the myrtle and other fragrant shrubs; and, as the flowers of the acacia furnish, according to Dr Shaw, an excellent perfume, we have here an additional evidence of its identity with the Sittah.——Ver. 9. So shall ye make it.—Every part of the tabernacle and its furniture was shown in pattern to Moses: nothing being left to human imagination or discovery—a lesson of universal application. Let the church receive it, and order all things on the divine model. Let private Christians receive it, and remember that they "are the temples of the living God."——Ver. 31. Candlestick. The candlestick, or rather, lamp-bearer, consisted of one upright shaft, with six branches, each adorned with flowers, supposed to resemble lilies; with large knobs, supposed to resemble pomegranates, and smaller ones resembling an almond. Upon the top of the shaft, and extremities of the branches, were seven lamps, fed with pure olive oil, and lighted every evening by the priests in their courses. It was situate in the holy place, and gave light to the altar of incense, and table of shew-bread, which stood in the same apartment. The candlestick with its appurtenances, is the emblem of the church of Christ, Mat. 5. 14—16. All is pure gold, even to the tongs and snuff-dishes, the most precious metal of exchange, use, or ornament. Believers of every rank and office must be pure, (Mat. 5. 8.), being renewed; (Eph. 4. 23, 24.), cleansed, (1 Cor. 6. 11.), enriched as with gold, for they buy it, (Rev. 3. 18.) which buying, according to Isaiah 55. 1, is "without money and without price," the gift of free and sovereign grace, which faith appropriates on the authority of God; while their "light shines before men, who, seeing their good works, glorify their Father who is in heaven," Mat. 5. 16.——Ver. 39. With all these vessels.—The talent of gold is estimated from £5250 to £7013. This is the first time the word talent occurs in Scripture. May not the first use of it illustrate the impressive parable of the talents? Mat. 25. 14. One talent formed the candlestick, with all its necessary and ornamental parts; yet the candlestick itself gave no light; for that were required the oil and the fire. And, such is the man, who, with knowledge unsanctified by the Spirit, and affections unlighted by the love of Christ, "holds," rather bridles in the truth in unrighteousness; who, knowing God, glorifies him not as God; who changes his truth into a lie, and worships and serves the creature more than the Creator; who does not like to retain God in his knowledge; and, who, knowing the judgment of death against sin, not only commits sin himself, but derives his pleasure from his companions in guiltiness, Rom. 1. 18, 21, 25, 28, 32.

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 1. The priest's office.—The priestly office, being not only an eminent type of Christ, but likewise of all believers, who are "a royal priesthood," (1 Pet. 2. 9.) the work of consecration demands our special notice. (1) In the three animals for sacrifice, we have the surrender of life to God. (2) In the three forms of bread, the surrender of the means of life. (3) In the consecration, we may remark, the washing of Aaron and his sons. In this we have set forth, in emblem, the introduction of believers, "by the washing of regeneration," and renewing of the Holy Ghost; (Tit. 3. 5.) in the clothing, we have their justification by "the righteousness which is of God, through faith;" (Phil. 3. 9.) in the crowning, we have that honour to which the Father raises all who serve the Son; (John 12. 26.) in the anointing, we have that out-pouring of the Spirit, by which believers are endowed, instructed, and qualified for the holy offices and duties to which they are called; (1 John 2. 20, 27.) while in the girding of the garments, we have that firm determination with which true believers maintain their principles and protect their graces. Farther, in the laying of their hands on the head of the sacrifice, (Lev. 16. 23.) we have Christ confessing, not his own sins, (for he knew no sin,) but our sins which he bore, (1 Pet. 12. 24.) and we have believers repeating daily in the Lord's prayer, "forgive us our trespasses." In the killing of the sacrifices, we have the mortification of sin as an indweller, and the death to sin, as a ruler (Rom. 8. 13. & 6. 18.). In the commencement of the sacrifice with the inwards, especially with the fat, as the emblem of abundance, health, ease, we have that purification as by fire, of the inner man, which God specially desires, (Psal. 51. 6.) while in the final and total burning of the outwards, and more worthless inwards, we have the final and total deliverance of believers from the body of sin and death. Rom. 7. 24, 25. The ear of Aaron and his sons was first touched with the blood, for "faith cometh by hearing," and, nothing to a sinner is worth the hearing, but the blood that cleanseth from all sin." 1 John 1. 7. The thumb, the chief instrument of holding, and the thumb of the right hand, as the emblem of active power, was next touched; then the great toe of the right foot, the chief supporter of speedy and equable movement in walking or running, the Spirit signifying the need of pardon to the active powers of the whole man. Next, the blood was sprinkled round about the altar, to remind believers of the sinfulness of their holy things. Finally, the blood, the emblem of redemption; the oil, the emblem of the Spirit, were conjointly sprinkled upon Aaron and his sons, and their garments, thus reminding us, that it is the Spirit that "applies to us the redemption purchased by Christ, by working faith in us, and thereby uniting us to Christ in our effectual calling." Aaron and his sons thus consecrated, appear to give a wave-offering, which moved by their hands, as a branch moves in every wind, and to every quarter of the earth, acknowledged the Lord, who, "as far as the east is from the west, removes our transgressions," Ps. 103. 12. He likewise offered an heave-offering; that is heaving upwards the sacrifice, as an emblematic address to "our Father who is in heaven," and "who, as the heaven is high above the earth, hath love so great to them that fear him," Ps. 103. 11. The high priest's garments were hereditary, (ver. 28,) so is the righteousness of God, upon the High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus, (Heb. 3. 1.) "unto all and upon all that do believe," Rom. 3. 22. Aaron and his sons did eat in the holy place; even so, "whether we eat or drink, or whatsoever we do, (should be) all to the glory of God," 1 Cor. 10. 3. They were consecrated seven days, which represent all time; one week being a repetition of another, and denote the perpetual service which the eternal One requires.

CHAP. XXX. Ver. 10. Sin-offering of atonements.—The yearly atonement for the altar of incense, reminds us, not only to repent of acknowledged and visible transgressions, but specially to be humbled for "the iniquity of our holy things," Exod. 28. 38.—Note. Nothing, however spiritual, can be accepted of God, but through the blood of atonement.——Ver. 15. God, who is no respecter of persons, values the lives of rich and poor alike. What a lesson of humility to the rich! What a lesson of contentment to the poor!

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA.

THIS book represents God's fulfilment of his promises to the patriarchs and their descendants, in giving them the land of Canaan; and the fulfilment of Noah's curse upon Canaan, in the destruction and slavery of his descendants. It relates what was transacted by Joshua, as governor of Israel; particularly how God confirmed his call, and encouraged him to his work; his sending spies to view Jericho; the miraculous passage through Jordan, and erecting memorials of it; his sanctification of the people, by their circumcision and eating the passover, i—v; his miraculous conquest of Jericho, and severe punishment of Achan's theft of the spoil, vi, vii; his conquest of Bethel and Ai, and league with the Gibeonites, viii, ix; his conquest of the south part of Canaan, and causing the sun to stand still, x; his conquest of the northern parts of that country, xi; an account of Canaan, xii—xiv; his division of it to the nine tribes and a half; his appointment of cities of refuge, and of cities to the Levites, xv—xxi; his kind dismission of the Reubenites and Gadites, xxii; his solemn admonitions to the people, and renewal of their covenant with God; and, in fine, his death and burial, xxiii, xxiv.

CHAPTER I.

(1) God confirms Joshua as Moses' successor in the government of Israel; gives him commission, instruction, and encouragement, to put the Israelites in possession of Canaan: 1—9. (2) Joshua accepts the charge, and appoints the officers of the people to prepare them for the passage through Jordan; and that the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites, fit for war, should go along with them: 10—15. (3) All the tribes declare their acceptance of him for their governor, and solemnly promise subjection: 16—18.

NOW, after the death of Moses, the [a] servant of the LORD, it came to pass, that the LORD spake unto Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' [b] minister, saying,

2 Moses my servant is dead; now therefore [c] arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel.

3 ¶ [d] Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses.

4 [e] From the wilderness and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, [*] and unto the great sea, toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast.

5 ¶ [f] There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life. [g] As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

6 [h] Be strong, and of a good courage; for [†] unto this people shalt thou [‡] divide for an inheritance the land which I sware unto their fathers to give them.

7 Only be thou strong, and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses my servant commanded thee: [k] turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest [l] prosper whithersoever thou goest.

8 [m] This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt [*] have good success.

9 [n] Have not I commanded thee? Be strong, and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for [o] the LORD thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

10 ¶ Then Joshua commanded the officers of the people, saying,

11 Pass through the host, and command the people, saying, Prepare you victuals; for [p] within three days ye shall pass over this Jordan, to go in to possess the land, which [q] the LORD your God giveth you to possess it.

12 ¶ And to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to half the tribe of Manasseh, spake Joshua, saying,

13 Remember [r] the word which Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded you, saying, The LORD your God hath given you rest, and hath given you this land.

14 Your wives, your little ones, and your cattle, shall remain in the land which Moses gave you on this side Jordan; but ye shall pass before your brethren [s] armed, all [t] the mighty men of valour, and help them,

15 [u] Until the LORD have given your brethren rest, as he hath given you, and they also have possessed [x] the land which the LORD your God giveth them; then ye shall return unto the land of your possession, and enjoy it, which Moses, the LORD's servant, gave you on this side Jordan, toward the sun-rising.

16 ¶ And they answered Joshua, saying, [y] All that thou commandest us we will do, and whithersoever thou sendest us we will go.

17 According as we hearkened unto Moses in all things, so will we hearken unto thee: [z] only the LORD thy God be with thee, as he was with Moses. [†]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—God keeps up an honourable remembrance of his faithful servants. And it is a comfort to the church, that, although her ministers die, Jesus her Redeemer lives to provide others in their room. But those who have behaved well in an inferior station, will, in general, and ought to be advanced to a higher. Certainly, and seasonably, however slowly, the promises of God are fulfilled at last, with respect to every thing temporal or eternal: nor need we fear to proceed in the most difficult work, if God promise to us his presence and assistance. When he is pleased to work, none can let it. But, as we must live by the Accordingly the Hebrew word, has been derived, not from a root implying sin, but signifying to nourish, and has been translated hostess, and female tavern-keeper. But the word in the Hebrew does not elsewhere occur in a context that will allow it to be translated hostess, (See Lev. 21. 7, 14. Deut. 21. 18.) AND Joshua [a] rose early in the morning; and they removed from Shittim, and came to Jordan, he and all the children of Israel, and lodged there before they passed over.

2 ¶ And it came to pass after [b] three days, that the officers went through the host;

3 And they commanded the people, saying, When ye see [c] the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, and the priests the Levites bearing it, [d] then ye shall remove from your place, and go after it.

4 Yet there [e] shall be a space between you and it, about [f] two thousand cubits by measure: come not near unto it; that ye may know the way by which ye must go: for ye have not passed this way [g] heretofore.

6 And Joshua spake unto the priests, saying, [i] Take up the ark of the covenant, and pass over before the people. And they took up the ark of the covenant, and went before the people.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day will I begin to magnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that, [k] as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee.

8 And thou shalt command the priests that bear the ark of the covenant, saying, When ye are come to the brink of the water of Jordan, ye shall [l] stand still in Jordan.

best and greatest rulers must see with other people's eyes: and it is a great mercy to a nation when those, to whom interesting affairs are committed, are persons of fidelity and diligence. The grace of God can easily change the most vile sinner into a choice saint: and true believers will risk their all for God. Nor must we reject them as reprobates who are guilty of some very condemnable actions; there may be true and justifying faith where much corruption still works. But it is hard to get rid of a bad character when once fixed, even by repentance and amendment: and that remaining badge of our shame ought to excite us to frequent and bitter sorrow for the sin which occasioned it. God can easily send his terrors to the hearts of his enemies, so that the boldest shall tremble: and often sinners' frights are presages of their fall. But the faith of God's promises will powerfully influence a person to a regard for the people of God, even at the expense of natural affections. And, when we cannot prevent the ruin of our city or nation, we ought cautiously to provide for the safety of ourselves and kindred. And all agreements, especially such as concern life and death, ought to be made with the greatest exactness. We must never mingle with the world, which lieth in wickedness, if we would not be condemned with it. Faith, which foresees the ruin of the ungodly, will urge us to save ourselves from among them: and the lives that are jeopardied for Christ's service shall be secured by his mercy. But the most prudent means ought to be used for our safety, even while we trust our all to God and his redeeming grace. And God can easily make such as are weak, encouragers of his strongest saints.

our utmost, the Lord can step in and clear our passage. Let us follow his word as our guide, and our way will be right. But let us always set Jesus, the Ark of the covenant, before us, by faith depend on him, and with due reverence follow his example; and if we cannot get rid of our sins, let us detest them. Let ministers go before others, as he-goats before the flock; and, though they should be more exposed than others, that Christ, whose name they bear in their ministrations, shall be their protection; for God highly honours those that honour him; and those who are comforted and encouraged of God should encourage and strengthen their brethren. In the moment of difficulty the Lord will be seen. The greatness of the difficulty shall but the more magnify the power of God in overcoming it. And Christ will be the protection of his people in trouble or death, till they be all clean passed over into Canaan above. If then I expect a noted appearance of God for my relief, let me make solemn preparation for it, separating myself from every sinful lust and carnal care. Always seeking the honour which cometh from above, let me improve God's present manifestations of power and love as pledges of more, nay, of eternal and immediate enjoyment of him. Let no occasional advantage, gained by the opposition made to my happiness, or to the church of God, dismay me; for the Lord sits King upon the floods, and is mightier than the noise of many waters.

8 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua had spoken unto the people, that the seven priests, bearing the seven trumpets of rams' horns, passed on [k]before the LORD, [‖]and blew with the trumpets; and the ark of the covenant of the LORD followed them.

10 And Joshua had commanded the people, saying, Ye shall not shout, nor [†]make any noise with your voice, neither shall any word proceed out of your mouth, [i]until the day I bid you shout; then shall ye shout.

11 So the ark of the LORD compassed the city, going about it once: and they came into the camp, and lodged in the camp.

perish in trouble or in death, surely it becomes all to keep his mighty works in everlasting remembrance. Never let us hunt after pomp or finery in our memorials; for God has chosen the weak and foolish things of this world to confound all earthly glory. Let every accommodation, even in outward things, render us forward and exemplary in duty. If we be called forth to God's work, we may cheerfully leave all our worldly concerns behind us: and if we have God's presence with us, we need not be weary, nor doubt but we shall safely land at last: for, though the years of our pilgrimage should be many and sorrowful, they have an appointed end: let us therefore never hurry out of danger, till our work in it be finished. But, whatever perilous work God allots to us, let us go through it with proper despatch, never with unbelieving haste: and let us always honour those whom God honours by his providence. The religious inquiries of young people should be encouraged and gratified to the uttermost. If we wish them wise when they are old, they ought to be inquisitive when they are young. But, if we wish our present mercies to be doubly sweetened, let us compare them with our former ones.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Sad is the case of those against whom the Lord is come up as an enemy. How can their hearts be courageous, or their hands be strong? ing, and the priests took up the ark of the LORD.

13 And seven priests, bearing seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD, [n] went on continually, and blew with the trumpets: and the armed men went before them; but the rereward came after the ark of the LORD, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

14 And the second day they compassed the city once, and returned into the camp: so they did six days.

15 [o] And it came to pass on the [*] seventh day, that they rose early, [†] about the dawning of the day, and compassed the city after the same manner seven times: only on that day they compassed the city seven times.

16 And it came to pass at the seventh time, when the priests blew with the trumpets, Joshua said unto the people, [p] Shout; for the LORD hath given you the city.

17 ¶ And the city shall be [q] accursed, even it, and all that are therein, to the LORD: only Rahab the harlot shall live, she and all that are with her in the house, because [r] she hid the messengers that we sent.

18 And ye, [s] in any wise keep yourselves from the accursed thing, lest ye [t] make yourselves accursed, when ye take of the accursed thing, and make the camp of Israel a curse, and trouble it.

19 But all the silver, and gold, and vessels of brass and iron, are [u] consecrated unto the LORD: they shall come into the treasury of the LORD.

20 ¶ So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass, when the people heard the sound of the trumpet, and the people shouted with a great shout, that [x] the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city.

21 And they [y] utterly destroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword.[‡]

22 ¶ But Joshua had said unto the two men that had spied out the country, Go into the harlot's house, and bring out thence the woman, and all that she hath, [z] as ye sware unto her.

23 And the young men that were spies went in, and brought out Rahab, and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had; and they brought out all her [*] kindred, and left them [a] without the camp of Israel.[†]

24 And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein: only [b] the silver, and the gold, and the vessels of brass and of iron, they put into the treasury of the house of the LORD.

25 And Joshua [c] saved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's household, and all that she had; and she dwelleth in Israel even unto this day; because she hid the messengers which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho.

26 ¶ And Joshua [d] adjured them at that time, saying, [e] Cursed be the man before the LORD that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho: he shall lay the foundation thereof in his first-born, and in his youngest son shall he set up the gates of it.

God's covenant, or their happy virtue: but his mercy can remove the reproach and plague in his time. And by circumcision of their hearts, by feasting them on the flesh and blood of his Son, by giving them foretastes of the heavenly joys, and manifestations of himself as their leader and protector, he must prepare his people for their spiritual warfare. Such then as would courageously fight his battles should first solemnly devote themselves to him, and act faith upon him, in the use of his sacraments. But let us use the gospel manna while we have it; the time is at hand when it shall be no more offered: and let us never expect extraordinary supplies when ordinary can be had. But, if Jesus appear for our direction or encouragement in doubtful or perilous circumstances, let us entertain his visits with the utmost reverence, purity, and the readiest obedience.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—God takes a peculiar pleasure in honouring his ministers and ordinances; in trying the faith and patience of his people at their setting forth in their spiritual warfare; and in showing them that their success is not by human might or power, but by his Spirit. There is need, therefore, of patient perseverance in using the means of grace, though we see not their immediate good effect: for, if we follow God's ark, we shall speed at last, and see his salvation, and he can accomplish the most remarkable events by the weakest of instruments. By the bearing of Jesus' name, and proclaiming his gospel before sinful men, particularly on his sabbaths, what destruction is made of strong holds of inward corruptions, and high imaginations, deep-rooted customs, and laws of iniquity; of heathen and popish errors, idolatries, and superstitions, supported by all the principalities and powers of hell and earth! What in us is natural, he purifies for his service; and what is sinful, he devotes to irreparable ruin. Nor must we murmur at the severity wherewith God executes his judgments: he is just and righteous in all his works. They that will harden their heart against him must, when too late, find their ruin inevitable. But certain and extensive is that salvation which is marked with the blood of the Son of God! In virtue hereof, such as were once infamous in wickedness, become as noted in gifts and grace. Such as in this time of his grace submit to his terms of peace, he will in no wise cast out; and their relations shall share of manifold mercies on their account. But dreadful and inevitable is the ruin of such as attempt to rear up what God in anger hath cast down.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—How terrible a sin is sacrilege, especially when it is presumptuously committed! It brings the most tremendous plagues upon persons and nations. One sinner often destroys much good; and becomes a plague to himself, and to the societies with which he is connected. But terrors of conscience will at last most surely attend indulged wickedness: and the attempts begun in sloth or self-confidence, often issue in shame and despair. It is becoming, therefore, for the most courageous and intrepid to humble themselves under the mighty hand of God, and to tremble for fear of his displeasure. The choicest saints are too ready to be overmuch discouraged by the alarming frowns of God's providence: and in their anguish to utter words unadvised! and yet, when the honour of God,

Ai: see, [b] I have given into thy hand the king of Ai, and his people, and his city, and his land.

2 And thou [c] shalt do to Ai and her king as thou didst unto Jericho and her king: only [d] the spoil thereof, and the cattle thereof, shall ye take for a prey unto yourselves. Lay thee [e] an ambush for the city behind it.

3 ¶ So Joshua arose, and [f] all the people of war, to go up against Ai: and Joshua chose out thirty thousand mighty [e] men of valour, and sent them away [g] by night.

4 And he commanded them, saying, Behold, ye shall lie [h] in wait against the city, even behind the city; go not very far from the city, but be ye all ready:

5 And I, and all the people that are with me, will approach unto the city; and it shall come to pass, when they come out against us, as at the first, [i] that we will flee before them,

6 (For they will come out after us,) till we have [j] drawn them from the city; for [k] they will say, They flee before us, as at the first: therefore we will flee before them.

7 Then [l] ye shall rise up from the ambush, and seize upon the city: for the LORD your God will deliver it into your hand.

8 And it shall be, when ye have taken the city, that ye shall [m] set the city on fire: according to the commandment of the LORD shall ye do. [n] See, I have commanded you.

9 ¶ Joshua therefore sent them forth: and they went to lie in ambush, and abode between [o] Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of Ai: but Joshua lodged that night among the people.

10 And Joshua [p] rose up early in the morning, and numbered the people, and went up, he and the elders of Israel, before the people to Ai.

11 And all the people, even the people of war that were with him, went up, and drew nigh, and came before the city, and pitched on the north side of Ai: now there was a valley between them and Ai.

12 And he took about [q] five thousand men, and set them to lie in ambush between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side [‡] of the city.

13 And when they had set the people, even all the host that was on the north of the city, and [r] their liers in wait on the west of the city, Joshua went that night into the midst of the valley.

14 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king of Ai saw it, that they hasted, and rose up early; and [s] the men of the city went out against Israel to battle, he and all his people, at a time appointed, before the plain: but he [t] wist not that there were liers in ambush against him behind the city.

15 And Joshua and all Israel made as if they were beaten before them, and fled [u] by the way of the wilderness.

16 And all the people that were in Ai were called together to pursue after them; and they pursued after Joshua, and were [x] drawn away from the city.

17 And there was not a [y] man left in Ai or Beth-el that went not out after Israel: and they left the city open, [e] and pursued after Israel.

18 And the LORD said unto Joshua, Stretch out the spear that [†] is in thy hand toward Ai; for I will give it into thine hand. And Joshua [z] stretched out the spear that he had in his hand toward the city.

19 And the ambush arose quickly out of their place, and they ran as soon as he had stretched out his hand: and they entered into the city, and took it, and hasted and set the city on fire.

20 And when the men of Ai looked behind them, they saw, and, behold, the [a] smoke of the city ascended up to heaven; and they had no [b] power to flee this way or that way: and the [c] people that fled to the wilderness turned back upon the pursuers.

21 And when Joshua and all Israel saw that the ambush had taken the city, and that the smoke of the city ascended, then they turned again, and slew the men of Ai.

22 And the other issued out of the city against them; so they were in the midst of Israel, some on this side, and some on that side: and they smote them, so that they [d] let none of them remain or escape.

23 ¶ [e] And the king of Ai they took alive, and brought him to Joshua.

24 And it came to pass, when Israel had made an end of slaying all the inhabitants of Ai in the field, in the wilderness wherein they chased them, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the sword, until they were consumed, that all the Israelites [f] returned unto Ai, and smote it with the edge of the sword.

25 And so it was, that all that fell that day, and the safety of his people, lie nearest their heart, a proper sorrow, in such a state, is highly becoming. With impartial care, and proper expedition, should ruinous scandals and crimes be inquired into, and animadverted upon, for the preservation of churches and nations. If we do not destroy sin, it will destroy us. And it is mad to indulge ourselves in secret wickedness, when God can so easily bring it to light in the most public and shameful manner. It is desirable, yea, even hopeful, when criminals are brought to a candid and kindly confession of their sin: and yet it is necessary to have their punishment as public and striking as possible, that others may see, and hear, and fear to do such things; yea, in some cases, to keep up the standing memorials of it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Learn, my soul, that, whenever I put away the accursed thing, I may expect comfort from God: and that such as honour God with the first-fruits of their substance, are gainers at last; while those who greedily grasp the Lord's share become inconceivable losers: that all the people of God ought to strive together in their spiritual warfare: that prudence and caution are as necessary as strength to ensure success: that well-timed yielding procures victory, as well as pacifies great offences: and that divine assurances of success inspire men with courage and boldness, notwithstanding former disappointments. Let me here behold how God qualifies his armies, and infatuates his enemies. Short is the rejoicing of the wicked! and the prosperity of fools will destroy them. But they both of men and women, were twelve thousand, even all the men of [g] Ai.

26 For Joshua [h] drew not his hand back, wherewith he stretched out the spear, until he had utterly destroyed all the inhabitants of Ai.

27 [i] Only the cattle, and the spoil of that city, Israel took for a prey unto themselves, according unto the word of the LORD which he commanded Joshua.

28 And Joshua burnt Ai, and made it an heap [k] for ever, even a desolation unto this day.

29 And the king of Ai he [l] hanged on a tree until even-tide: and as soon as the sun was down, Joshua commanded that they should take his carcass down from the tree, and cast it at the entering of the gate of the city, and [m] raise thereon a great heap of stones,* that remaineth unto this day.

30 ¶ Then Joshua [n] built an altar unto the LORD God of Israel in mount Ebal;†

31 As Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, An altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron; and they [o] offered thereon burnt-offerings unto the LORD, and sacrificed peace-offerings.

32 And he [p] wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he‡ wrote in the presence of the children of Israel.

33 And [q] all Israel, and their elders, and officers, and their judges, stood on this side the ark, and on that side, before the priests the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, as well [r] the stranger, as he that was born among them; half of them over against mount Gerizim, and half of them over against mount § Ebal; as Moses, the servant of the LORD, had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel.

34 And afterward [s] he read all the words of the law, the [t] blessings and cursings, according to all that is written in the book of the law.

35 There was not a word of all that Moses commanded, which Joshua read not before all the congregation of Israel, [u] with the women, and the little ones, and the strangers that [l] were conversant among them.*

who fight the Lord's battles receive their glorious reward, when the end of ring-leaders, in presumptuous rebellion against the Lord, is in shame and confusion. Whatever then God requires me to do, let me do it with all my might. Never let my covenanting with God be deferred till I am settled in the world: and let no carnal concern hinder my regard to the one thing needful. If I am in the way of my duty, God will grant me special protection. While I serve God with his own, and depend on the atonement of his Son as the foundation of all my reconcilement and relation to him, and fellowship with him—while I heartily believe and consent to his will—let me do every thing in his worship exactly according to his prescriptions; and be careful that my wife, children, and servants, be acquainted with his word, and attending on his worship, as well as myself.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—While the people of God are busied in their sacred devotions, the wicked of the world are often occupied in plotting or attempting their destruction. And, while infatuated with malice and revenge, they are generally unanimous against God, his cause and people. But God, in great wisdom and kindness, commonly restrains the more formidable attacks of his enemies, till he has prepared his people to receive them. When alarmed by God's mighty works in favour of his chosen, men are sometimes ready to solicit their friendship, even by hypocrisy and deceit; while those, who pretend to do us most honour, are inwardly the readiest to impose upon us. Pretences of religion and antiquity are snares extremely deceiving; and when persons have once begun to lie, it is hard to say where they may stop. Good men may often be deceived by such pretences;

CHAPTER X.

(1) No sooner have the Gibeonites become Israel's servants, than five of the most powerful kings in the southern parts of Canaan enter into a league to destroy them: 1—5. (2) At the Gibeonites' request, Joshua marches to their relief, and, assisted by a terrible hail storm, easily routs the forces of the confederate kings: 6—11. (3) While the sun and moon at his request miraculously stand still, he pursues and kills the Canaanites, and, after marks of disgrace, he hangs their kings: 12—27. (4) He takes six royal cities; Makkedah, Libnah, Lachish, Eglon, Hebron, and Debir; slays all their inhabitants, and the Gezerites who came to the assistance of Lachish, and brings the whole country around under the power of Israel: 28—42.

A. M. 2553. B. C. 1451.

NOW it came to pass, when Adoni-zedek king of [a] Jerusalem had heard [b] how Joshua had taken Ai, and had utterly destroyed it; as he had done to Jericho and her king, so he had done to Ai and her king; and how the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were among them;

2 That they [c] feared greatly, because Gibeon was a great city, as one of the [*] royal cities, and because it was greater than Ai, and all the men thereof were mighty.

3 Wherefore [d] Adoni-zedek king of Jerusalem sent unto Hoham king of [e] Hebron, and unto Piram king of Jarmuth, and unto Japhia king of [f] Lachish, and unto Debir king of Eglon, saying,

4 Come up unto me, and help me, that we may smite Gibeon:[†] [g] for it hath made peace with Joshua, and with the children of Israel.

5 [h] Therefore the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, the king of Eglon, gathered themselves together, and went up, they and all their hosts, and encamped before Gibeon and made war against it.

6 ¶ And the men of Gibeon sent unto Joshua[‡] to the camp to [i] Gilgal, saying, [k] Slack not thy hand from thy servants; come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us: for all the kings of the Amorites, that dwell in [l] the mountains are gathered together against us.

7 So Joshua ascended from Gilgal, he, and all the people of war with him, and all the mighty men of valour.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, [m] Fear them not: for I have delivered them into thine hand; there shall not a man of them stand before thee.

† Without inquiring into the right of one nation to prevent another from making peace with a third, and accusing the associate kings, as we well might, upon this ground, we see in their conduct, the exact counterpart of the anger of worldly men against all who make peace with God. Thus forty men bind themselves with an oath, to slay Paul; and thus, the whole power of Charles V. was directed at the Reformation, to exterminate the Protestants; and thus, "every one that will live godly in Christ Jesus, must suffer persecution."—Ed.

for the wisdom of the serpent, even in them, is not always joined with the harmlessness of the dove. And those who are honest themselves, and forward in their actions, are more apt to be imposed on by solemn pretences to religion, and appearances of simple honesty, especially when they do not acknowledge the Lord that he may direct their paths. Covenants once made should be fulfilled with tenderness; and great care ought to be taken that peace and fidelity may go hand in hand. But how amazing are the dispensations of Providence, in the superabounding of grace where sin did much abound! By fraud Jacob obtained the blessing, which consecrated him and his seed to be the peculiar people of God: and by fraud these accursed Gentiles of Gibeon obtained a covenant, which issued in their attendance on the courts of God, as figures of the gathering of the nations to Christ and his gospel church. Him that cometh to Christ he will in no wise cast out; and, if he receive us, we need never complain of the cross which he lays on us. If we serve him, we may bless the day in which carnal liberty is exchanged for spiritual subjection.

9 Joshua therefore came unto them suddenly, and went up from Gilgal all [n] night.*

10 And the LORD [o] discomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up to [p] Beth-horon, and smote them to [q] Azekah, and unto [r] Makkedah.

11 And it came to pass, as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, that the LORD [s] cast down [†] great stones from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died: they were more which died with hailstones,[‡] than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword.

12 ¶ Then spake Joshua to the LORD, in the day when the LORD delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he [t] said in the sight of Israel, Sun, [§] stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.

13 And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. Is not this written in the book of [u] Jasher?[‖] So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day.*

14 And there [x] was no day like that before it, or after it, that the LORD hearkened unto the voice of a man: for the LORD fought for Israel.

15 And [y] Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

16 ¶ But these five kings [z] fled, and hid themselves in a cave at [a] Makkedah.

17 And it was told Joshua, saying, The five kings are found hid in a cave at Makkedah.

18 And Joshua said, [b] Roll great stones upon the mouth of the cave, and set men by it for to keep them;

19 And [c] stay ye not, but pursue after your enemies, and [†] smite the hindmost of them; suffer them not to enter into their cities: for the LORD your God hath delivered them into your hand.

20 And it came to pass, when Joshua and the children of Israel had made an end of slaying them with a very great slaughter, till they were consumed, that the rest which remained of them entered into fenced cities.

21 And all the people returned to the camp to Joshua at Makkedah in peace: [d] none moved his tongue against any of the children of Israel.

22 ¶ Then said Joshua, Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings unto me out of the cave.

* The neck being the place of the yoke in the horse, ox, &c., which are, in the most literal sense conquered captives, subdued by man's ingenuity or power, and held and sold at his will: "to put the feet upon the neck of men," is the emblem of their total subjugation to the will of their conquerors. So David expresses his victories over his inveterate enemies, (Ps. 18. 40.) The custom seems to have been universal. Soper, king of Persia, is said to have put his foot daily upon the neck of the Roman emperor Valerius, whom he had taken captive in battle. Quintus Curtius records an example of the same kind, when Dioxippus an Athenian, conquered in a single combat with Horratas, a Macedonian, in presence of Alexander, and concluded with putting his foot upon the neck of his prostrate antagonist. To those who have formed their ideas upon European models, the custom may appear unnecessarily degrading; but to men of Asiatic ideas, it conveys no such impression. It merely indicates the completeness of subjugation.—Ed.

becoming converts to him: and, like their great leader, the wicked likewise are unanimous and hearty in their wickedness, and in persecuting the people of God. But, when spiritual or temporal enemies thrust sore at us, then we feel the necessity of looking up to Jesus, the Captain of the Lord's host, for salvation. If we have given up ourselves to him, we may be cast down, but cannot be destroyed: Jesus and his angels will fly to our relief: his power, his prayers, shall concur for our protection and deliverance! But how terrible is the danger of his enemies! Both heaven and earth conspire to effectuate their ruin! Every assistant, every retreat.

(3) Together with a narrative of the destruction of the Anakims, we have a general account of the country west of Jordan, importing that Joshua had in the war acted according to God's direction, and God had granted him success, according to his promise to Moses: 16—23.

AND it came to pass, when Jabin king of [a] Hazor had heard those things, that he [b] sent to Jobab king of [c] Madon, and to the king of Shimron, and to the king of Achshaph,

2 And to the kings that were on the north of the mountains, and of the plains south of [d] Chinneroth, and in the valley, and in the borders of Dor on the west;

3 [e] And to the Canaanite on the east and on the west, and to the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Jebusite in the mountains, and to the Hivite under [f] Hermon in the land of [g] Mizpeh.

4 And they went out, they and all their hosts with them, much people, even [h] as the sand that is upon the sea-shore in multitude, with horses and chariots very many.

5 And when all these kings were [*] [i] met together, they came and pitched together at the waters of Merom, to fight against Israel.†

6 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, [k] Be not afraid because of them; for to-morrow, about this time, will I deliver them up all slain before Israel: thou [l] shalt hough their horses, and burn their chariots with fire.

7 So Joshua came, and all the people of war with him, against them by the waters of [m] Merom suddenly, and they fell upon them.

8 And the LORD delivered them into the hand of Israel, who smote them, and chased them [n] unto ‡ great Zidon, and unto [§] [o] Misrephoth-maim,[‖] and unto the valley of Mizpeh eastward; and they smote them, until they left them none remaining.

9 And Joshua did unto them as the LORD bade him: he [p] houghed their horses, and burnt their chariots with fire.

10 ¶ And Joshua at that time turned back, and took [q] Hazor,* and smote the king thereof with the sword: for Hazor beforetime was the head of all those kingdoms.

11 And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them; there was not [r] any left to breathe: and he burnt Hazor with fire.

12 [s] And all the cities of those kings, and all the kings of them, did Joshua take, and smote them with the edge of the sword; and he utterly destroyed them, [t] as Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded.

13 But as for the cities that stood still [†] in their strength, Israel burned none of them, save [u] Hazor only; that did Joshua burn.

14 And all [x] the spoil of these cities, and the cattle, the children of Israel took for a prey unto themselves; but every man they smote with the edge of the sword, until they had destroyed them, neither left they any to breathe.‡

15 [y] As the LORD commanded Moses his servant, so did Moses command Joshua, and so did Joshua: [z] he left nothing undone of all that the LORD commanded Moses.

18 Joshua made war [o] a long time with all those kings.[*]

19 There was not a city that made peace with the children of Israel save [f] the Hivites, the inhabitants of Gibeon; all other they took in battle:

20 For it was of the LORD [g] to harden their hearts,[†] that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favour,[‡] but that he might destroy them, [h] as the LORD commanded Moses.

21 ¶ And at that time came Joshua, and cut [i] off the Anakims from the mountains; from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, and from all the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel: [k] Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities.

22 There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Israel; only [l] in Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod, there remained.

23 ¶ So Joshua took the whole land, [m] according to all that the LORD said unto Moses; and Joshua gave it for an inheritance unto Israel, [n] according to their divisions by their tribes. And the land [o] rested from war.

Within the range of authentic history, a part of England furnished seven kingdoms.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—How madly do sinners rush headlong into ruin, notwithstanding repeated warnings by the destruction of others! The strength and multitude of their confederacy do but make their ruin the more notorious. But, the greater the dangers which surround his people, the greater supports should they ask and expect from God: and, the more entirely their heart is fixed on him as their strength, the more certainly shall their spiritual enemies be subdued before them. That to which sinners flee for help is often but a trap to ensnare them: and their destruction is certain, though sometimes slow; and always just and wise, however severe: the most powerful not excepted. But sure is the victory of his people over all their enemies; and happy is it when God's exact fulfilment of his promises, and our upright performance of our duty, unite together. And blessed indeed must that warfare be, which issues in eternal triumph and rest to Christ and his people!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Former mercies from God, or services from men, must never be forgotten for the glare of present ones. How happy the saints

(1) God informs Joshua what part of the promised territories remained yet unconquered: 1—6. (2) He orders him to make an immediate division of the whole, though he would not live to subdue it all: 1—7. (3) The division made by Moses to the Reubenites, Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, is again represented: 8—33. (4) It is repeated that the Levites had no inheritance but the offerings of the Lord: 14, 33.

A. M. 2559. B. C. 1445.

NOW Joshua was [a]old[*] and stricken in years; and the LORD said unto him, Thou art old and stricken in years, [b]and there remaineth yet very much land [†]to be possessed.

2 [c]This is the land that yet remaineth: [d]all the borders of the Philistines, and all [e]Geshuri,

3 From [f]Sihor,[‡] which is before Egypt, even unto the borders of Ekron northward, which is counted to the Canaanite: five lords of the Philistines; the [g]Gazathites, and the Ashdothites, the Eshkalonites, the Gittites, and the Ekronites; also the Avites:[§]

4 From the south, all the [h]land of the Canaanites, and [‖]Mearah that is beside the Sidonians, unto Aphek, to the borders of the Amorites;

5 And the land of the [i]Giblites,[*] and all [k]Lebanon, toward the sun-rising, from Baal-gad under [l]mount Hermon,[†] unto the [m]entering into Hamath;

6 All the inhabitants of the hill-country, from Lebanon unto [n]Misrephoth-maim, and all the Sidonians; them [o]will I drive out from before the children of Israel: only divide thou it [p]by lot unto the Israelites for an inheritance, as I have commanded thee.

7 Now therefore divide [q]this land for an inheritance unto the nine tribes, and the half-tribe of Manasseh;

8 With whom the Reubenites and the Gadites have received their inheritance, [r]which Moses gave them, beyond Jordan eastward, even as Moses, the servant of the LORD, gave them;

9 From Aroer, that is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river, and all the plain of Medeba unto Dibon;

10 And all the cities of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, unto the border of the children of Ammon;

11 And Gilead, and the border of the [‡][s]Geshurites and Maachathites, and [t]all mount Hermon, and all Bashan unto Salcah;

12 All the kingdom of Og in Bashan, which reigned in Ashtaroth, and in Edrei, who remained of the remnant [u]of the giants: for these did Moses smite, and cast them out.

13 Nevertheless the children of Israel [x]expelled not the Geshurites, nor the Maachathites; but the Geshurites and the Maachathites dwell among the Israelites until this day.

14 Only [y]unto the tribe of Levi he gave none inheritance; the sacrifices of the LORD God of Israel made by fire are their inheritance, as he said unto them.

15 ¶ And Moses gave[*] unto the tribe of the children of Reuben inheritance according to their families.

16 And [z]their coast was from Aroer, that is on the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river, and all the plain by Medeba;

17 Heshbon, and all her cities that are in the plain; Dibon,[†] and [a]Bamoth-baal, and Beth-baal-meon,

18 And Jahaza, and Kedemoth, and Mephaath,

19 And Kirjathaim, and Sibmah, and Zareth-shahar in the mount of the valley,

20 And [b]Beth-peor,[‡] and [§]Ashdoth-pisgah, and Beth-jeshimoth,

21 And all the cities of the plain, and all the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, [c]whom Moses smote with the princes of Midian, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, which were dukes of Sihon dwelling in the country.

22 ¶ [d]Balaam also the son of Beor, the soothsayer, did the children of Israel slay with the sword among them that were slain by them.[‖]

23 And the border of the children of Reuben was Jordan, and the border thereof. This was the inheritance of the children of Reuben after their families, the cities and the villages thereof.

24 ¶ [e]And Moses gave inheritance unto the tribe of Gad, even unto the children of Gad, according to their families:

25 And their coast was Jazer, [f]and all the cities of Gilead, and [g]half the land of the children of Ammon, unto Aroer that is before [h]Rabbah;

26 And from Heshbon[*] unto [i]Ramath-mizpeh, and Betonim; and from [k]Mahanaim unto the border of [l]Debir;

27 And in the valley, [m]Beth-aram, and Beth-nimrah, and Succoth, and Zaphon, the rest of the kingdom of Sihon king of Heshbon, Jordan and his border, even unto the edge of the sea of [n]Chinnereth, on the other side Jordan eastward.

28 This is the inheritance of the children of Gad after their families, the cities and their villages.

who have possession of manifold blessings on this side the Jordan of death, even while their principal inheritance lies beyond it! How fruitful then was the promised land, which could support such multitudes of men! How fearful the guilt, and tremendous the curse, which for many ages have rendered it one of the most barren and useless spots on the earth! How confined was the ancient ambition of kings!

and how good was God to Israel, who gave so many nations for their ransom, and people for their life!

29 ¶ And Moses gave inheritance unto the half-tribe of Manasseh: and this was the possession of the half-tribe of the children of Manasseh, by their families.

30 [o] And their coast was from Mahanaim, all Bashan, all the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, and all the towns of Jair, which are in Bashan, threescore cities;

31 [p] And half Gilead, and Ashtaroth, and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan, were pertaining unto the children of Machir the son of Manasseh, even to the one-half of the children of Machir by their families.

32 These are the countries which Moses did distribute for inheritance in the plains of Moab, on the other side Jordan, by Jericho, eastward.

33 [q] But unto the tribe of Levi Moses gave not any inheritance: the LORD God of Israel was their inheritance, as he said unto them.*

CHAPTER XIV.

(1) Canaan divided by immediate direction from God through casting of the lot, and not by any human sagacity or prudence; and how one of the two tribes, descended from Joseph, obtained the Levites' twelfth part: 1—5. (2) Of Caleb's demand of Hebron, as granted to him by the promise of Moses; and Joshua's compliance with his request: 6—15.

AND these are the countries which the children of Israel inherited in the land of Canaan, [a] which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, distributed for inheritance to them.

2 [b] By lot was their inheritance, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses, for the nine tribes, and for the half-tribe.

3 For [c] Moses had given the inheritance of two tribes and a half-tribe on the other side Jordan; [d] but unto the Levites he gave none inheritance among them.*

4 For [e] the children of Joseph were two tribes, Manasseh and Ephraim: therefore they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, [f] save cities to dwell in, with their suburbs for their cattle and for their substance.

5 [g] As the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did, and they divided the land.

6 ¶ Then the children of Judah came unto Joshua in [h] Gilgal: and [i] Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite said unto him, Thou knowest the thing that the LORD said unto Moses [k] the man of God concerning me and thee in Kadesh-barnea.

7 Forty years old was I when Moses, the servant of the LORD, [l] sent me from Kadesh-barnea to espy out the land; and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart.

8 [m] Nevertheless my brethren that went up with me made the heart of the people melt; [n] but I wholly followed the LORD my God.*

9 And Moses sware on that day, saying, [o] Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the LORD my God.

10 And now, behold, the LORD hath kept me alive, as he said, these [p] forty and five years, even since the LORD spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel † wandered in the wilderness; and now, lo, I am this day fourscore and five years old.

11 [q] As yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me: as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, for war, both to go out, and to come in.

12 Now therefore give me this [r] mountain, whereof the LORD spake in that day; (for thou heardest in that day [s] how the Anakims were there, and that the cities were great and fenced;) if so be the LORD will be with me, then I shall be able to drive them out, as the LORD said.‡

13 And Joshua [t] blessed him, and [u] gave unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh Hebron for an inheritance.

14 [x] Hebron therefore became the inheritance of Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite unto this day, because that he wholly followed the LORD God of Israel.

15 And [y] the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba; which Arba was a great man among the Anakims. And the land had rest from [z] war.§

* Again is the disinheriting of Levi recorded. (See chap. 13. 14, 33.) Why this marked frequency of reference? (1) To prevent the Levites from murmuring at the distribution of the land. (2) To avoid all charge of covetousness in Moses on behalf of his own tribe. (3) So to provide for the Levites that, having little worldly property to occupy them, they might attend on the divine service without distraction. be reminded of their latter end. God graciously and wisely considers the frame of his people, and will not burden them with work beyond their strength. But pleasant are extensive views of what God has promised, though we should never see it accomplished. And it is prudent and necessary that such as rule in church or state should exert themselves to the utmost for leaving all things in good order at their death. With what pleasure God repeatedly mentions the honourable deeds of his favourites, as an example and inducement to others to copy after them! But unhappy is the end of false prophets and seducers of mankind, like Balaam; and often when and where they least expected it. While those, who have God to be their portion, have little reason to envy others, even their wealthiest lots in this changing world.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—Such as refer themselves to God to choose for them will never find cause to repent of their lot. Yea, it is not only useful but necessary, to acknowledge God in all our ways, that he may direct our paths, and prosper the work of our hands; and to view every thing that we obtain lawfully as coming from him.—How edifying is it to observe aged professors strong in the faith, giving glory to God! It is not pride, but due acknowledgment, to declare what a gracious God has done for us and by us. The more singular our fidelity has been towards God, it is the more commendable. And, if we have served God in godly simplicity in our youth, we shall find the comfort and blessing of it when we grow old. The issues of our life are in God's hand. Neither age, nor sickness, nor sword, can cut those off whom he determines to preserve. Every year, therefore, through which we are spared, is a new call for thankfulness to him who preserves our soul in life; and the death of others around should make us the more sensible of the mercy which preserves us. But indeed wonders of mercy and judgment will God work for performing his promise, in the most honourable manner, to such as by faith remarkably glorify him in an hour of temptation. Such as trust in him will never find themselves disappointed of their hopes. And, with the utmost boldness, we may insist upon having what he has promised, and dare to engage the most powerful opposer in order to obtain it.

THERE was also a lot for the tribe of Manasseh, (for he was the [a] first-born of Joseph,) to wit, for [b] Machir, the first-born of Manasseh, the father of Gilead: because he was a man of war, therefore he had Gilead and Bashan.

tions. The Lord greatly delights to honour such as have honoured him in a day of general apostasy; to reward such as have followed him fully; and to assist such as have firmly trusted in him. Happy is that marriage where the union of hearts, the consent of parents, and the blessing of God, remarkably meet. And, if children may ask the necessaries or conveniences of life from natural parents in hopes to succeed, with what boldness may we come to God's throne of grace, to ask grace and mercy to help us in a time of need—to ask all the new covenant blessings of heaven and earth! Yes, large and delightful is the portion of such as are connected with Christ: and his spiritual brethren are blessed for his sake with the most extensive and everlasting blessings. But let us remember, that, the larger our mercies are, the more abundant is our work and warfare to improve and defend the same. And have we not reason to lament that our sinful sloth and cowardice should deprive us of part of that which the Lord our God giveth us to possess?

2 There was also a lot for [c] the rest of the children of Manasseh by their families; for the children of Abiezer, and for the children of Helek, and for the children of Asriel, and for the children of Shechem, and for the children of Hepher, and for the children of Shemida: these were the male children of Manasseh the son of Joseph by their families.

3 ¶ But [d] Zelophehad,* the son of Hepher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, had no sons, but daughters; and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah.

4 And they came near [e] before Eleazar the priest, and before Joshua the son of Nun, and before the princes, saying, [f] The LORD commanded Moses to give us an inheritance among our brethren: therefore, according to the † commandment of the LORD, he gave them an inheritance among the brethren of their father.

5 And there fell [g] ten portions to Manasseh, [h] besides the land of Gilead and Bashan, which were on the other side Jordan;

6 Because the daughters of Manasseh had an inheritance among his sons: and [i] the rest of Manasseh's sons had the land of Gilead.

7 ¶ And the coast of Manasseh was from Asher to Michmethah, ‡ that lieth before [k] Shechem, and the border went along on the right hand unto the inhabitants of En-tappuah.

8 Now Manasseh had the land of [l] Tappuah: but Tappuah, on the border of Manasseh, belonged to the children of Ephraim;

9 And the coast descended unto the [m] river Kanah, southward of the river: these cities of Ephraim are among the cities of Manasseh: the coast of Manasseh also was on the north side of the river, and the outgoings of it were at the sea.

10 Southward it was Ephraim's, and northward it was Manasseh's, and the sea is his border; and they met together in Asher on the north, and in Issachar on the east. §

11 And Manasseh had in Issachar, and in Asher, [n] Beth-shean and her towns, and [o] Ibleam and her towns, and the inhabitants of [p] Dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of [q] En-dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of [r] Taanach and her towns, and the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns, even three countries.

12 ¶ Yet [s] the children of Manasseh could not ‖ drive out the inhabitants of those cities; but the Canaanites would dwell in that land.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—What a fruitful bough is Joseph now become, and planted in a goodly soil! The promise of God is a firm foundation of claim; and, if in this wilderness we secure such a title to glory, we shall, when the warfare is over, enjoy the portion for ever. It is good for brethren to dwell together in unity; yet unhappy is the union when they encourage one another in neglecting the Lord's work, and seem more anxious to enlarge their property, than to improve what they have. But unbelief strangely heightens every difficulty, and often discourages from the good fight of faith, which necessarily lies in the way to the crown.

19 And the border passed along to the side of [d] Beth-hoglah northward: and the outgoings of the border were at the north [†] bay of [e] the salt sea, at the south end of [f] Jordan. This was the south coast.

20 And Jordan was the border of it on the east side. This was the inheritance of the children of Benjamin, by the coasts thereof round about, according to their families.

21 ¶ Now the cities of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, according to their families, were [g] Jericho,[‡] and [h] Beth-hoglah, and the valley of Keziz,

22 [i] And Beth-arabah, and Zemaraim, and [k] Beth-el,

23 And Avim, and Parah, and [l] Ophrah,

24 And Chephar-haammonai, and Ophni, and [m] Gaba: twelve cities with their villages.

25 [n] Gibeon, and [o] Ramah, and [p] Beeroth,

26 And [q] Mizpeh, and Chephirah, and Mozah,

27 And Rekem, and Irpeel, and Taralah,

28 And [r] Zelah, Eleph, and [s] Jebusi, (which is Jerusalem,[§]) Gibeath, and Kirjath: fourteen cities with their villages. This is the inheritance of the children of Benjamin, [t] according to their families.

a The frequency with which the disinheritance of the Levites is repeated, (see Num. 18, 21, 24. Josh. 13. 14. & 14. 3, 4, &c.) cannot be fully explained by any principle but their typical character. And truth it is, that of nothing does a believer require to be so often reminded, as, that here he is a "pilgrim," has "no certain dwelling-place," but that the "testimonies of the Lord are his inheritance."—ED.

Some learned authors, however, instead of "sea," render it "from the west;" but they seem to have been driven to this translation, from the difficulty of any reference to the sea in an inland province. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—It is highly becoming when a serious regard to the worship of Christ and the church of God is intermingled with our most engaging earthly concerns; and it is dangerous to form families or kingdoms without the true worship of God. But what a blessing is it for a church or nation, when the Lord is a wall of fire round about them, and the glory in the midst of them! What mercies then are ours! We have his ordinances, not merely in the midst of our land, but near at hand, in every corner of it: and safely may we, in the midst of enemies, go about the Lord's work. Let us beware then how we are unconcerned about promised enjoyments, or commanded duties; lest the sweets of present comforts, or the difficulties in our way to the Canaan above, should weaken our desire, or hinder our attempts, to obtain it. Blessed be God that, though the enjoyment of it be not equally soon obtained, yet it is equally sure to all believers: and that there, as well as here, each is placed in a station answerable to his abilities and powers of enjoyment.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1—48. From this, and the seven preceding chapters, it appears that the land of Canaan, into the possession of which Moses and Joshua put the Israelites, was pleasantly diversified with mountains and valleys, and well watered with a multitude of small rivers and brooks, which emptied themselves into the Mediterranean sea on the west; or into Jordan, which, taking its rise in mount Lebanon, at the north of the promised land, ran southward; and, after forming the two lakes of Merom and Chinnereth, or Tiberias, in its course, at last emptied itself into the Dead sea, into which the country about Sodom was transformed, and which had no visible outlet. The length of Canaan, from Beersheba on the south, to Dan on the north, was about one hundred and eighty miles. Its greatest breadth, from the Mediterranean sea to the river Jordan, was about fifty miles; and about thirty more to the eastern boundary of the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites. On the east of Jordan, over against the territory of Benjamin and Ephraim, the Reubenites had their inheritance in a tract, including the mountains of Peor, Nebo, and Pisgah. On their north side lay the inheritance of the Gadites, in a soil more plain and fertile. Northward of Gad was seated the half-tribe of Manasseh, in that which was afterwards called Upper Galilee, or Galilee of the Gentiles, which was almost as large as both the two former portions. On the west side of Jordan, or rather the Dead sea, lay the extensive inheritance of Judah. On the south-west hereof, was the lot of Simeon; and on the north-west, the lot of Dan. Eastward of the Danites, and northward of Judah, was the inheritance of Benjamin. The lot of the Ephraimites lay all along on the north of these of Dan and Benjamin. Next was the lot of the other half-tribe of Manasseh; and northward of them the inheritance of Issachar; and next to them was that of Zebulun. Each of these four last portions extended from Jordan on the east to the Mediterranean sea on the west. Northward of Zebulun the tribe of Asher had their inheritance, in the north-west of Canaan. The Naphtalites had their portion between the lot of Asher and the north end of the river Jordan. The Tyrians and Zidonians kept possession of a part of Canaan on the north-west of the Asherites. The Philistines kept possession of a narrow strip of territory on the west of the Simeonites and Danites. Egypt lay to the south-west of Canaan; Idumea on the south border of the lot of Judah; and still more southward was the country of the Amalekites and Arabians. On the east of the Dead sea, and southward of the Reubenites, was the territory of the Midianites and Moabites. North-east of the Moabites, and eastward of the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites, dwelt the Ammonites and Hagarenes; and still eastward of these, beyond a large desert, and by the river Euphrates, the Chaldeans on the south, and Mesopotamia on the north. Persia was on the east and south-east of Chaldea, and Assyria on the east of Mesopotamia. North-east of Persia lay Media; and north of Assyria were Armenia, Cappadocia, Pontus, &c. On the north-east of Canaan lay Syria; on the north of which was Lesser Asia, which contained Mysia, Lydia, Ionia, and Caria, on the east shore of the Mediterranean sea; on the east of which were Bithynia, Phrygia, Pisidia, Pamphylia, Lycia; and, still further east, Paphlagonia, Galatia, and Lycaonia, which bordered on the east with Pontus, Cappadocia, and Armenia. To the north-west of Lesser Asia, but on the north side of the Mediterranean sea, lay the countries of Greece and Rome; the former of which is about eight hundred and fifty, and the latter one thousand two hundred miles north-west of Jerusalem.

A careful attention to this note will be of use to assist the reader in understanding the parts of scripture history.

47 And [r] the coast of the children of Dan went out too little for them; therefore the children of Dan [s] went up to fight against Leshem, and took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it, [§] and dwelt therein, and called Leshem, [t] Dan, after the name of Dan their father.

48 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan, [u] according to their families, these cities with their villages.

49 ¶ When they had made an end of dividing the land for inheritance by their coasts, the children of Israel [x] gave an inheritance to Joshua the son of Nun among them: [‖]

50 According to the word of the LORD, they gave him the city which he asked, even [y] Timnath-serah in mount Ephraim: and he built the city, and dwelt therein.

51 [z] These are the inheritances which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, divided for an inheritance by lot in Shiloh before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. So they made an end of dividing the country.

[†] The Septuagint omits the name of Judah, most probably from supposing, that as Asher, in the text, was a tribe, that Judah must likewise be a tribe. But that tribe having no possessions on the Jordan, the translators seem to have omitted Judah, supposing it to be the error of a transcriber. There is, however, no need of such unwarranted violence to the text. Judah upon the Jordan, may well have been the name of a city or territory. —Ed.

THE [a] LORD also spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 Speak to the children of Israel, saying, [b] Appoint out for you cities of refuge, whereof I spake unto you by the hand of Moses;

3 That the slayer that killeth any person unawares, and unwittingly, [*] may flee thither: and they shall be your refuge from the avenger of blood.

4 And when he that doth flee unto one of those cities shall stand [c] at the entering of the gate of the city, and shall declare his cause in the ears of the elders of that city, they shall [d] take him into the city unto them, and give him a place, that he may dwell among them.

5 And if the avenger of blood pursue after him, then they shall not deliver the slayer up into his hand; because he smote his neighbour unwittingly, and hated him not before-time.

6 And he shall dwell in that city, [e] until he stand before the congregation for judgment, and until the death of the high priest that shall be in those days: then shall the slayer return, and come unto his own city, and unto his own house, unto the city from whence he fled.

7 ¶ And they [†] appointed [f] Kedesh in Galilee in mount Naphtali, and Shechem in mount Ephraim, and Kirjath-arba (which is Hebron) in the mountain of Judah.

8 And on the other side Jordan, by Jericho eastward, [g] they assigned Bezer in the wilderness upon the plain out of the tribe of Reuben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the tribe of Gad, and Golan in Bashan out of the tribe of Manasseh.

9 These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them, that whosoever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither, and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood, [‡] until he stood before the congregation.

[*] These words are not synonymous, but convey two very distinct meanings, appropriate to the occasion. "Unawares," signifies, unexpectedly, without previous plan to kill, while yet the act may be intentional—as, if one, in the dark, intending to give a salutary medicine, give instead a deleterious drug. "Unwittingly," signifies that the action is done without consciousness that the injured person was in the way—as if one, in the dark, necessitated to run speedily, believing his way clear, should inflict a deadly injury upon a child, of whose presence he was perfectly unconscious. The meanings, however, though distinct, may both meet in the same disaster, as in case of an injury inflicted by a person in the delirium of fever. —Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—It is useful and becoming when men look upon, and care for, the things of others, as well as their own, and give to such as lack a share of their superfluity, or even sufficiency. And it is a mercy to be connected with those who are in covenant with God, and closely devoted to his service, though our outward accommodations should be smaller. For rare is that lot on earth in which there is not somewhat remarkable by an accurate observer of providence. But it is honourable when rulers, who do most for their people, covet least from them, and prefer the happy settlement of their subjects to their own.

manded, by the hand of Moses, to give us cities to dwell in, with the suburbs thereof for our cattle.

3 And the children of Israel gave unto the Levites [d] out of their inheritance, at the commandment of the LORD, these cities and their suburbs.

4 And the [e] lot came out for the families of the Kohathites: and the children of Aaron the priest, which were of the Levites, had by lot out of the tribe of Judah, and out of the tribe of Simeon, and out of the tribe of Benjamin, thirteen cities.*

5 And [f] the rest of the children of Kohath had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Ephraim, and out of the tribe of Dan, and out of the half-tribe of Manasseh, ten cities.

6 And [g] the children of Gershon had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the half-tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

7 [h] The children of Merari, by their families, had out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

8 And the children of Israel [i] gave by lot unto the Levites these cities with their suburbs, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

9 ¶ And they gave out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, [k] these cities which are here † mentioned by name,

10 Which the children of Aaron, being of the families of the Kohathites, who were of the children of Levi, had: for theirs was the first lot.

11 And they gave them [l] the city of Arba, the father of Anak, (which city is Hebron,) in the hill-country of Judah, with the suburbs thereof round about it.‡

12 But [m] the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, gave they to Caleb the son of Jephunneh for his possession.

13 ¶ Thus they gave to the children of Aaron the priest [n] Hebron with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer, and [o] Libnah with her suburbs,

14 And Jattir with her suburbs, and Eshtemoa with her suburbs,

* These three tribes furnish a greater number of cities for the Levites, than any equal number of the other tribes; and that, both because their territory, especially that of Judah, was larger than that of the others, and because being near to Jerusalem, where God purposed finally to organize his church, his providence allotted to the servants of his sanctuary, habitations near to the scene of their duties. Of these thirteen cities, Judah and Benjamin furnished twelve, and in them, the whole sacerdotal family resided, even though at this time the tabernacle was in Shiloh, which was in the tribe of Ephraim. By this prospective arrangement, God provided for the future preservation of Judah and Benjamin from the apostasy of the other tribes, and for the consequent preservation of his word and ordinances.—ED.

e Anathoth, being so emphatically mentioned by the prophet Isaiah, (Is. 10. 30. & Jer. 11. 23. & 29. 27. & 32. 7.) is entitled to some more special notice, than those other cities of which we know little but the name. According to Eusebius, it was situate about three miles north of Jerusalem, and twenty furlongs, according to Josephus; a discrepancy easy to be accounted for, by the difference of the points from which each calculated the measurement. Say, one from the temple, another from the north city wall. —Note. Though great cities often attain an infamous celebrity for their luxury and wickedness, villages have no patent of exemption from a proportionate share of the same character. Anathoth stands a sad example of religious privileges abused, poverty endured, wickedness practised, and judgment inflicted.—ED.

* Because they supposed they had been guilty of idolatry, which was literal rebellion in Israel. See ver. 10.—ED.

4 And now the LORD your God [d] hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them: therefore now return ye, and * get you unto your tents,* and unto the land of your possession, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, gave you on the other side Jordan.

5 But [f] take diligent heed to do the commandment, and the law, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, charged you, to love the LORD your God, and to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and to cleave unto him, and to serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul.†

6 So Joshua [g] blessed them, and sent them away:‡ and they went unto their tents.

7 ¶ Now to [h] the one half of the tribe of Manasseh Moses had given possession in Bashan; but unto the other half thereof gave Joshua among their brethren on this side Jordan westward. And when Joshua sent them away also unto their tents, then he blessed them;

8 And he spake unto them, saying, [i] Return with much riches unto your tents, and with very much cattle, with silver, and with gold, and with brass, and with iron, and with very much raiment: divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren.§

9 And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, returned, and departed from the children of Israel out of [k] Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan, to go [l] unto the country of Gilead, to the land of their possession, whereof they were possessed, according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

10 ¶ And when they came unto the borders of Jordan, that are in the land of Canaan, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, [m] built there an altar by Jordan,‖ a great altar to see to.

11 ¶ And the children of Israel [n] heard say, Behold, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, have built an altar over against the land of Canaan, in the borders of Jordan, at [o] the passage of the children of Israel.

12 And when the children of Israel heard of it, the [p] whole congregation of the children of Israel gathered themselves together at Shiloh, to go up to war against them.*

his ministers, that they may attend on his service disentangled from the cares of this life. And yet it becomes them to be modest and reserved in seeking for themselves. It is prudent, indeed, that ministers' incomes should be connected with the welfare of the church; but it is likewise proper, that all such as are taught, should communicate to their teachers in all good things. God can easily turn a well-deserved curse into a distinguished honour and blessing: and make the scattering of the Levites in Israel an honour to themselves, and a certain mean of instruction to the other tribes. How commodiously the priests are settled for their future attendance at Jerusalem, where God did not place his name till about four hundred years after! But inviolable are the promises of God, who cannot lie; and it is pleasant, profitable, and dutiful, to trace out in providence the exact fulfilment thereof.

But was not this Canaan, now disposed of to the Hebrew tribes, a figure of the gospel rest in the New Testament church; a figure of a new covenant state, and of our better country above? These are the lands which are chosen and provided by God for us: remarkably, under his inspection and care, watered with his heavenly rains and dews, and fertile of the choicest blessings, flowing with milk and honey. How holy! how pleasant! how inhabited by God and his favourites! And by what marvellous grace, wisdom, and power, are we brought into them, through much tribulation! Not our bow, nor our sword, but JEHOVAH'S arm, favour, and 13 And the children of Israel [q] sent unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, into the land of Gilead, [r] Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest,

14 And with him ten princes, of each [*] chief house a prince, throughout all the tribes of Israel; and each one was [s] an head of the house of their fathers among the thousands of Israel.

15 And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, unto the land of Gilead, and they spake with them, saying,[†]

16 Thus saith the [t] whole congregation of the LORD, What trespass is this that ye have committed against the God of Israel, to [u] turn away this day from following the LORD, in that ye have builded you an altar, that ye might rebel this day against the LORD?

17 [x] Is the iniquity of Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleansed until this day, although there was a plague in the congregation of the LORD,

18 But that ye must turn away this day from following the LORD? and it will be, seeing ye rebel to-day against the LORD, that [y] to-morrow he will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel.

19 Notwithstanding, if the land of your possession be [z] unclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the LORD, wherein the [a] LORD'S tabernacle dwelleth, and take possession among us: but [b] rebel not against the LORD, nor rebel against us, in building you an altar. besides the altar of the LORD our God.

20 [c] Did not Achan the son of Zerah commit a trespass in the accursed thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel? and that man perished not alone in his iniquity.

21 ¶ Then the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, [d] answered and said unto the [e] heads of the thousands of Israel,

22 The [f] LORD God of gods, the LORD God of gods, he knoweth, and [g] Israel he shall know; if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the LORD,[‡] (save us not this day,)

23 That we have built us an altar to turn from following the LORD, or if to offer thereon burnt-offering or meat-offering, or if to offer peace-offerings thereon, [h] let the LORD himself require it:

24 And if we have not rather done it [i] for fear of this thing, saying, [§] In time to come your children might speak unto our children, saying, What have ye to do with the LORD God of Israel?

25 For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben, and children of Gad; [k] ye have no part in the LORD: so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the LORD.

26 Therefore we said, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, not for burnt-offering, nor for sacrifice:

27 But that it may be a [l] witness between us and you, and our generations after us, that we might do the service of the LORD before him with our burnt-offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace-offerings; that your children may not say to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the LORD.

28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us, or to our generations in time to come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt-offerings, nor for sacrifices; but it is a witness between us and you.

29 [m] God forbid that we should rebel against the LORD, and turn this day from following the LORD, to build an altar for burnt-offerings, for meat-offerings, or for sacrifices, besides the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle.

30 ¶ And when Phinehas the priest, and the princes of the congregation, and heads of the thousands of Israel which were with him, heard the words that the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the children of Manasseh spake, [n] it pleased them.[*]

31 And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest said unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the children of Manasseh, This day we perceive that the LORD is [o] among us, because ye have not committed this trespass against the LORD: [†] [p] now ye have delivered the children of Israel out of the hand of the LORD.

32 ¶ And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, and the princes, returned from the children of Reuben, and from the children of Gad, out of the land of Gilead, unto the land of Canaan, to the children of Israel, and [q] brought them word again.

33 And the thing pleased the children of Israel; and the children of Israel [r] blessed God, and did not intend to go up against them in battle, to destroy the land wherein the children of Reuben and Gad dwelt.

34 And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, called the altar [‡] Ed: [§] [*] for it shall be a witness between us that the LORD is God.

* A disposition to give explanation, or make apology, is a striking characteristic of a godly mind. Paul explained both privately and publicly, his whole manner of preaching the gospel; and Peter explained his conduct in the case of Cornelius. Gal. 2. 2. Acts 11. 4. So the tribes here, do not angrily take fire at the mistaken charge of their brethren, nor doggedly refuse an account, but calmly explain their conduct till they fully satisfy their brethren. AND it came to pass, [*] a long time after that the LORD [a] had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies round about, that Joshua waxed old, and [†] stricken in age.

2 And [b] Joshua called for all Israel, and for their elders, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers, and said unto them, I am old and stricken in age:

3 And ye have [c] seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto all these nations because of you; for the LORD your God is he that hath fought for you.[‡]

4 Behold, [d] I have divided unto you by lot these nations that remain, to be an inheritance for your tribes, from Jordan, with all the nations that I have cut off, even unto the [e] great sea [§] westward.

5 ¶ And the LORD your God, he [f] shall expel them from before you, and drive them from out of your sight; and ye shall possess their land, as the LORD your God hath promised unto you.

6 [g] Be ye therefore very courageous to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses, that ye turn not aside therefrom to the right hand or to the left;

7 That [h] ye come not among these nations, these that remain among you, neither make mention of the name of their gods, [‖] nor cause to swear by them, neither serve them, nor bow yourselves unto them:

8 [i] But cleave unto the LORD your God, as [k] ye have done unto this day.

9 [l] For the LORD hath driven out from before you great nations and strong: but as for you, no man hath been able to stand before you unto this day.

10 [m] One man of you shall chase a thousand: for the LORD your God, he it is that fighteth for you, as he hath promised you.

11 [n] Take good heed therefore unto [*] yourselves, that ye love the LORD your God.

12 ¶ Else, if [o] ye do in any wise go back, and cleave unto the remnant of these nations, even these that remain among you, and shall make [†] marriages with them, and go in unto them, and they to you:

dutiful engagements! Our right to fellowship with God and his people should be clearly, but prudently, attested and commemorated, that neither we nor our posterity may lose or neglect the means of grace. And with godly jealousy professors should watch over one another. But all, especially ministers and magistrates, ought to manifest a warm but charitable zeal against every appearance of evil, particularly false worship; for who knows how far and wide, if once admitted, it may spread its baleful influence. And such as have smarted for sin may justly dread the thoughts of renewing their provocation. In this state of imperfection, even in zeal for God, heavy charges are often brought against the innocent: and therefore with great meekness and candour, and, if need be, with solemnity, ought we to explain our conduct, for the satisfaction of our brethren who have mistaken it: and be concerned, not only that our intentions be innocent, but that our brethren may have no occasion to mistake us. And with readiness and pleasure should we receive men's candid exculpation of themselves, and thank God for it. Happy would it be for churches and nations, if all their differences were conducted with so much prudent zeal for the glory of God, that it should be, as here, hard to find fault with either party.

11 And ye [m] went over Jordan, and came unto Jericho: and the men of Jericho fought against you, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Girgashites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; and I delivered them into your hand.

12 And [n] I sent the hornet* before you, which drave them out from before you, even the two kings of the Amorites; but not with thy sword, nor with thy bow.

13 And [o] I have given you a land for which ye did not labour, and cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them; of the vineyards and oliveyards which ye planted not do ye eat.

14 ¶ Now therefore [p] fear the LORD, and serve him in sincerity and in truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt,† and serve ye the LORD.

15 And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, [q] choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served, that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but [r] as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD.

16 And the people answered and said, [s] God forbid that we should forsake the LORD, to serve other gods;

17 For [t] the LORD our God, he it is that brought us up and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed:*

18 [u] And the LORD drave out from before us all the people, even the Amorites which dwelt in the land; therefore [x] will we also serve the LORD, for he is our God.

19 And Joshua said unto the people, [y] Ye cannot serve the LORD: for he is [z] an holy God; [†] he is a jealous God; he will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins.

20 If ye [a] forsake the LORD, and serve strange gods, then he will turn and do you hurt, and consume you, after that he hath done you good.

21 And the people said unto Joshua, [b] Nay; but we will serve the LORD.

22 And Joshua said unto the people, [c] Ye are witnesses against yourselves that ye have chosen you the LORD, to serve him. And they said, We are witnesses.

23 Now therefore [d] put away (said he) the strange gods which are among you, and incline your heart unto the LORD God of Israel.

24 And the people said unto Joshua, [e] The LORD our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.

25 So Joshua [f] made a covenant with the people that day, and set them a statute and an ordinance in Shechem.

26 ¶ And Joshua [g] wrote these words in the book of the law of God, and took a great stone, and set it up there under an oak that was by the sanctuary of the LORD.

27 And Joshua said unto all the people, [h] Behold, this stone shall be a witness unto us; for it hath heard all the words of the LORD which he spake unto us: it shall be therefore a witness unto you, lest ye deny your God.

28 So [i] Joshua let the people depart, every man unto his inheritance.

29 ¶ And it came to pass [k] after these things, that Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

30 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in [l] Timnath-serah, which is in

* "Did those great signs in our sight." How long Joshua survived the passage of the Jordan, is not particularly recorded. Josephus reckons it 25; the Jewish chronology, 27; Dr Hales, 26 years. We learn from ver. 29. that he died in his 110th year; from which deducting 26 after the death of Moses, and 40 years in the wilderness, we find he left Egypt in his 44th year. Therefore, every man now present, who was above 66 years of age, had been in Egypt, and had seen the signs which God wrought there; the rest had witnessed with their own eyes all that he wrought in the wilderness. These miraculous events, witnessed from the first in the most public manner, and inseparably intertwined with burdensome national institutions, family privileges, and personal rights, form a mass of evidence for the divine commission of Moses and Joshua, which no history can furnish for the human commission of any of its distinguished characters.—Ed.

and advice.—Accurate observers of providence may in every age remark manifold grounds of thankfulness, and reasons for exactness in holy obedience: and God's kind favours, as well as his fearful judgments, whether past, present, or future, ought powerfully to influence us to holiness and circumspection of life. But while we are surrounded with temptations, we had need constantly to watch and pray; and to maintain a constant love to God as a mean of preservation from evil. Scarcely any snare is more fatal than affinity or intimacy with unbelievers; and often God makes our tempters to sin, our punishers for it, and our knowledge and remembrance of the mercies which we rejected a mean of tormenting us when we are deprived of them. It is therefore greatly unbecoming for professed Christians to regard so little the religion of those whom they marry or make their intimates: or to lard their speeches or writings with the names of idols, or even to deck their houses or gardens with their images for ornament.

to leave this world without spending their last breath in the service of God, and manifesting a deep concern to have religion flourish among their friends after their death. Marvellous and sovereign are the transactions of God with respect to his people: and great cheerfulness and gratitude ought to take place in our service of him, and in cleaving to him alone. And the most solemn engagements, with a deep sense of the purity, power, and profitableness of religion, should always be maintained, to render us duly diligent and constant in it. It is pleasing to see those, who inculcate religion upon others, from choice become noted patterns of it themselves and in their families, and daring to be singular therein; and when people, the greatest not excepted, seem fond of attending solemn opportunities of fellowship with God, and edification to their souls. The glory indeed and influence of the great and good on earth is quickly stopped by death. But when our fathers fail, and since our prophets do not live for ever, what a mercy is it that our Redeemer liveth, and will be with us always, even unto the end of the world!

And was not Joshua a noted type of him, our Captain of salvation, who brings many sons and daughters to glory! God solemnly called him to, and fitted him for, his mediatorial office: and, in his baptism at Jordan's banks, began to magnify him before the people; nor did he ever fail him or forsake him. Made under, and trained up in servitude to, Moses' broken law, he became fit for his work; and even his name is pregnant with manifold and everlasting salvation. Through what Jordans of trouble and death does he bring his church into her gospel form, and her true members into their new covenant and celestial state! He circumcises their hearts, and feasts them on his flesh and blood, to prepare them for their spiritual warfare on earth. He powerfully intercedes for them, and makes up all breaches between God and them. Miraculously and effectually he conquers all their enemies, treads them under their feet, and enriches them with their spoil. He purchased and prepares for them the promised, the heavenly Canaan; and in due time puts them into the full and quiet possession thereof, according to his Father's purpose and promise. Having brought them into the bond of the covenant, he weans them from their idolatry, and makes them serve the Lord, and walk as he also walked. Readily he receives returning harlots and prodigals—accursed sinners of the Gentiles—and consecrates them to the service of God. But no obstinate and hardened opposer is able to stand before him all the days of his life. Fire, hail, and furious storms, he did and will rain upon his Jewish, heathen, antichristian, or other implacable enemies. Nor till his victories be finished, shall the luminaries of heaven, or those of his church, withdraw their shining.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES TO THE BOOK OF JOSHUA.

CHAP. I. Ver. 7. Be thou strong and very courageous.—The greatest instance of courage is moral courage in reproving what is wrong, and teaching and enforcing what is right. Therefore the Lord admonishes Joshua to be very courageous, not against enemies, but to observe all the law which Moses had commanded. Many who would dare to hazard death, would not dare to encounter the coldness or alienation of friends, the laugh of ridicule, the brow of scorn, the voice of reproach, the turmoil of argument, the jealousy of opposition, or the obloquy of detraction. Sensitive minds shrink from these petty annoyances, as unworthy of their energies, and consequently suffer the imputation and the evils of the worst species of cowardice. In this moral courage, Moses, Joshua, Jeremiah, and Paul, are pre-eminent—Christ perfect.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Jericho.—The site of Jericho is not accurately known. In the more ancient maps of Canaan, it was identified with Rihah, a village of about fifty poor dwellings, nineteen miles east by north of Jerusalem, and about eight west of the Jordan; but Buckingham discovered extensive ruins four miles nearer Jerusalem, answering exactly to the description of its locality in Josephus, (Wars, b. 4. c. 8. § 2.); and, as it is known that this city was much beautified by Herod, and as the ruins discovered are of Græco-Roman origin, there is every probability that the real site is that assigned by Buckingham.——Ver. 5. Whither the men went I wot not.—The first part of the statement (ver. 4.) may have been true, the second was certainly false. How can this untruth be justified? How had this woman faith? We answer to the first question—it cannot be justified at all, it is utterly condemned. To the second—does the infidel objector mean to affirm what his question implies, that he who commits any single immoral act, can have no moral principle? What havoc amongst infidels would this decision effect! Rahab did possess faith as a principle, for she believed the threatened judgments of God against her wicked countrymen, (ver. 9, 10,); but as fear overcame Peter, and betrayed him to deny his Lord; so fear overcame Rahab, and betrayed her to utter an untruth. "Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief;" and "let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Came to Jordan.—The Jordan, the principal river of Canaan, rises in mount Lebanon, but geographers are not agreed about its real source. Josephus describes it as arising from a well called Phiala; but the Moies Hasbeya, arising in the Jebel Sheik, is now considered the larger branch, receiving the Paneatic branch from Phiala, as an inferior tributary. Another considerable stream is called the Tel el Kadi—united they form the Jordan, but which is best entitled to be called the source of the Jordan, with our present scanty means of Canaanitish geography, it is not possible to determine. In the neighbourhood of the ancient Cæsarea Philippi, it is become a considerable stream. About fifteen miles south, it expands into the lake Merom, and, in about twenty-eight miles farther, it enters the lake or sea of Gennesareth or Tiberias. From this lake it pursues its course, still southerly, through a dreary valley, till it empties itself into the Dead sea. The whole course, computing the windings of the stream, is about 160 miles. Travellers differ greatly as to its width; but from the average, it may be estimated at about 90 feet. That it formerly overflowed its banks, the Scriptures assert (ver. 15. 1 Chr. 12. 15.); this some travellers deny. No rational man can doubt the Scripture statement, and yet the counter statement may be correct, as the space of some thousands of years may have so deepened the channel as to prevent inundations. That it rises an average of about nine feet, by the melting of the snow upon Lebanon and Hermon, is agreed upon all hands. This passage took place in April, when the river is broadest and deepest; a fact so far important as it stultifies the infidel conjecture of some German neologists, who pretend that a rock having fallen, stopped the stream, and, that Joshua taking advantage of the circumstance, affirmed that it was a miracle, and so encouraged the people to follow. Surely these are the men, who, "counting themselves wise become fools!"——Ver. 14. When the people removed from their tents to pass over Jordan.—This passage was effected on the tenth day of the first month, (ch. 4. 19.), and so wanted but five days of completing 40 years since the coming up out of Egypt on the fifteenth day of the first month. As to the nature of the miracle, it is greater still than the passing of the Red sea—that was instrumentally effected by a mighty wind, this by the ark and the feet of the priests. As to the evidence, besides the veracity of the historian, we have the consent of a whole nation, and that consent so interwoven with institutions, and records, and rights of property, that he who calls it in question, must call in question every possible record of ancient and modern history.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 4. Twelve men whom he had prepared.—By instructing them to come without any other burden, and informing them of their specific duty; and, as is not improbable, by exercising them to lift and carry such stones as would give to future times a remarkable specimen of their strength, as well as a memorial of the miracle the Lord had wrought for the passage of his people—a lively emblem of every one who would, in any office, minister to God and his church. He must be prepared, he must bear upon his shoulder his appointed burden; and, when laid down, it is to form a memorial of the grace and power of God.——Ver. 7. The waters of Jordan were cut off.—The scriptural evidence of this, and similar miraculous events, consists in (1) An original document, written and published at the time. (2) A public monument erected, or a religious institution appointed, to commemorate the event. (3) A national system of religious instruction founded upon the original document, and perpetuating the history. A system which imbodies, vitalizes, and perpetuates tradition, but a system as different from mere tradition, as a house builded upon a rock, differs from a house builded upon sand. As an example of tradition without scriptural authority, take Mat. 15. 3, 6. Col. 2. 8. For the authority of traditions, that is, records delivered on scriptural warrant, see 2 Thes. 3. 6. 1 Cor. 11. 2, in which last cited passage, the ordinances, or traditions, evidently comprehend the Lord's supper. To traditions so imbodied, the infidel can produce no rational objection. Read ver. 20—23. See Leslie's Short Way with the Deists, and Dwight on the Lord's Supper.

CHAP. V. Ver. 2. Sharp knives.—Knives of flint, as in the marginal translation. The use of flint for knives, arrows, spearheads, chisels, and hatchets, has been common in many nations. Specimens of some, or all of them, are occasionally found in almost every country of Europe, as well as of Asia. The Egyptians, according to Herodotus, (b. 2.) used them in opening bodies for embalming, and some of the Judaizing Abyssinian Christians use them still in the rite of circumcision. (Ludolph. Hist. of Ethiopia, b. 3. c. 1.)——Circumcise again.—Not in allusion to any general act of circumcision at, or soon after, the Exodus; but, as the first time, at eight days old, (Gen. 17. 12.) had been neglected, God now allows, and commands a second opportunity of sealing and ratifying the national covenant; just as the people were allowed to celebrate the passover in the days of Hezekiah, contrary to the letter of the law, in the second, instead of the first month, 2 Chr. 30. 2. & 3. 15.——Ver. 9. Reproach of Egypt.—The reproach of Egypt seems to mean the reproach of having been slaves, and without a country. Now, by the sign of the covenant, they become God's freedmen, and have taken possession of the land which he swore to give their fathers.—Note. There is no real reproach but the slavery of sin; but "if the Son make us free," by circumcising our hearts, and admitting us into his covenant of promise, (John 5. 36. Eph. 2. 12, 19.) then is our reproach rolled away, and then "are we free indeed."——Ver. 11. Parched corn.—That is, the ears of the growing crop, a common and favourite food in Eastern countries till this day. The old and the new are mentioned together to indicate the abundance of the former and present harvest.—Note. "Every scribe instructed unto the kingdom of heaven, is like unto a man that is a householder, who bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old," Mat. 13. 52. And so the Lord equally satisfies his people with the old doctrines, and new discoveries of truth, with old faith and new experience.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 26. Cursed be the man before the Lord that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho.—A new city called Jericho appears to have been built at no great distance from the site of the old, Judg. 1. 16. & 3. 13. But this curse of Joshua prevented the rebuilding of the original Jericho, till the time of Ahab, about 530 years after the anathema was pronounced. Hiel of Bethel, at that time, dared to rebuild it; but, according to the threatening, his eldest son was taken away when the foundations were laid, and when he set up the gates he was left childless, 1 Kings 16. 34.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 3. They are but few.—That is, the people of Ai are few.—Note. We should never despise any enemy, temporal or spiritual, nor any temptation, however apparently weak. One may chase a thousand, if the Lord will, and the mightiest may fall before the weakest temptation, as Peter was affrighted by a servant maid.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 23. Cursed.—Referring to the original curse against Canaan by Noah, "A servant of servants shall he be to his brethren." The Gibeonites appear, from ver. 9 and 24, to have been believers in the divine commission of Moses and Joshua, very little enlightened, but still believers. They are contented to be any thing, so they may live. So was the younger son willing to be made as one of his father's "hired servants," if he might only eat of his father's bread.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. Inhabitants of Gibeon.—We never heard of a king of Gibeon: hence there is a high probability that the four cities (ch. 9. 17.) were small federative states, somewhat like the Hanse towns of Germany, and were not moved to make peace by cowardice or weakness, (see ver. 2.) but by faith in the divine commission of Moses, and the promise of God to bestow Canaan upon Israel.——Ver. 12. Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.—Were even philosophers better acquainted with the causes of the annual and diurnal movements of the heavenly bodies, they would be better able to judge of this miracle. Though all miracles are alike easy to Omnipotence, it may still be fact, that some order of exceeding simplicity effected what appears so stupendous to our eyes. Something perhaps more simple than the stopping of the pulsation of the heart, and consequent suspension of the circulation of the blood. Had syncope, or fainting, never been witnessed but once, some thousands of years ago, it would appear as incredible to modern physiologists, as the standing still of the sun to infidel philosophers. The objection derived from the words—stood still, or went not down—is unworthy of a schoolboy, and indicates as little knowledge of language as of scripture evidence. The words state a fact in relation to sight; and so, are literally true; and, if we may admit the translation of Dr A. Clarke, which there seems no ground to question, then do they likewise accord with the Newtonian astronomy, and most probably develop a still deeper insight in the mysteries of nature. According to Clarke, the address, (ver. 12.) should be translated:—"Sun! upon Gibeon, be dumb; and the moon in the vale of Ajalon." The effect of which is related in the following words:—"And the sun was dumb; and the moon stood still." In which words, Joshua does not say to the sun, stand still, as if he had conceived him to be running his race round the earth; but, be dumb, silent, or inactive, so as to stop the rotation of the earth. And the book of Jasher, in recording the event, speaks with equal philosophical correctness. In the first case, he says, the sun was dumb, withheld his influences, but the moon stood still. It must be seen from the address to the sun, that it was near the setting when the words which seem a command to the sun, but are a prayer to God, were uttered.——Ver. 33. Gezer.—A city of Ephraim, about twenty miles north-west of Jerusalem. After various disasters, it was re-edified by Solomon, 1 Kin. 9. 17. Its ruins, like those of the former cities, have likewise disappeared.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. We have here another confederacy against Joshua, formed by the kings to the north of Jerusalem.—Note. This succession of confederacies, is no more than what occurs to all who follow the true Joshua to the true promised land. One trouble is no sooner forgot than another succeeds; and one temptation is no sooner resisted and subdued, than another tempter, like Satan with our Lord, (Mat. iv.) tries some new scheme to pervert our principles, and overcome our resolutions. ——Ver. 4. Horses and chariots very many.—This is the first time that horses are mentioned since the Exodus. Camels, asses, and sheep, during the intermediate period, are frequently enumerated, but the horse never. The Arabian tribes, therefore, had, at this time no horses—a fact which Strabo, who lived about the beginning of the Christian era, records concerning Arabia in his time.——Ver. 13. Cities that stood still in their strength.—"The cities that stood on the hills," is a more accurate translation. The meaning seems to be this:—Joshua burned the cities on the plains, where the northern Canaanites' cavalry, like the East Indian Mahrattas, could maintain strongholds, for they could make sudden incursions. But the cities on the hills, as inaccessible to cavalry, he preserved, with the exception of Hazor, as garrison towns for his own infantry, and the protection of the people.——Ver. 22. In Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod.—These were not of the seven devoted nations, and were therefore permitted to abide.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. River Arnon.—The Arnon rises in the mountains of Gilead, on the east of Jordan, and flows along the north border of Moab, separating it from the Ammonites, and empties itself into the Dead Sea. Burchardt gives its modern name Modjeh, and assigns it a course of about 56 miles. In summer it is nearly dry but in winter is an impetuous torrent.——Ver. 2. Jabbok.—In summer a brook, in winter a torrent; arising in the mountains of Gilead, near Rotbath Ammon, and running in a westerly direction, joins the Jordan, according to Creighton, about 46 miles south of the sea of Chinneroth, but only 8, according to Sime.——Ver. 3. From the plain.—This seems to be an elevated plain, at least 800 feet above the level of the Jordan, described by Buckingham, as commencing on the heights immediately south of the Zered, or Jabbok, and eulogized as the commencement of one of the most fertile and beautiful tracts in the world, (Palestine, vol. 1.)——Salt sea.—Dead sea, the site of Sodom and Gomorrah, more salt than any other sea. This special geographical description was given in order to prevent any disputes about the boundaries of the two and a half settled tribes. See ver. 6.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 3. Philistines.—Descended from Mizraim, second son of Ham, (Gen. 10. 14.) by whom Egypt was peopled. They must have emigrated from that country at an early period. Though occupying a narrow tract of land bordering on the Mediterranean, and not above 60 miles in length, yet, through industry and arms, they soon became, and long continued, a famous people. They were the most powerful, and the most inveterate of the enemies of Israel, whom they occasionally greatly oppressed. After the return from the captivity, the national animosities were revived; and they seem to have been finally conquered by the famous Maccabees. After this period, they either emigrated from the country, or became incorporated with the Jews, as they are never once mentioned in the New Testament, nor by any writer of ordinary history.——Ver. 5. Lebanon.—Lebanon forms the bases of all the mountains of Palestine. Two parallel ranges of mountains descend from the north in Syria, enclosing a valley called Cœlo-Syria, or Hollow Syria. These form the Lebanon of the Bible, and the Libanus, and Anti-Libanus of the Greeks. The Libanus, from its origin in Syria, inclines to the west, and terminates a few miles north of Old Tyre. The Anti-Libanus, which is the eastern range, likewise inclines to the sea, and terminates in the White Cape, a few miles south of Old Tyre. Lebanon signifies whiteness; a name most probably derived from the snows which constantly lie upon the highest summits of the eastern range. This would, in the climate of Palestine, give a probable height of above 11,000 feet.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 2. By lot.—The lot was a divine institution, appealing to the direct judgment of God, Prov. 16. 33. It was likewise the surest mode with a jealous people, of avoiding all cause of jealousy, from suspicion of favouritism.—— Ver. 6. Caleb.—The object of Caleb is to claim a right previous to the conquest, founded on God's promise, (ver. 6.) and Moses' oath, (ver. 9.) and so an exemption from the lot.—Note. Though the lot was a divine institution, it was not to be employed where the will of God is already declared. The sin of Balaam lay in knowing the declared will of God, and seeking, by sacrifice, to change it. God's will once declared, we must seek no other confirmation—God's will once known, we must allow neither delay nor evasion.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1. The lot of the tribe of the children of Judah.—This lot to Judah seems disproportionately large, but is a fulfilment of Jacob's prophecy. Two things in it are very remarkable. (1) Two parts of it were subsequently given to Simeon and Dan—a lesson of princely generosity to unprovided brethren. (2) The part next Egypt never was conquered—emblem of the Christian's state. He has an enemy yet to be "destroyed," a part of his inheritance yet to be redeemed, 1 Cor. 15. 26. Rom. 8. 19, 21, 23.——Ver. 19. He gave her the upper springs and the nether springs.—This peculiar record seems introduced, (1) To demonstrate the difference between the power that Caleb exercised over his possession, derived from his peculiar right, and how far it surpassed that of other Israelites. They, when there were sons in a family—as there were in Caleb's—had no right to alienate land to a daughter's husband, (Num. 27. 1—11). (2) The narrative seems intended to establish the right of rewarding extraordinary bravery in an extraordinary manner. (3) To instance the duty of parents to provide, according to their best ability, for the children God has given them.——Ver. 21. Uttermost cities.—This list of cities and villages may appear to many very uninteresting, and perhaps useless. It is, however, highly interesting and useful; (1) As an internal evidence of the truth of the narrative; since nothing but truth could have drawn up such a narrative, and then given it interest to be preserved and read. (2) As a legal document to prevent litigation, by definition of property.——Ver. 62. En-gedi.—En-gedi, according to Jerome, lay in the desert west of the Dead sea; and Josephus places it about 33 miles from Jerusalem, so that it must have been situate near the estuary of the Jordan. It does not seem, as is commonly supposed, to be the city of palm-trees, mentioned Judg. 3. 13, for, in the Song 1. 14, it is celebrated for its vineyards, a production for which the district is still superior to all the rest of Judea. Had it been also remarkable for palms, such a noble ornament of the landscape is not likely to have been omitted. If it be true, as many travellers affirm, that fish do not live in the Dead Sea, then, according to Ezek. 37. 10, En-gedi must have been situate on, or near the banks of the Jordan.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 5. The border of the children of Ephraim.—This is confessedly one of the greatest geographical difficulties in the whole Bible: and our attempt at solution is offered with much diffidence. The commencing point is Ataroth-addar, which, as we learn from ch. 18. 13, was near to Nether Beth-horon, which was not far west of Jerusalem. Following the translation of Boothroyd—"The boundary of their inheritance went on the east side of Ataroth-addar, to Upper Beth-horon;" from which point, the boundary passing on the north side of Michmethah—which town we conceive to be situate in the southern and not in the northern border, according to the maps—extends westward to the Mediterranean. From the same point at Ataroth-addar, the boundary line eastward passes by Taanath-shiloh, turning a little way south, so as to leave it on the east, and reaching Janohah, resumes its easterly course by Ataroth, Naaroth, Jericho, to Jordan. Then, omitting the eastern boundary, the Jordan, the line commences at Tappuah in the north, and passing on westward to Kanah, thence makes its way to the sea.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. The father of Gilead.—Machir had sons born before the death of Joseph, (Gen. 50. 23.) 190 years before the first division of Canaan; the lot was therefore to his descendants in his name and right as a distinguished leader.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 22. Tabor.—This city was situate on a famous mountain of the same name. It is a solitary "cone with the top struck off," about a mile in height, and half a league in diameter. It is richly covered with trees and odoriferous plants, and is ascended by a winding path cut in its sides. The top is covered with ruins of fortresses and palaces, and vast subterraneous cisterns for holding water. It is generally supposed to be the "high mountain," upon which our Lord was transfigured; but there is no certainty, and the probabilities are rather in favour of some other mountain, of which the country affords many.——Ver. 30. Twenty and two cities with their villages.—The names are twenty-six. But Carmel was a mountain, and Jiphthah-el, a valley; and it is probable, according to the interpretation of Michaelis, that Tyre and Sidon were only the boundary landmarks, and not included as cities to be conquered. This opinion seems to be fully sustained by verse 29, where, after passing Sidon, Tyre, and Hosah, "the outgoings" of the line are for the first time stated to be "at the sea from the coast to Achzib." The chief objection to this view lies in Judg. 1. 31. where the Sidonians are mentioned, as a people the Asherites did not expel. But this is not conclusive against the number of cities ceded to Asher, verse 30; and may be well explained by the very natural supposition, that the Sidonians had colonized within the territory of Asher, from which they should have been expelled.——Ver. 48. Inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan.—The territory allotted to Dan lay on the Mediterranean coast, south of Ephraim, including those strongholds of the Philistines, Ashdod, Ekron, Gath, &c. Laish was situate in the extreme north of Canaan, near mount Lebanon and the springs of the Jordan, and about 140 miles from the Danite settlement in the south. Alas! the moment Providence gave them a goodly land, they forgot the God of their fathers and established idolatry.—Note. While the advantages of emigration and colonization are many to an over-populated and commercial country, it is both the bounden duty, and the highest interest of the mother-country, to provide religious instruction to her colonies. Not a single Levite seems to have accompanied the emigrants. They accordingly fell from the Mosaic institutions, and commenced that idolatry which was perpetuated by Jeroboam, and extended from one tribe to ten, and finally brought on captivity, and the other judgments of an offended God. Let Britain, the fruitful mother of so many colonies, take warning, and learn, that though colonization without religion may enrich a country, it may, and will, in the end ruin a country.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 9. Might flee thither.—For the uses of these cities in criminal law, together with their typical character, see note on Num. 35. 6. It is useless to describe their positions, as they cannot be comprehended without a map, and those who are furnished with that important companion to the study of the Bible, do not need descriptions. It is, however, important to observe, that they were so dispersed throughout the land, that the manslayer in any part of the land, might reach one of them in twelve hours or less.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 41. Forty and eight cities with their suburbs.—This would seem a large number of cities, and a great extent of ground for so small a tribe, which, when the census was taken on the plains of Moab, had only 23,000 males, including children. And it would seem a contradiction to the statement so frequently made both by Moses and Joshua, that the Levite had "no inheritance" in Israel. But let it be remembered, that though what in modern phrase may be called the lordship of those cities, was granted to the Levites, yet, whether it was exclusive, does not appear. David dwelt in Hebron with all his court, and it is not likely a king would be a mere tenant in his own monarchy; Saul not merely dwelt in Gibeah, but it is called "Gibeah of Saul." These considerations will lead to such deductions as will reduce the possessions of the Levites to very moderate bounds. But the best answer to any cavil upon the subject is, that the Israelites themselves—a people that seldom overlooked grievances—never made any complaint, but gave the cities cheerfully for the service of the tabernacle and the temple.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 2. Have obeyed my voice.—Joshua here exemplifies a wise principle in the management of human affairs. He exacts no service beyond what is absolutely necessary; he dismisses his allies the moment they can be spared; and, though not with flattery, for that were unworthy the openness and honesty of his character—yet with high and deserved commendation of their faithfulness, patience, and courage.——Ver. 8. Divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren.—Such texts form the perpetual targets of infidelity, and although no arrow can pierce them, yet still the bow is bent anew, and another shaft expended, not in the hope of gaining a victory, but with the mere expectation of raising a fool's laugh, or giving annoyance to pious minds. Such men delight to represent Joshua as a robber. Now the answer to such misrepresentations is plain. Joshua was God's avenger against nations sunk into hopeless wickedness. See, ye infidel objectors, the indictment of your protégés, Lev. xviii. passim, and especially ver. 27: and when he had cast them out, or rather, when "the land had spued them out," for their wickedness, such things as were left behind must, as matter of course and necessity, find possessors in the present occupiers of the country.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 2. Joshua called for all Israel.—It is most probable this charge was confined to the several orders of rulers; and that after "all Israel," we should read, not "and," but "even," &c. "Elders," the Sanhedrim, or senate, the parliament; "heads," chiefs of families; "judges," from the local courts of tribes and cities; "officers," the executive of the judges,—in modern language, the sheriffs.—— Ver. 7. Neither make mention of the name of their gods.—Christian legislators and judges, do not hesitate to introduce superstitious and idolatrous modes of swearing, on the principle that every man is to swear in the mode that will most bind his conscience. This is a plausible, but unsound argument, as it renders a judicial respect to superstition or idolatry, that never should be rendered, and tends to elevate and perpetuate those evils, which every true Christian, must by all means, labour to root out.——Ver. 16. Anger of the Lord.—The mention of anger in God has often been subject of infidel, or, so called, philosophical reprehension. For this, however, there is no ground. The Scriptures attribute not to God, the unreasonable anger of men, but a holy displeasure at sin and sinners; of which, if there be a philosophy that would deprive God, there is then a philosophy that deprives him of glory. A God that does not abhor sin, cannot love holiness; and the moral agent that loves not holiness, is himself wicked, and cannot be God.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. Shechem.—Several commentators of high repute are for displacing Shechem, in this and every other part of the chapter, except verse 32, and supplying Shiloh, because the ark was at Shiloh, and not at Shechem. Various reasons are assigned for this proposal, which we hold it unnecessary to repeat. There is no sufficient authority for the proposal, except the conjecture of the proposers, founded on an imaginary difficulty, which can have no weight against the almost uniform evidence of the Hebrew MSS. and early translations. If the ark was necessary to this great transaction, where was the difficulty in its temporary removal to Shechem, and its subsequent restoration to Shiloh?——Presented themselves before God.—Upon the expression "before God," the idea of the presence of the ark at Shechem is founded. The subsequent use of the phrase, and which in Scripture is generally the best resource of interpreters, does not warrant this conclusion. See Acts 10. 33.——Ver. 23. Put away, said he, the strange gods which are among you.—We cannot too often repeat our astonishment at the obstinate adherence of Israel to idolatry; nor too carefully draw the comparison between Jews and Christians, in this point of view. Idolatry is a pliant sin, and can take many forms. The idolatry of the understanding—the idolatry of the imagination—the idolatry of the passions, are forms more common, and therefore less noticed, but not therefore less real, nor less hateful in the sight of God, than the idolatry of the senses. He that places upon any object, one particle of the love he owes to God, is as much an idolater, as he who bows down to the sun, or worships a beast or an image of wood or stone.——Ver. 31. Israel served the Lord all the days of Joshua.—That is, Israel as a nation, served God all the days of Joshua, and the elders who outlived him. As individuals, Joshua's own words testify that many were idolaters, of which fact they soon gave melancholy evidence.——Ver. 32. The bones of Joseph.—The entire stream of history bears records of the tomb of Joseph. It is mentioned by Jerome, and continues to be pointed out to every modern traveller. It is now a Turkish oratory, with a whitened dome, and lies between Jerusalem and Bethlehem.

THE BOOK

JUDGES

RELATES the transactions of fourteen Hebrew Judges, who, under God, the King of the nation, were occasional governors of Israel; and who, Abimelech excepted, were typical of Jesus Christ, as called to, qualified for, and occupied in, delivering his chosen people. It contains the history of about three hundred years; and particularly narrates the Israelites' behaviour towards the Canaanites, whom Joshua had left in the country; the Lord's reproof of their conduct, and their repentance for it; what nations were left to chastise them for it; their frequent relapses into idolatry; and their punishment on account of it, by terrible oppressions from the Mesopotamians, Moabites, Canaanites, Midianites, Abimelech, Ammonites, and Philistines; and their deliverances by Othniel, Ehud, Deborah, and Barak, Gideon, Jephthah, and Samson; and their protection by Shamgar, Tola, Jair, Ibzan, Elon, and Abdon; i—xvi. The last five chapters are an appendix, informing us of events which happened not long after the death of Joshua; particularly the idolatry of Micah; the conquest and idolatry of the Danites; the horrible lust of the Gibeathites; and the almost utter destruction of the Benjamites for protecting them; xvii—xxi. The scope of this, and of the following histories of the Old Testament, is to represent the sinful backslidings of Israel, and the holiness, equity, mercy, sovereignty, and power of God, in his dispensations of mercy and judgment towards them, in exact correspondence with his promises and threatenings; Lev. xxvi. Deut. xxviii—xxxii.

CHAPTER I.

(1) Judah, directed of God, and assisted by the Simeonites, takes Bezek, cuts off the thumbs and great toes of its king, as he had done to seventy of his fellow princes; takes Jerusalem, Hebron, Debir, Hormah, Gaza, and other places; but dares not, through unbelief, attack the Canaanites of the low country who had chariots of iron: 1—20. (2) The other tribes acted still worse. The Benjamites did nothing to expel the Canaanites: 21. The Ephraimites and Manassites began well against Bethel, but soon stopped short: they, however, as well as the Zebulunites, and Naphtalites, as quickly as they could, rendered the Canaanites tributary to them: 22—30, 33. The Asherites did not so much as require tribute, 31, 32: and the Danites yielded up part of their territory which they had possessed to the Amorites: 34—36.

A. M. 2570, or 2480. B. C. 1434, or 1498.

NOW, [a] after the death of Joshua, it came to pass, that the children of Israel [b] asked the LORD,* saying, Who shall go up for us against the Canaanites first, to fight against them?

2 And the LORD said, [c] Judah shall go up: behold, I have delivered the land into his hand.

3 And Judah said unto [d] Simeon his brother, Come up with me into my lot, that we may fight against the Canaanites; and I likewise will go with thee into thy lot. So Simeon went with him.

4 And Judah went up; and the [e] LORD delivered the Canaanites and the Perizzites into their hand: and they slew of them in [f] Bezek ten thousand men.

5 And they found Adoni-bezek in Bezek: and they fought against him, and they slew the Canaanites and the Perizzites.

6 But Adoni-bezek fled: and they pursued after him, and caught him, and [g] cut off his thumbs and his great toes.

7 And Adoni-bezek said, Threescore and ten kings, having † their thumbs and their great toes cut off, ‡ gathered their meat under my table: [h] as I have done, so God hath requited me. And they brought him to Jerusalem, and there he died.

8 ¶ Now the children of Judah [i] had fought against [k] Jerusalem, and had taken it, and smitten it with the edge of the sword, and set the city on fire.

9 [l] And afterward the children of Judah went down to fight against the Canaanites that dwelt in the mountain, and in the south, and in the § valley.

10 ¶ And Judah went against the Canaanites that dwelt in [m] Hebron; (now the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba;) [n] and they slew Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmai.

11 And from thence he went against the inhabitants of Debir: (and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher:)

12 And [o] Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife.‖

13 And [p] Othniel the son of Kenaz, Caleb's younger brother, took it: and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife.

* The influence of the elders who outlived Joshua still continues to preserve the people in the worship of the true God, and they will not undertake any war without his sanction. The reference of the case to God is to be accounted for only on the principle declared (Lev. 18. 27, 28.) and surely, if a human judge has a right, and is bound, to punish a criminal, much more must "the Judge of the whole earth" have a right to order the punishment of individual or national sins.—ED.

‖ This passage is extracted from Josh. 15. 13—19. The object of the repetition seems to be, to distinguish, by a notable occurrence, the conquests gained during the life of Joshua, from those that were subsequent. Accordingly, ver. 8. is not a continuation of ver. 7. but a reference to what "had been done" at a former period, when, though numbers were fewer, faith was stronger. Another object of the repetition seems to be, to give a formal recognition of the title of Caleb; for in Josh. 15. 13. it is said "he," that is, Joshua, gave to Caleb the city of Arba. In Judg. 1. 20. it is said, "and they," that is, the people of Judah, gave the city; thereby confirming the promise formerly made by Moses, and the grant conferred by Joshua.—ED.

We answer, it can never be insignificant to record the example of a thoughtful, prudent wife, or of a kind and generous father. They are the really great characters in a nation. † The Septuagint, which is followed by Augustine, reads, that "Judah did not take Gaza," &c.; and Josephus says they took neither Gaza nor Ekron. All these seem forced amendments of the text, and without authority. The subsequent scripture history exhibiting these cities, not in the possession of Israel, but of their enemies; and no account of their recapture from Israel having been given; it seemed necessary to force an agreement between the two narratives. Such modes of reconciling Scriptures, are not only indefensible, but to be utterly condemned. The reconciliation lies at the surface. Judah took the cities and lands, as in the text, the Canaanites retook them, as the subsequent history implies, though it records neither the time nor the manner.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Difficult and extensive is the work which the people of God, and the rulers of nations and churches, have to go through with, after one would think every thing was rectified. There is need to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways, that, being animated by him to our proper work, we may prosecute it with courage and success. And the more honour or ability God gives to men, the more difficult work he assigns them. But God most fearfully humbles the proud, marks their sins in their judgments, and metes out to them the measure which they had meted out to others; while such as share with the people of God

4 And it came to pass, when the angel of the LORD spake these words unto all the children of Israel, that the [e] people lifted up their voice, and wept.

5 And they called the name of that place [f] Bochim: and they [g] sacrificed there unto the LORD.

6 ¶ And when [h] Joshua had let the people go,* the children of Israel went every man unto his inheritance to possess the land.

7 And the people served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that [†] outlived Joshua, who had seen all the great works of the LORD that he did for Israel.

8 [i] And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

9 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in Timnath-heres, in the mount of Ephraim, on the north side of the hill Gaash.

10 ¶ And also all that generation were [k] gathered unto their fathers: and there arose another generation after them, which [l] knew not the LORD, nor yet the works which he had done for Israel.

11 And the children of Israel [m] did evil in the sight of the LORD, and served Baalim.[‡]

12 And they [n] forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed other gods, of the gods of the people that were round about them, and bowed themselves unto them, and provoked the LORD to anger.

13 And they forsook the LORD, and served [o] Baal and Ashtaroth.[§]

14 ¶ [p] And the anger of the LORD was hot* against Israel, and he delivered them into the hands of spoilers that spoiled them, and he sold them into the hands of their enemies round about, so that they could not any longer stand before their enemies.

15 Whithersoever they went out, the hand of the LORD was against them for evil, as the LORD had said, and as the LORD had sworn unto them: and they were greatly distressed.

16 ¶ Nevertheless the LORD [q] raised up judges,[†] which [‡] delivered them out of the hand of those that spoiled them.

17 And [r] yet they would not hearken unto their judges, but they went a whoring[§] after other gods, and bowed themselves unto them; they turned quickly out of the [s] way which their fathers walked in, obeying the commandments of the LORD; but they did not so.

18 And when the LORD raised them up judges, then the LORD [t] was with the judge,

Yea, many secret enemies, still abiding in our hearts, prevent our fully entering into the rest and peace of the gospel, and are causes of daily disquietude and anxiety. But, in following bad examples, things readily go on to worse and worse. And yet how great is the goodness of God—instead of casting off his chosen people, he multiplies his pardons and mercies to them.

and delivered them out of the hand of their enemies all the days of the judge: for it [u] repented* the LORD because of their groanings, by reason of them that oppressed them, and vexed them.

19 And it came to pass, when [x] the judge was dead, that they returned, and [†] corrupted themselves more than their fathers, in following other gods, to serve them, and to bow down unto them; they ceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way.

20 ¶ And [y] the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel; and he said, Because that this people hath transgressed my covenant which I commanded their fathers, and have not hearkened unto my voice,

21 I also [z] will not henceforth drive out any from before them of the nations which Joshua left when he died;

22 That [a] through them I may prove Israel, whether they will keep the way of the LORD, to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not.

23 Therefore the LORD [b] left those nations, without driving them out hastily; neither delivered he them into the hand of Joshua.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Inexcusable are the sins of such as enjoy the oracles of God: and it is but madness and self-deceiving to expect advantage from friendship with the enemies of God around us, or our own corruptions within us! for, in offending God by one sin, we provoke him to give us up to a greater, with the misery which attends it. And none know how brutish in sin they may become if once given up to their heart's lusts; nor what plagues and misery they may meet with in their course. What pains God uses to check his people's sinful rebellion against him, or revolting from him! And deep are the impressions of his rebukes when effectually blessed. But even then, not our tears, however sincere and penitential, but the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ, can make us pure from our iniquity.

took the dagger from his right thigh, and [f]thrust it into his belly.

22 And the haft also went in after the blade; and the fat closed upon the blade, so that he could not draw the dagger out of his belly; and the [*]dirt came out.

23 Then [g]Ehud went forth through the porch, and shut the doors of the parlour upon him, and locked them.[†]

24 When he was gone out, his servants came; and when they saw that, behold, the doors of the parlour were locked, they said, Surely he [h]covereth his feet in his summer chamber.

25 And they tarried till they were ashamed: and, behold, he opened not the doors of the parlour; therefore they took a key, and opened them: and, behold, their lord was fallen down dead on the earth.

26 And Ehud escaped while they tarried, and passed beyond the quarries, and escaped unto Seirath.

27 And it came to pass, when he was come, that he [i]blew a trumpet in [k]the mountain of Ephraim, and the children of Israel went down with him from the mount, and he before them.

28 And he said unto them, [l]Follow after me; for the LORD hath delivered[‡] your enemies the Moabites into your hand. And they went down after him, and took the [m]fords of Jordan toward Moab, and suffered not a man to pass over.

[†] The Scriptures having given principles for judgment and conduct, do not generally comment upon actions either with praise or blame, but leave men to judge and act by the principles already furnished. Their silence, therefore, is not to be interpreted into an approval of the mode by which Ehud delivered Israel. The death of Eglon may have been well deserved; but the manner, so far as we can judge from the narrative, is not to be defended. Indeed we are no more called upon to vindicate all the acts of Ehud, than all the acts of Samson. God can work perfectly by imperfect instruments; else, in a world like ours, what could be effected?—ED.

3 And the children of Israel [f]cried unto the LORD; for he had nine hundred [g]chariots of iron: and twenty years he mightily oppressed the children of Israel.

4 ¶ And [h]Deborah, a prophetess, the wife of Lapidoth, she judged Israel at that time.[*]

5 And she dwelt under [i]the palm-tree of Deborah, between Ramah and Beth-el in mount Ephraim; and the children of Israel came up to her for judgment.[†]

6 And she sent and called [k]Barak the son of Abinoam out of [l]Kedesh-naphtali, and said unto him, Hath not the [m]LORD God of Israel commanded, saying, Go and draw toward [n]mount Tabor,[‡] and take with thee [o]ten thousand men of the children of Naphtali, and of the children of Zebulun;

7 And I [p]will draw unto thee, to the [q]river Kishon, Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thine hand?

8 And Barak said unto her, [r]If thou wilt go with me, then I will go; but if thou wilt not go with me, then I will not go.

9 And she said, I will surely go with thee: [s]notwithstanding the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honour; for the LORD [t]shall sell Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah arose, and went with Barak to [u]Kedesh.

10 ¶ And Barak called [x]Zebulun and Naphtali to Kedesh; and he went up with ten thousand men at [y]his feet: and Deborah went up with him.

11 Now [z]Heber the Kenite, which was of the children of Hobab, the [§]father-in-law of Moses, had severed himself from the Kenites, and pitched his tent unto the [a]plain of Zaanaim, which is by Kedesh.

13 And Sisera [‖]gathered together all his chariots, even nine hundred chariots of iron,[*] and all the people that were with him, from [e]Harosheth of the Gentiles, unto the river of [d]Kishon.

Faithful ministers and magistrates are a beneficial restraint upon nations and churches; yet we may commonly observe, that the power and life of religion, rarely flourish in a place for more than one generation at a time. And it is an awful sign to this effect when young ones grow up in ignorance and forgetfulness of God and his mighty works. But how infinite the extent of God's mercy and patience! he bears with, and even pardons and delivers, transgressors in the moment of their greatest extremity, and calls and blesses instruments for that end. But, Lord, what are men! they often become more hardened under such mercies and judgments—at the hazard of provoking thee to the uttermost, they return again and again to the very abominations for which they had formerly smarted! No wonder then that they are given up to uncommon rage of lusts, or of lasting punishment.

16 But Barak [c] pursued after the chariots, and after the host, unto Harosheth of the Gentiles: and all the host of Sisera fell upon the edge of the sword; and there was not [*] a man left.

17 ¶ Howbeit Sisera [h] fled away on his feet to the tent of Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite: for there was peace between [†] Jabin the king of Hozar and the house of Heber the Kenite.

18 And Jael went out to meet Sisera, and said unto him, Turn in, my lord, turn in to me; fear not. And when he had turned in unto her into the tent,[†] she covered him with a [‡] mantle.

19 And he said unto her, [k] Give me, I pray thee, a little water to drink;[§] for I am thirsty. And she opened a bottle of milk, and gave him drink, and covered him.

20 Again he said unto her, Stand in the door of the tent; and it shall be, when any man doth come and inquire of thee, and say, Is there any man here? that thou shalt say, No.

21 Then Jael, Heber's wife, took a [l] nail of the tent,[‖] and [*] took an hammer in her hand, and went softly unto him, and smote the nail into his temples, and fastened it into the ground: (for he was fast asleep and weary:) so he died.

22 And, behold, as Barak pursued Sisera, Jael came out to meet him, and said unto him, Come, and I will show thee the man whom thou seekest. And when he came into her tent, behold, Sisera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples.

23 ¶ So [m] God subdued on that day Jabin the king of Canaan before the children of Israel.

24 And the hand of the children of Israel [n] prospered, and prevailed against Jabin the king of Canaan, until they had destroyed Jabin king of Canaan.

graces. One of the most dangerous snares is an irreligious partner in marriage, which is ruinous in its consequences, as it opens a wide inlet to every abomination, and generally leads to forgetfulness of God. But God can easily find instruments to punish us, far or near, even among our own relations. And yet how light, especially at first, are his strokes of vengeance in comparison of what our iniquities deserve! God also can easily find and qualify instruments for the deliverance of his people: and ordinarily he employs such as have been most courageous and faithful in his work, or such as seem naturally most unfit for it. But if we, after deliverances, return to our own sins, we may expect that God will return to judgment: and, if lighter corrections have been ineffectual, God will make them longer and heavier. Nor is any instrument so despicable, but he can make it the rod of his anger. Wicked men, kings not excepted, are often fattened up to their own shame and destruction, and find their message from God in a ruinous stroke of his wrath. But easy work is the ruin of the strongest enemies when we are called, directed, and assisted by God!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Long continued peace and prosperity are often made the occasion of great wickedness, which issues in heavier and sharper punishments than any formerly met with. But a merciful God readily hears the cries of his people under the distress which they have provoked him to lay upon them: and in his work of deliverance there is neither male nor female, but he himself is ALL and IN ALL! CHAPTER VI.

(1) The Israelites' repeated apostasy to their idols is punished with seven years' terrible harassment by the Midianites and other Arabians: 1—6. (2) God convinces them of their sin by a prophet: 7—10. (3) Gideon is solemnly called by God to be their deliverer, and hath his call confirmed by a sign: 11—24. (4) He begins his government in the extirpation of idolatry, and establishment of the true worship of God in his own city: 25—32. (5) Having levied an army, their success is confirmed to them by the alternate full of the dew on the fleece and on the ground: 33—40.

AND the children of Israel [a] did evil in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD delivered them into the hand of [b] Midian seven years.

2 [c] And the hand of Midian * prevailed against Israel: and because of the Midianites the children of Israel made them [d] the dens which are in the mountains, and caves, and strong holds.

3 And so it was, when Israel had sown, that the Midianites came up, and the Amalekites, and [e] the children of the east, even they came up against them;

4 And they [f] encamped against them, and destroyed the increase of the earth, till thou come unto [g] Gaza; [†] and left no sustenance for Israel, neither [‡] sheep, nor ox, nor ass.

5 For they came up with their cattle and their [h] tents, and they came as [i] grashoppers for multitude; for both they and their camels were without number: and they entered into the land to destroy it.

6 And Israel was greatly impoverished because of the Midianites; and [k] the children of Israel cried unto the LORD.[‖]

7 ¶ And it came to pass, when the children of Israel cried unto the LORD because of the Midianites,

8 That the LORD sent * a prophet unto the children of Israel, which said unto them, [l] Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [m] I brought you up from Egypt, and brought you forth out of the house of bondage;

9 And I delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all that oppressed you, and drave them out from before you, and gave you their land:

help or encouragement, are often punished with the loss of part of that honour which they might otherwise have had. But fearful, irresistible, and unavoidable, is the ruin which proud sinners shall meet with when and where they expected nothing but safety, victory, and triumph. When God attacks there is no standing: when he pursues there is no escaping: when he begins he will also make an end: but such as trust in him shall never be disappointed. They who go forth in faith shall return victorious. Even the weak things of the world shall confound the mighty. And happy is it for us even when dear-bought experience animates us at last to mortify our corruptions, and purge out the Canaanites from the church of Christ.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—God must have all the glory of his work; whoever be the instruments, the success is entirely owing to him. His new favours should occasion an affecting remembrance of former ones, and of our relation to him as our God: and the heights of his mercy should be compared with the depths of distress into which our apostasy from him hath brought us.—Oh! what woes befall people in every place and station when God departs from them! They have no comfort, no safety, no protection left. And, though the enemies of the Lord are unanimous and hearty against him and his interests, yet certain is their final destruction, since even the irrational creation stands ready armed to destroy them. Eminent and lasting honours await those who heartily espouse the cause of Christ when it is in great danger, and who are determined to conquer or to die; but shame and curses shall descend on those who, for their ease or carnal advantage, remain neutral and unconcerned. Such as would save their lives, by their cowardice or carnal fears, shall lose them: and such as are afraid or ashamed to join God's people your God; fear not the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: [o] but ye have not obeyed my voice.

11 ¶ And there came an [p] angel of the LORD,* and sat under an oak which was in [q] Ophrah, that pertained unto Joash the [r] Abiezrite: and his son Gideon thrashed wheat by the wine-press, [†] to hide it from the Midianites.[‡]

12 And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him, and said unto him, [s] The LORD is with thee, thou mighty man of valour.

13 And Gideon said unto him, Oh my Lord, if the LORD be with us, [t] why then is all this befallen us? and where be all his miracles which our fathers told us of, saying, [u] Did not the LORD bring us up from Egypt? [x] but now the LORD hath forsaken us, and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites.

14 And the LORD looked upon him, and said, [y] Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites: have not I sent thee?

15 And he said unto him, Oh my Lord, [z] wherewith shall I save Israel? behold, [a] my family is poor in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house.[§]

16 And the LORD said unto him, [b] Surely I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man.

17 ¶ And he said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, [c] then show me a sign that thou talkest with me.

18 Depart not hence, I pray thee, until I come unto thee, and bring forth [d] my [‖] present, and set it before thee. And he said, I will tarry until thou come again.

19 And Gideon went in, and made ready [•] a kid, and unleavened cakes of an ephah of flour: the flesh he put in a basket, and he put the broth in a pot, and brought it out unto him under the oak, and presented it.

20 And the angel of God said unto him, Take the flesh and the unleavened cakes, and lay them upon this rock, and [e] pour out the broth. And he did so.

21 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD put forth the end of the staff that was in his hand, and touched the flesh and the unleavened cakes; and [f] there rose up fire out of the rock, and consumed the flesh and the unleavened cakes. [g] Then the angel of the LORD departed out of his sight.

22 And when Gideon perceived[†] that he was an angel of the LORD, Gideon said, Alas, O Lord GOD! [h] for because I have seen an angel of the LORD face to face.

23 And the LORD said unto him,* [i] Peace be unto thee; fear not: thou shalt not die.

24 [k] Then Gideon built an altar there unto the LORD, and called it [l] Jehovah-shalom: unto this day it is yet in [m] Ophrah of the Abiezrites.

25 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that the LORD said unto him, [n] Take thy father's young bullock, [†] even the second bullock of seven years old, and throw down the altar of Baal that thy father hath, and cut down the [o] grove that is by it;

26 And [p] build an altar unto the LORD thy God upon the top of this [‡] rock, [§] in the ordered place, and take the second bullock, and offer a [q] burnt-sacrifice with the wood of the grove which thou shalt cut down.

27 Then Gideon took ten men of his servants, and [r] did as the LORD had said unto him: and so it was, because he [s] feared his father's household, and the men of the city, that he could not do it by day, that he did it by night.

28 ¶ And when the men of the city arose early in the morning, behold, the altar of Baal was cast down, and the grove was cut down that was by it, and the second bullock was offered upon the altar that was built.

29 And they said one to another, Who hath done this thing? And when they inquired and asked, they said, Gideon the son of Joash hath done this thing.

30 Then the men of the city said unto Joash, [t] Bring out thy son, that he may die; because he hath cast down the altar of Baal, and because he hath cut down the grove that was by it.

31 And Joash said unto all that stood against him,[‖] [u] Will ye plead for Baal? will ye save him? he that will [x] plead for him, let him be put to death whilst it is yet morning: if he be a god, let him plead for himself, because one hath cast down his altar.

32 Therefore on that day he called him* [y] Jerubbaal, saying, Let Baal plead against him, because he hath thrown down his altar.

33 ¶ [z] Then all the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and the children of the east, were gathered together, and [a] went over, and pitched in the valley of Jezreel.

34 But [b] the Spirit of the LORD[†] [‡] came upon Gideon, and [c] he blew a trumpet;[§] and [d] Abiezer [‖] was gathered after him.

in an evil day, shall be held as deserters from God's camp, and treated accordingly. But how bright and lasting the glory of such as fight the good fight of faith, and work by love to the Lord! Their path is like the rising sun, shining brighter and brighter to the perfect day.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Neither judgments nor mercies, however often repeated, can restrain revolting and rebellious hearts from the most abominable crimes. But they, who abuse God's common benefits in prodigality and luxury, live often to feel the want of them in hunger and nakedness. What arrant cowards men are often made by their own guilty and accusing consciences! And, after all, in the day of distress, there is no hope but in God himself: and, when his service

CHAPTER VII.

(1) Gideon by dismissing the cowards, and such as drank on their knees, his army of thirty-two thousand is, by God's direction, reduced to three hundred: 1—8. (2) By sending Gideon into the camp of the Midianites, to hear the relation of a dream, and his companion's interpretation of it, God farther encourages his hopes of success: 9—15. (3) By an unarmed attack, Gideon and his few forces throw the Midianites into a terrible panic, in which they kill one another, or flee for their life: 16—22. (4) The disbanded troops, and other Israelites, fall upon the fugitives, and kill two of their kings: 23—25.

THEN [a] Jerubbaal, (who is Gideon,) and all the people that were with him, [b] rose up early, and pitched beside the well of [c] Harod:[*] so that the host of the Midianites were on the north side of them, by the hill of Moreh, in the [d] valley.

2 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people that are with thee are [e] too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel vaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me.

3 Now therefore go to, proclaim in the ears of the people, saying, [f] Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from mount Gilead. And there returned of the people twenty and two thousand, and there remained ten thousand.

4 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people are yet too many; bring them down unto the water, and I will [g] try them for thee there: and it shall be, that of whom I say unto thee, This shall go with thee, the same shall go with thee; and of whomsoever I say unto thee, This shall not go with thee, the same shall not go.

5 So he brought down the people unto the water: and the LORD said unto Gideon, Every one that lappeth of the water with his tongue, as a dog lappeth,[*] him shalt thou set by himself; likewise every one that boweth down upon his knees to drink.

6 And the number of them that lapped, putting their hand to their mouth, were three hundred men: but all the rest of the people bowed down upon their knees to drink water.

7 And the LORD said unto Gideon, [h] By the three hundred men that lapped[†] will I save you, and deliver the Midianites into thine hand: and let all the other people go every man unto his place.

8 So the people took victuals in their hand, and [i] their trumpets: and he sent all the rest of Israel, every man unto his tent, and retained those three hundred men. And the host of Midian was [k] beneath him in the valley.

9 ¶ And it came to pass the same [l] night, that the LORD said unto him, [m] Arise, get thee down unto the host; for I have delivered it into thine hand.

10 But if [n] thou fear to go down,[‡] go thou with Phurah thy servant down to the host:

11 [o] And thou shalt hear what they say; and afterward shall thine hands be strengthened to go down unto the host. Then went he down with Phurah his servant unto the outside of the [p] armed men that were in the host.

12 And [q] the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and all the children of the east, lay along in the valley like grashoppers for multitude; and their camels were without number, as the sand by the sea-side for multitude.

13 And when Gideon was come, behold, there was a man that told a dream unto his fellow, and said, Behold, I dreamed a dream, and, lo, [r] a cake of barley-bread tumbled into the host of Midian, and came unto a tent, and smote it that it fell, and overturned it, that the tent lay along.

14 And his [s] fellow answered and said, This is nothing else save the sword of Gideon the son of Joash, a man of Israel: for into his hand hath God delivered Midian, and all the host.

is so reasonable, ingratitude to him, the God of mercy and grace, cannot fail highly to aggravate our transgressions. It is the indispensable duty of ministers to deal plainly and closely with their hearers' consciences, as conviction of sin is a hopeful token of approaching deliverance; and God often chooses that time for delivering us when our case appears most desperate. But how hard is it to reconcile our afflictive experiences with the promises of God to us—to believe either what God has done, or what he will do, when present providences appear just the reverse! Yet God delights to honour such as are humble. Let not his saints therefore consider their weakness, when felt, as any reason for evading the great work which God puts into their hands. With infinite condescension God gives not only unalterable promises, but even miraculous signs, for the encouragement of his faint-hearted servants. And such as enjoy noted communion with him, eagerly desire to prolong the visit, and to testify their grateful regard to him and to his messengers. If God call us to extraordinary work, we must, without delay, and regardless of the will of wicked men, begin reformation at home. Nor, however zealous we have been in the cause of wickedness, must we be ashamed to change our conduct, or to protect the innocent. When God calls men to hard work, he can easily furnish them with assistants, even where they could least have been expected. And yet, after all, their unbelieving jealousies render necessary new tokens of God's presence and assistance in it.

15 And it was so, when Gideon heard the telling of the dream, and [a] the interpretation thereof, that he [t] worshipped,[†] and returned into the host of Israel, and said, [u] Arise; for the LORD hath delivered into your hand the host of Midian.

16 ¶ And he divided the three hundred men into three companies, and he put [‡] a trumpet in every man's hand, with [x] empty pitchers, and [§] lamps within the pitchers.

17 And he said unto them, [y] Look on me, and do likewise: and, behold, when I come to the outside of the camp, it shall be, that as I do, so shall ye do.

18 When I blow with a trumpet, I and all that are with me, then [z] blow ye the trumpets also on every side of all the camp, and say, The sword[‖] of the LORD, and of Gideon.

19 ¶ So Gideon, and the hundred men that were with him, came unto the outside of the camp [a] in the beginning of the middle watch;[*] and they had but newly set the watch: and they blew the trumpets, and [b] brake the pitchers that were in their hands.

20 And the three companies [c] blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers, and held the lamps in their left hands, and the trumpets in their right hands to blow withal: and they cried, The sword of the LORD, and of Gideon.

21 And they [d] stood every man in his place round about the camp: and [e] all the host ran, and cried, and fled.

22 And the three hundred blew the trumpets, and the [f] LORD set every man's sword against his fellow, even throughout all the host; and the host fled to Beth-shittah [†] in Zererath, and to the [‡] border of [§] Abel-meholah, unto Tabbath.

23 And the [h] men of Israel gathered themselves together out of Naphtali, and out of Asher, and out of all Manasseh, and pursued after the Midianites.

24 ¶ And Gideon [i] sent messengers throughout all mount Ephraim, saying, Come down against the Midianites, and [k] take before them the waters [§] unto Beth-barah and Jordan. Then all the men of Ephraim gathered themselves together, and took the waters unto [l] Beth-barah and Jordan.

25 And they took [m] two princes of the Midianites, Oreb and Zeeb:[‖] and they slew Oreb upon the rock Oreb, and Zeeb they slew at the wine-press of Zeeb; and pursued Midian, and brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb to Gideon [n] on the other side Jordan.

Let such recollect, however, that amongst the nomades of Midian, &c., every full grown man was a soldier, and that Xerxes led a million of men against the petty states of Greece, who, under that providence that was preparing for the downfal of the Persian, and elevation of the Grecian empire, were likewise routed by a handful of Greeks, as Midian by 300 Israelites.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—When God affords remarkable encouragement, his service should be undertaken with the greatest earnestness: and let us remember, that God is apt to try his people's faith thoroughly in the progress of their work, who insisted too much in trying him in their entrance on it. When multitudes flock to God's standard, many of them are ordinarily unfit for his service: many never weigh the consequences, and therefore quickly start aside. And such as are enslaved by the fear of men, are better out of God's camp than in it; for God will take every means to convince his people that they ought to have no dependence on an arm of flesh. And happy are they who can believe his promise, when he lays aside almost every apparent means of accomplishing it. But seasonable and sympathizing are the consolations of God to his favourites. By the most inconsiderable incidents he can promote and encourage us to the greatest exploits. With great

14 And [o] caught a young man of the men of Succoth, and inquired of him: [†] and he [‡] described unto him the princes of Succoth, and the elders thereof, even threescore and seventeen men.

15 And he came unto the men of Succoth, and said, Behold Zebah and Zalmunna, with whom ye did upbraid me, saying, Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in thine hand, that we should give bread unto thy men that are weary?

16 And [p] he took the elders of the city, and thorns of the wilderness and briers, and with them he [§] taught the men of Succoth.

17 And he [q] beat down the tower of Penuel, and slew the [r] men of the city.[‖]

18 ¶ Then said he unto Zebah and Zalmunna, What manner of men were they whom ye slew at [s] Tabor? And they answered, [t] As thou art, so were they; each one [*] resembled the children of a king.

22 ¶ Then the men of Israel said unto Gideon, [z] Rule thou over us, both thou, and thy son, and thy son's son also; [§] for thou hast delivered us from the hand of Midian.

23 And Gideon said unto them, [a] I will not rule over you, neither shall my son rule over you: the LORD shall rule over you.

24 And Gideon said unto them, I would desire a request of you, that ye would [b] give me every man the ear-rings of his prey: (for they had golden ear-rings, because they were Ishmaelites.)

25 And they answered, We will willingly give them. And they spread a garment, and did cast therein every man the ear-rings of his prey.

ease he can rout and destroy his most presumptuous and numerous enemies, and make them to kill one another, or flee when none pursueth, while his people behold his salvation. But it is proper for us to assist the people of God against their enemies, and to mark the distinguished providences of God as a mean of awakening our thankfulness, or confirming our faith on after occasions.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Only by pride cometh contention. Evil persons are extremely jealous of their carnal honours, and apt to reckon the just exaltation of every body else an injury done to themselves. It is common for cowards to pretend valour when the danger is over or distant; but humility disposes a man to think meanly of his own works, and to put honour from himself to his neighbour; and meanwhile adds a double lustre to all its gifts, graces, or attainments. Soft words most effectually turn away wrath; nor must we count it strange to be abused by the tongues of those whose lives we have saved at the hazard of our own. Having begun a good work, we must go on with it: notwithstanding the most heavy and unnatural discouragements, perseverance will be infallibly crowned with success. The security of sinners most certainly proves their ruin; and it meets them when and where they thought it was quite over; for men's pride brings them low; and the insolence of their tongues renders them miserable.—It is just and proper for magistrates sharply to correct those who are barbarous or abusive: and men's distress often occasions new discoveries of their guilt. Though hand should join in hand, sinners shall not pass unpunished. If one agent fear, another will dare to execute the vengeance of God upon them. It is much better to be of a humble spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud. Ambition to exalt one's family is ordinarily a ruinous snare. But it is very dangerous for rulers, in church or state, to humour people in matters of religion, or to indulge their carnal ease or honour in that point. What appears innocent at first, may soon become a dangerous snare. Small beginnings of superstition or idolatry lead to still greater abominations: and when God removes the restraints, men will quickly relapse to their wonted or worse idolatries. It is hard to make base minds grateful, either to God or to their human benefactors: but it is easy to decoy them into one form of wickedness after another.

But in this Hebrew judge, let Jesus, the great deliverer, be discerned. His condition on earth was mean and debased; his call to his work express, solemn, seasonable.

CHAPTER IX.

Israel's ingratitude to God and to Gideon is punished in the tyranny of Abimelech. (1) By subtlety, and by the murder of sixty-nine of his father's lawful sons, he intrudes himself into the government at Shechem: 1—6. (2) Jotham his youngest, and only surviving brother, in his parable of the trees setting a king over themselves, foretells the doom of Abimelech and his assistants: 7—21. (3) After three years, mutual enmity and strife arise between him and his Shechemite friends, fomented by Gaal on the one hand, and by Zebul on the other: 22—41. (4) This contention issues in the destruction of the Shechemites, and soon after of Abimelech: 42—57.

A. M. 2832, or 2791. B. C. 1172, or 1213.

AND [a] Abimelech the son of Jerubbaal [*] went to Shechem unto his mother's brethren, and [b] communed with them, and with all the family of the house of his mother's father, saying,

2 Speak, I pray you, in the ears of all the men of Shechem, [†] Whether is better for you, either that all the sons of Jerubbaal, which are threescore and ten persons, reign over you, or that one reign over you? remember also [c] that I am your bone and your flesh.

3 And his mother's brethren [d] spake of him in the ears of all the men of Shechem all these words: and their hearts inclined [‡] to follow Abimelech; for they said, He is our brother.

4 And they gave him threescore and ten pieces of silver out of the house of Baal-berith; wherewith Abimelech hired [e] vain and light persons, which followed him.

5 And he went unto his father's house at Ophrah, and [f] slew his brethren, the sons of Jerubbaal, being threescore and ten persons, upon one stone: notwithstanding yet Jotham, the youngest son of Jerubbaal, was left; for he hid himself.

6 And all the men of Shechem gathered together, and all the [g] house of Millo, [§] and went and [h] made Abimelech king, [1] by the plain of the pillar that was in Shechem.

7 ¶ And when they told it to Jotham, he went and stood in the top of [k] mount Gerizim, [‖] and lifted up his voice and cried, and said unto them, Hearken unto me, ye men of Shechem, that God may hearken unto you.

8 The [1] trees went forth on a time to anoint a king over them; [*] and they said unto the [m] olive-tree, Reign thou over us.

9 But the olive-tree said unto them, Should I leave my fatness, wherewith by me they [n] honour God and man, and [†] go to be promoted over the trees? [‡]

10 And the trees said to the fig-tree, Come thou, and reign over us.

11 But the fig-tree said unto them, [o] Should I forsake my sweetness, and my good fruit, and go to be promoted over the trees?

12 Then said the trees unto the vine, Come thou, and reign over us.

13 And the vine said unto them, Should I leave my wine, which [p] [*] cheereth God and man, and go to be promoted over the trees?

14 Then said all the trees unto the [q] bramble, Come thou, and reign over us.

15 And the bramble said unto the trees, If in truth ye anoint me king over you, then come and put your trust in [r] my shadow; and if not, [s] let fire come out of the bramble, [†] and devour the cedars of Lebanon.

16 Now therefore, if ye have done truly and sincerely, in that ye have made [t] Abimelech king, and if ye have dealt well with [u] Jerubbaal and his house, and have done unto him according to the deserving of his hands;

17 (For my father fought for you, and [x] adventured his life far, and delivered you out of the hand of Midian;

18 And ye [y] are risen up against my father's house this day, and have slain his sons, threescore and ten persons, upon one stone, and have made [z] Abimelech, the son of his maid-servant, king over the men of Shechem, because he is your brother;)

19 If ye then have dealt truly and sincerely with Jerubbaal and with his house this day, then [a] rejoice ye in Abimelech, and let him also rejoice in you:

20 But if not, [b] let fire come out from Abimelech, and devour the men of Shechem, and the house of Millo; and let fire come out from the men of Shechem, and from the house of Millo, and devour Abimelech.

21 And Jotham ran away, and fled, and went to [c] Beer, and dwelt there, for fear of Abimelech his brother.

22 ¶ When Abimelech had reigned three years [‡] over Israel,

23 Then [d] God sent an evil spirit [§] between Abimelech and the men of Shechem; and the men of Shechem dealt treacherously with Abimelech:

24 That the [*] cruelty done to the threescore and ten sons of Jerubbaal might come, and their blood be laid upon Abimelech their brother, which slew them; and upon the men of Shechem, which [1] aided him in the killing of his brethren.

25 And the men of Shechem set [f] liers in wait for him in the top of the mountains, and they robbed all that came along that way by them: and it was told Abimelech.

26 And Gaal the son of Ebed came with his [g] brethren, and went over to Shechem: and

This ingratitude to man had commenced with ingratitude to God, and both are punished by the ambition and tyranny of Abimelech. — Note. There are many ways in which God punishes irreligious nations. and necessary; and miraculous the repeated confirmations of it. Being the mighty God, and endowed with the Spirit above measure, he, with burning zeal, offered his sacrifice of himself, overthrew idolatry, and restored the true worship of God, beginning in his own country of Judea. By a few weak and unarmed preachers, sounding the gospel trumpet, and displaying its light and fire from their earthen vessels, he did, and shall, foil Satan, the world, and death, with their innumerable agents. And at the last day, being revealed in flaming fire, and attended with the trump of God, he shall spread terror and ruin among all his opposers. Kindly he invites his brethren of mankind to share in his victories, and to follow him that they may divide the spoil. Meekly he convinces and pacifies his unreasonable friends: but the most terrible vengeance he did and will execute upon his despisers, of Judah and of Rome, and upon all such as refuse his people or ministers their necessary supplies.

the men of Shechem put their confidence in him.

27 And they went out unto the fields, and gathered their vineyards, and trode the grapes, and [h] made merry, and went into the [i] house of their god, and did eat and drink, and [k] cursed [n] Abimelech.

28 And Gaal the son of Ebed said, [l] Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem, that we should serve him? Is not he the son of Jerubbaal? and Zebul his officer? Serve [m] the men of Hamor the father of Shechem; for why should we serve him?

29 And [n] would to God this people were under my hand! then would I remove Abimelech. And he said to Abimelech, [o] Increase thine army, and come out.[†]

30 ¶ And when Zebul, the ruler of the city, heard the words of Gaal the son of Ebed, his anger was [‡] kindled.

31 And he sent messengers unto Abimelech [p] privily, saying, Behold, Gaal the son of Ebed, and his brethren, be come to Shechem; and, behold, they fortify the city against thee.

32 Now therefore [q] up by night, [§] thou and the people that is with thee, and lie in wait in the field:

33 And it shall be, that in the morning, as soon as the sun is up, thou shalt rise early, and set upon the city: and, behold, when he and the people that is with him come out against thee, then mayest thou do to them [‖] [r] as thou shalt find occasion.

34 ¶ And Abimelech rose up, and all the people that were with him, by night, and they laid wait against Shechem in four companies.

35 And Gaal the son of Ebed went out, and stood in the entering of the gate of the city: and Abimelech rose up, and [s] the people that were with him, from lying in wait.

36 And when Gaal saw the people, he said to Zebul, Behold, there come people down from the top of the mountains. And Zebul said unto him, Thou [t] seest the shadow of the mountains as if they were men.[*]

37 And Gaal spake again, and said, See, there come people down by the [†] middle of the land, and another company come along by the plain of [‡] Meonenim.

38 Then said Zebul unto him, [u] Where is now thy mouth, wherewith thou saidst, Who is Abimelech, that we should serve him? Is not this the people that thou hast despised? Go out, I pray now, and fight with them.

39 And Gaal went out before the men of Shechem, and fought with Abimelech.

§ Most, or perhaps all kinds of salt in moderate quantity, promotes vegetation; but, in large quantity, produces absolute sterility. And this latter fact is most probably the origin of sowing conquered cities with salt. Farther, as God ordered salt to be sprinkled on all his sacrifices, a custom which the heathen adopted also, either from the patriarchs or from Moses, it is not unlikely, that the salting of ruins might have some reference to the city being made an offering. And as salt was used in confirmation of covenants, it might be employed to indicate the vowed determination of the conqueror never to rebuild it. Thus Hadrian strewed with salt the ruins of Jerusalem; and thus, Frederick Barbarossa in 1162, ploughed up the site of Milan and sowed it with salt.—Ed.

§ This simple statement is specially valuable, (1) as an indication of the manners and state of the people; (2) as a note that the history must have been written at or very near the time; (3) as it assumes not, after the manner of secular history, any dignity for its heroes beyond their own recorded actions. in disgrace. Accomplices in wickedness readily become plagues and murderers to one another; and none are nearer to ruin than those upon whom fair warnings are lost. When kingdoms are once disjointed, one base villain readily sets up against another, and traitors mutually distrust and betray each other. When men are intoxicated with wine, they are fit for murder, treason, and every other evil work: but insolent boastings of valour, in the fumes of wine, ordinarily issue in cowardice and shame. Nor can they, who are rebels themselves, justly expect fidelity from their associates; for rebellions, even against evil princes, usually issue in the ruin of the traitors. Civil wars are usually the most inhuman, in which the innocent and guilty perish without distinction. But what miseries wicked rulers entail upon their poor subjects! And how terrible is their end at last, when God returns their murder and other wickedness on their heads! When God hath finished his work with them, he debases and destroys them. They die in their sins; and the methods they took to secure their fame, do but serve to perpetuate their disgrace. But let us remember, that there is no refuge for us amidst all our spiritual enemies, and from the hand of an angry God, but in Christ the Saviour of sinners, and the strong hold of his chosen people.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—God can easily heap wealth on families, or render them happy with a moderate share; and it is a great mercy to a country when God raises up one impartial administrator of justice after another. Those, whose hearts were never changed, soon relapse into the very sins for which they had often severely smarted, and even become more and more wicked: and, when single rods of wrath are quickly contemned, God will, in justice or in love, apply his double gathered [o] vain men' to Jephthah, and went out with him.

4 ¶ And it came to pass [f] in process of time, that the children of Ammon made war against Israel.[†]

5 And it was so, [g] that, when the children of Ammon made war against Israel, the elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah out of the land of Tob:

6 And they said unto Jephthah, Come and be our captain, that we may fight with the children of Ammon.

7 And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, [h] Did not ye hate me, and expel me out of my father's house? and why are ye come unto me now when ye are in distress?

8 And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, Therefore we [i] turn again to thee now, that thou mayest go with us, and fight against the children of Ammon, and be our head over all the inhabitants of Gilead.

9 And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, [k] If ye bring me home again to fight against the children of Ammon, and the LORD deliver them before me, shall I be your head?

10 And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, The LORD [l] be witness between us, if we do not so according to thy words.

11 Then Jephthah went with the elders of Gilead, and the people made him head and captain over them: and Jephthah uttered all [m] his words before the LORD in Mizpeh.[‡]

12 ¶ And Jephthah [n] sent messengers unto the king of the children of Ammon, saying, What hast thou to do with me, that thou art come against me to fight in my land?

13 And the king of the children of Ammon answered unto the messengers of Jephthah, [o] Because Israel took away my land,[§] when they came up out of Egypt, from Arnon even unto Jabbok, and unto Jordan: now therefore restore those lands again peaceably.

14 And Jephthah [p] sent messengers[‖] again unto the king of the children of Ammon,

15 And said unto him, Thus saith Jephthah, [q] Israel took not away the land of Moab, nor the land of the children of Ammon:

16 But when Israel [r] came up from Egypt, and walked[*] through the wilderness unto the Red sea, and came to Kadesh;

17 Then [s] Israel sent messengers unto the king of Edom, saying, Let me, I pray thee, pass through thy land: but the king of Edom would not hearken thereto. And in like manner they sent unto the king of Moab; but he would not consent: and [t] Israel abode in Kadesh.

18 Then [u] they went along through the wilderness, and compassed the land of Edom, and the land of Moab, and came by the east side of the land of Moab, and pitched on the other side[*] of Arnon, [x] but came not within the border of Moab; for Arnon was the border of Moab.

19 And [y] Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, the king of Heshbon; and Israel said unto him, Let us pass, we pray thee, through thy land unto my place.

20 But Sihon [z] trusted not Israel to pass through his coast: but Sihon gathered all his people together, and pitched in Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

21 And the LORD God of Israel delivered Sihon and all his people into the hand of Israel, and they smote them: so Israel possessed all the land of the Amorites, the inhabitants of that country.

22 And they possessed [z] all the coasts of the Amorites, from [†] Arnon even unto Jabbok, and from the wilderness even unto Jordan.

23 So now the LORD God of Israel hath dispossessed the Amorites from before his people Israel, and shouldest thou possess it?

24 Wilt not thou possess that which [a] Chemosh thy god giveth thee to possess?[‡] so [b] whomsoever the LORD our God shall drive out from before us, them will we possess.

25 [c] And now, art thou any thing better than Balak the son of Zippor king of Moab? did he ever strive against Israel, or did he ever fight against them,[§]

26 While Israel dwelt in Heshbon and her towns, and in Aroer and her towns, and in all the cities that be along by the coasts of Arnon, [d] three hundred years? why therefore did ye not recover them within that time?

27 Wherefore I have not sinned against thee, but thou doest me wrong to war against me: [e] the LORD the Judge be judge this day between the children of Israel and the children of Ammon.

28 [f] Howbeit the king of the children of Ammon hearkened not unto the words of Jephthah which he sent him.

29 ¶ Then [g] the Spirit of the LORD came upon Jephthah,[‖] and he passed over Gilead and Manasseh, and passed over [h] Mizpeh of Gilead, and from Mizpeh of Gilead he passed over unto the children of Ammon.

‖ All valuable endowments are, in Scripture, attributed to the "Spirit of the Lord," from those of the accomplished artist, (Exod. 31. 2.), to those of the sanctified Christian, (1 Cor. 6. 11.) and accordingly the undertaking of Jephthah is attributed to the spirit coming upon him. But this coming of the Spirit is not to be considered as any mere enthusiastic impulse upon mind or body; but as light in the understanding to discover duty, faith to trust in God, zeal for his glory, love for his church, then grievously persecuted, all which unite to produce that dexterousness and courage, that fit men for great and dangerous undertakings, and to which, under Providence, success is ordinarily to be traced.—ED.

strokes; strokes on every hand! But if at last they bring us to a kindly sense of sin, and cordial crying to God, we must esteem them amongst his greatest mercies; and, though sharp the trial, and God refuse to hear our distresses, yet let not the soul, that is even frowned out of doors, despair. If he makes us plead guilty at his bar, renounce our idols, and submit to his mercy; there is hope in our end. His fatherly heart is touched with our wretchedness, and ready to receive the returning prodigals. He is loath to give up his people to utter destruction: and when he restores his favourable smiles, they powerfully animate our hearts against every foe. But it is of great importance, in our spiritual warfare, to have proper leaders and directors; and especially that we cleave close to Christ, the great Captain of his people.

LORD, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, 34 ¶ And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and, behold, [m] his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances; and she was his only child: [§] besides her he had neither son nor daughter.

35 And it came to pass, when he saw her, that he rent [n] his clothes, and said, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me: [o] for I have opened my mouth unto the LORD, and I cannot go back.

36 And she said unto him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto the LORD, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth; forasmuch as the LORD hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon.

[†] The whole difficulty of this perplexing narrative originates in this verse, and depends upon the translation of a single Hebrew letter, and which is sometimes rendered and, and sometimes or, according to the current of the passage. Thus, the words of the tenth commandment might be literally rendered, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, and his man-servant, and his maid-servant," &c.; but the sense obviously requires, that it be rendered or, and not and. Now, if for and, we substitute or, as is done in the tenth commandment, Jephthah will stand relieved from any vow to sacrifice his daughter, and merely to devote her to the Lord, as the law provided in the case of Nazarites or vows.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—The indulgers of lawless lust ordinarily entail both misery and shame upon the unhappy fruit of their guilty amours. But it is unreasonable for us to reproach a man with the unhappiness of his birth, when his practice deserves a more honourable relation. God often first debases those whom he intends to exalt, and marks men's sins, not only in their distress, but also in the means of their deliverance. Whorish Israel must now be delivered and governed by the bastard son of a harlot, lately an exile: but no man ought to be trampled on, or despised; we may need his help ere we die. And, if we have injured any, it is proper to entreat their pardon as quickly as possible. No injuries should render us implacable. Agreements ought to be very explicit and distinct; and, if important, ought to be ratified with solemn prayer. Before entrance on war, the most solemn acknowledgments should be made to God, and repeated endeavours peaceably to compose every difference; that so, if war cannot be avoided, we may prosecute it with a good conscience, and depend on God for success in it. For it is reasonable that such as delight in war should be ruined by it. Unjust men are ready to insist upon the most antiquated claims; and, however many practise injustice, few choose to be reckoned unjust. But, when the Lord hath given us any thing by special grant, we may insist upon the possession of it. To receive it from him, use it to his glory, keep it for his sake, and return it to him when he calls for it, is part of the duty which we owe to him. What care ought to be taken in

(1) The birth of Samson is foretold to his mother by the angel of the LORD; and he is devoted of God to be a perpetual Nazarite: 1—5. (2) Manoah supplicates a second visit of the divine Messenger: 6—8. (3) God grants them both a visit; repeats his former directions relative to Nazariteship; and, by inflaming their sacrifice, and ascending to heaven, shows himself to be the angel of JEHOVAH: 9—20. (4) His appearance makes a deep impression upon Manoah and his wife: 20—23. (5) Samson is born: 24, 25.

AND the children of Israel *[a] did evil again in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD delivered them into the hand of the Philistines forty years.†

2 ¶ And there was a certain man of [b]Zorah, of the family of the Danites, whose name was Manoah; and his wife was [c]barren, and bare not.

3 And the [d]angel of the LORD appeared unto the woman, and said unto her, [e]Behold now, thou art barren, and bearest not: but thou shalt conceive, and bear a son.

4 Now therefore beware, I pray thee, and [f]drink not wine nor strong drink, and eat not any unclean‡ thing:

5 For, lo, thou shalt conceive, and bear a son; and [g]no razor shall come on his head: for the child shall be a Nazarite unto God from the womb; and he shall [h]begin to deliver Israel out of the hand of the Philistines.

6 ¶ Then the woman came and told her husband, saying, A [i]man of God§ came unto me, and his countenance was like the countenance of an angel of God, very terrible: but I asked him not whence he was, neither told he me his name.

7 But he said unto me, Behold, thou shalt conceive, and bear a son; and now drink no wine nor strong drink, neither eat any unclean thing: for the child shall be a Nazarite to God from the womb to the day of his death.

8 ¶ Then Manoah entreated the LORD, and said, O my Lord, [k]let the man of God which thou didst send come again unto us, and teach us what we shall do unto the child that shall be born.

‡ The vow of the Nazarite required this abstinence. To attract attention to the prophecy concerning the deliverer, the rules of Nazaritism are extended to the mother. The Scriptures often and evidently intimate, what human observation has daily confirmed, that more of the character and future progress of children, depend upon mothers than upon fathers. Without searching, or perhaps being able to search farther into the causes of this fact, enough appears to account for it, in the greater intercourse of mothers with their children in childhood, when the future character is generally formed, and that before many suppose that any bias has been given.—Ed.

9 And God [l]hearkened to the voice of Manoah; and the angel of God came again unto the woman as she sat in the field: but Manoah her husband was not with her.

10 And [m]the woman made haste, and ran, and showed her husband, and said unto him, Behold, the man hath appeared unto me, that came unto me the other day.*

11 And Manoah arose, and went after his wife, and came to the man, and said unto him, Art thou the man that spakest unto the woman?† And he said, I am.

contracting a solemn vow, that it may never prove a snare to our soul! And having engaged to any thing lawful, we must in no wise go back. But it is mournful when parents, by their rashness, involve their obedient children in sin, in misery, or in death; and kind and comforting to make the joys and griefs of our neighbours our own. In this world, how is our wine mixed with water; our triumphs with distress; our joys with grief! Let these things make me long for the better country above.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Quarrels between brethren are often the most bitter and violent; for the most causeless wrath is the most outrageous and cruel. The most spotless characters are the fairest marks for envy; and the most signal services often expose men to the most virulent abuse of those whom they have saved from misery. But disregard of a calm self-vindication frequently forces the injured to harder measures. How mischievous is an insolent abusive tongue! It sets on fire the whole course of nature, and is set on fire of hell, and often issues in the ruin of the proprietor. They, who are most in fault, would often save themselves by being clamorous against the innocent: but the greatest boasters are usually the greatest cowards. Both God and men take pleasure in abasing the proud. These Ephraimites had gloried in their tribe; now they deny it. Lately they went over Jordan to burn Jephthah's house upon him; now they sneak homeward, and are cut off from their own. Lately they reviled the Gileadites as fugitives; now, from an infirmity peculiar to their own country, they are discerned, and slain in their flight. God sometimes calls men to an office without putting any remarkable work in their hand: and the days of the saints' honour or life are often but few and evil. Death's shafts fly thick—let us therefore so number our days as to apply our hearts unto wisdom.

(2) His conquest of a lion, and the honey which he afterwards found in the carcass: 5, 6, 8, 9. (3) The riddle he proposed at the marriage-feast, explained by the treachery of his wife: 10—18. (4) He kills thirty Philistines, and breaks off his new alliance: 19, 20.

AND Samson went down to [a] Timnath, and [b] saw a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines.

2 And he came up, and told his father and his mother, and said, I have seen a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines; now therefore [c] get her for me to wife.

3 Then his father and his mother said unto him, Is there never a woman among the daughters of [d] thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goest to take a wife of the [e] uncircumcised Philistines? And Samson said unto his father, Get her for me; for [e] she pleaseth me well.[†]

4 But his father and his mother knew not that it was [f] of the LORD, that he sought an occasion against the Philistines; for at that time the Philistines [g] had dominion over Israel.

5 ¶ Then went Samson down, and his father and his mother, to Timnath, and came to the vineyards of Timnath: and, behold, a young lion roared [‡] against him.

6 [h] And the Spirit of the LORD came mightily upon him, and he [i] rent him as he would have rent a kid, and he had nothing in his hand: [k] but he told not his father or his mother what he had done.[§]

7 And he went down and talked with the woman; and she pleased Samson well.

8 ¶ And after a time he returned to [l] take her, and he turned aside to see the carcass of the lion; and, behold, there was a swarm of bees and [e] honey in the carcass of the lion.[†]

9 And he took thereof in his hands, and went on eating, and came to his father and mother, and he gave them, and they did eat: but he told not them that he had taken the honey out of the carcass of the lion.

10 ¶ So his father went down unto the woman: and Samson [m] made there a feast; for so used the young men to do.

11 And it came to pass, when they [n] saw him, that they brought [o] thirty companions to be with him.

12 ¶ And Samson said unto them, I [p] will now put forth a riddle unto you: if ye can certainly declare it me within the [q] seven days of the feast,[‡] and find it out, then I will give you thirty [§] sheets, and thirty change of garments:

13 But if ye cannot declare it me, then shall ye give me thirty sheets, and thirty [r] change of garments. And they said unto him, Put forth thy riddle, that we may hear it.

14 And he said unto them, [s] Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness. And [t] they could not in three days expound the riddle.

15 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that they said unto Samson's wife, [u] Entice thy husband, that he may declare unto us the riddle, [x] lest we burn thee and thy father's house with fire:[‖] have ye called us [e] to take that we have? is it not so?

16 And Samson's wife [y] wept before him, and said, Thou dost but hate me, and lovest me not: thou hast put forth a riddle unto the children of my people, and hast not told it me. And he said unto her, Behold, I have not told it my father nor my mother, and shall I tell it thee?

17 And she wept before him [†] the seven days, while their feast lasted: and it came to pass on the seventh day, that he told her,[‡] because she lay sore upon him: and [s] she told the riddle to the children of her people.

18 And the men of the city said unto him on the seventh day, before the sun went down, What is sweeter than honey? And what is stronger than a lion? And he said unto them, If ye had not ploughed with my [a] heifer, ye had not found out my riddle.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—Where there is the greatest danger, and the least prospect of relief, it often comes. Mercies long waited for are rendered remarkably valuable, for the encouragement of others to wait on the Lord. And, to support the sinking spirits of his people, God often issues promises of salvation long before they are fulfilled. Those, whom God honours to be deliverers of churches and nations, ought to be remarkably holy themselves, and devoted to the service of God. Parents ought to beware of infecting their children with any thing of fleshly lusts; and married persons ought to communicate their spiritual experiences one to another. Divine instructions animate our desire after further fellowship with God: and how ready is God to satisfy such longing desires! Such as enjoy real communion with him wish all their relations to share of it. And such as know the real importance of children, will be earnestly desirous of God's direction and assistance in their education, for his honour. Mercies are mercies indeed only when they are rightly managed. But so treacherous are our memories and hearts, that we need line upon line, and precept upon precept; and to have always at hand a loving and careful remembrancer. Gratitude to God, and to his ministers for his sake, is highly agreeable; but let us never tempt the one nor the other with our curious inquiries. What God conceals we may be holy without the knowledge of; and, if we ask in prayer what is not for our real advantage, it is a great mercy to have our suit denied. But how animating is it to behold an ascending Redeemer carrying our hearts and services, all inflamed with his love, along with him! Let not his saints, through unbelief, be afraid of their signal mercies, or afraid to die in the Lord; but ever put a just and favourable construction on the providences of God, and ever look to Jesus' sacrifice as the great foundation of their hopes and comforts. God's promises shall most certainly be fulfilled. And how pleasant to observe the early impressions of God's Spirit upon our children!

CHAPTER XV.

(1) Samson burns the Philistines' corn with foxes and fire-brands: 1—5. (2) Kills multitudes of them: 6—8. (3) Slays a thousand Philistines with the jaw-bone of an ass: 9—17. (4) To correct his pride, God distresses him with thirst; and then, at his request, miraculously supplies him with water: 18—20.

BUT it came to pass within a while after, in the time of wheat harvest, that Samson visited his wife with [a] a kid; and he said, I will [b] go in to my wife into the chamber: but her father would not suffer him to go in.

2 And her father said, [c] I verily thought that thou hadst utterly hated her; therefore [d] I gave her to thy companion: is not her younger sister fairer than she? [*] take her, I pray thee, instead of her.

3 ¶ And Samson said concerning them, [e] Now shall I be more blameless than the Philistines, though I do them a displeasure.

4 And Samson went and caught [f] three hundred foxes, and took [†] fire-brands, and turned tail to tail, and put a fire-brand in the midst between two tails.

5 And when he had set the brands on fire, he let them go into the standing corn of the Philistines, and burnt up both the shocks, and also the standing corn, with the vineyards and olives.

6 Then the Philistines said, Who hath done this? And they answered, Samson, the son-in-law of the Timnite, because he had taken his wife, and given her to his companion. And the Philistines came up and [g] burnt her and her father with fire.[‡]

7 ¶ And Samson said unto them, [h] Though ye have done this, yet will I be avenged of you, and after that I will cease.

8 And he smote them [i] hip and thigh[§] with a great slaughter: and he went down and dwelt in the top of the rock Etam.

9 ¶ Then the Philistines went up, and pitched in Judah, and spread themselves in [k] Lehi.

10 And the men of Judah said, Why are ye come up against us? And they answered, [l] To bind Samson are we come up, to do to him as he hath done to us.

11 Then three thousand men of Judah [*] went to the top of the rock Etam, and said to Samson, Knowest thou not that the Philistines are [m] rulers over us? what is this that thou hast done unto us? And he said unto them, As they did unto me,[†] so have I done unto them.

12 And they said unto him, We are come down to bind thee, that we may [n] deliver thee into the hand of the Philistines. And Samson said unto them, Swear unto me, that ye will not [o] fall upon me yourselves.

13 And they spake unto him, saying, No; but we will [p] bind thee fast, and deliver thee into their hand: but surely we will not kill thee. And they bound him with two new cords, and brought him up from the rock.

14 ¶ And when he came unto Lehi, the [q] Philistines shouted against him: and the [r] Spirit of the LORD came mightily upon him; and the cords that were upon his arms became as flax that was burnt with fire, and his bands [‡] loosed from off his hands.

15 And he found a [§] new jaw-bone of an ass, and put forth his hand and took it, and [*] slew a thousand men therewith.

16 And Samson said, With the jaw-bone of an ass, heaps upon heaps, with the jaw of an ass have I slain a thousand men.

17 And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking, that he cast away the jaw-bone out of his hand, and called that place [‖] Ramath-lehi.*

18 ¶ And he was [t] sore athirst, and called on the LORD, and said, [u] Thou hast given this great deliverance into the hand of thy servant: and now [x] shall I die for thirst, and fall into the hand of the uncircumcised?

19 But God clave an hollow place that was in [y] the jaw, [†] and there came water thereout; and when he had drunk, his spirit came again, and he revived: wherefore he called the name thereof [z] En-hakkore, which is in Lehi unto this day.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—It is dangerous to be guided by the eye in the choice of our marriage companions: but it is needful and proper to submit ourselves to the authority of parents, who are over us in the Lord, as their property, and parts of themselves. And nothing ought they to object to so urgently, as to children's marrying with such as seem irreligious. God often indeed carries on His great purposes by means which cannot be justified in us; for when people are wandering out of God's way, they have reason to expect dangers, and even devils, to meet with and oppose them. It is glorious when great exploits are attended with great humility; and highly becoming when persons keep up an affecting remembrance of what God has done for them, and cheerfully allow their parents a share of what they acquire by their labour. And it is prudent to amuse ourselves and others at cheerful entertainments with something instructive and useful. God often brings the sweetest mercies out of the severest trials; but the treacherous pretences of affection speedily issue in dislike and mischief. Secrets, once trusted out of our own breast, seldom continue long such. Rash marriages often issue in sudden separations; and, if women's affections once stray from their husbands, their persons will soon follow. Nor are any more apt to defile the bed than false pretenders to friendship.

him in, and laid wait for him all night in the gate of the city, and were [a] quiet all the night, saying, In the morning, when it is day, we shall [b] kill him.

3 And Samson lay till midnight, and arose at midnight, and [c] took the doors of the gate of the city, and the two posts, [†] and went away with them, [‡] bar and all, and put them upon his shoulders, and carried them up to the top of an hill that is before Hebron.

4 ¶ And it came to pass afterward, [‖] that he [d] loved a woman [‖] in the valley of Sorek, whose name was [e] Delilah.

5 And the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and said unto her, Entice him, and see wherein his great strength lieth, [h] and by what means we may prevail against him, that we may bind him to [f] afflict him; and we [i] will give thee, every one of us, [k] eleven hundred pieces of silver.[†]

6 And Delilah said to Samson, [l] Tell me, I pray thee, wherein thy great strength lieth, and wherewith thou mightest be bound to afflict thee.

7 And Samson said unto her, [m] If they bind me with seven [‡§] green withs [§] that were never dried, then shall I be weak, and be as [g] another man.[†]

8 Then the lords of the Philistines brought up to her seven green withs which had not been dried, and she [n] bound him with them.

9 (Now there were men lying in wait, abiding with her in the chamber.) And she said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson.[‡] And he brake the withs, as a thread of tow is broken when it [o] toucheth the fire: so his strength [p] was not known.

10 And Delilah said unto Samson, Behold, thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: now [q] tell me, I pray thee, wherewith thou mightest be bound.

11 And he said unto her, [r] If they bind me fast with [§] new ropes [‖] that never were occupied, then shall I be weak, and be as another man.

12 Delilah therefore [s] took new ropes, and bound him therewith, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. (And there were liers in wait abiding in the chamber.) And he brake them from off his arms like a thread.

13 And Delilah said unto Samson, Hitherto thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: tell me wherewith thou mightest be bound. And he said unto her, [t] If thou weavest the seven locks[*] of my head with the web.

14 And she [†] fastened it with the pin, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awaked out of his sleep, and [u] went away with the pin of the beam, and with the web.[‡]

15 ¶ And she said unto him, [x] How canst thou say, I love thee, when thine heart is not with me? thou hast mocked me these three times, and hast not told me wherein thy great strength lieth.

16 And it came to pass, when she pressed him daily with her words, and urged him, so that his soul was [y] vexed unto death,

17 That he told her [z] all his heart, and said unto her, There hath not come [a] a razor upon mine head; for I have been a Nazarite unto God from my mother's womb: if I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man.[§]

18 And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart, she sent and called for the lords of the Philistines, saying, Come up this once; for he hath showed me all his heart. Then the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and [b] brought money in their hand.

19 And [c] she made him sleep upon her knees: and she called for [a] man, and she caused him to shave off the seven locks of his head; and she began to afflict him, and his strength went from him.

20 And she said, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awoke out of his sleep, and said, I will go out, as at other times before, and shake myself. And he wist not that [d] the LORD was departed from him.[‖]

21 But the Philistines took him, [e] and [*] put out his eyes, and brought him down to Gaza, and [f] bound him with fetters of brass; and he [g] did grind in the prison-house.[†]

22 [h] Howbeit the hair of his head began to grow again [‡] after he was shaven.

23 ¶ Then the lords of the Philistines gathered them together for to offer a great sacrifice unto [i] Dagon their god, and to rejoice: for they said, Our god hath delivered Samson our enemy into our hand.

24 And when the people saw him, they [k] praised their god: for they said, Our god hath delivered into our hands our enemy, and the destroyer of our country, [§] which slew many of us.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—An alliance into profane and graceless families, or giving way to unreasonable jealousies, are sources of great unhappiness: but when we have done our duty to prevent a quarrel, we cannot be charged with the consequences of it. Passion is terrible to all around, but it is glorious when the offended party is the first in coveting reconciliation. God often makes use of his people's enemies to avenge their quarrel. And such as, by sin, seek to avoid suffering, only bring upon themselves more terrible destruction. The people of God indeed have need to expect but little repose in this world. One conflict closely succeeds to another: and those whom God raises up to be deliverers in church or state, frequently receive the most base and treacherous abuse from their friends, for whose sake they spend their pains, and risk their life. But, if God be for us, no matter what or who may be against us, or how small our assistance be: for, though humbling providences closely follow after the most exalting, that we may know that we are but flesh, frail flesh; and may be constrained to a constant dependance on God, and fervent supplication to him; yet will he supply all our wants and fill our mouths with his praise.

The existence of two middle pillars, shows there were more; but if two were taken from the central parts of a semicircle — a very probable figure for a place where show, not privity, was the object — the staying and balancing of the building being destroyed, the whole would most probably fall together. Sir Christopher Wren has described an oval building which would be totally destroyed by the removal of one central pillar.—ED.

4 Yet he restored the money unto his mother; and his mother took two hundred shekels of silver, and gave them to the founder, who made thereof a graven image and a molten image: and they were in the house of Micah.

5 ¶ And the man Micah had an house of gods,[‡] and made an [f] ephod, and teraphim, and [§] consecrated one of his sons, who became his priest.

13 Then said Micah, [r] Now know I that the LORD will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Dangerous is it to ramble into the company of such as are lewd or frothy. The wrath of God hangs over the bed of lewdness; and the more secure sinners are, the nearer is their destruction. How impossible is it to preserve in safety the persons who are infatuated with fleshly lust! They are fixed in the basest slavery: nor can repeated warnings awaken them to consideration. Where the love of money is rooted in the heart, it will not hesitate to betray soul and body at once, for a supposed competent bribe. And, indeed, they who trust either honour or life to a base woman deserve to be betrayed. God justly gives up men to suffer who give up themselves to sin: and sensual lusts especially bring men at last to the most fearful misery. But dreadful is their ruin who ensnare and make sport with the falls and sufferings of God's people or servants; for God will graciously return to his penitent children, and renew their strength, in order that before and in death they may be avenged of their spiritual enemies.

But this Jewish hero illustriously typifies our almighty Redeemer. Express and seasonable were the predictions concerning him, and supernatural the manner of his birth. Solemn was his separation to the service of God; invigorating the spiritual influence which he received; and early and marvellous his exploits. By obedience and death he fulfilled the broken law; and conquered sin, Satan, the world, and death: and sweet is the provision provided by it for himself and his friends; nay, for sinners of mankind, even the chief! Important are his parables, and known only to such as have fellowship with him. Basely was he betrayed by Judas and his countrymen, and delivered to the Gentiles that he might be crucified. His enemies rejoiced to shut his eyes in death, and to imprison him in a grave. Making him the object of their derision, they sealed him up, and watched him in his tomb; but he brake the bands, and carried off the gates and bars of death; and, ascending up on high, led captivity captive. All alone he performed his wonderful exploits. By a voluntary death, according to his Father's will, he destroyed thousands of principalities and powers. By the contemned preaching of the gospel he conquers thousands of souls, and kills ten thousands of lusts.—But how dreadful is his vengeance! By the Romans, like fire-branded foxes, he spread destruction among his Jewish opposers, and burnt up their cities: by furious and ravaging Goths, Saracens, Tartars, Turks, &c., he resented, and will resent, the injuries done to his Christian cause: and how tremendously shall his fiery indignation for ever prey on the damned!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—Covetousness most frequently besets people in their old age; and churlish parents and thievish children often meet together. It is dreadful when those losses which should make men pray, cause them to curse and blaspheme. Hasty imprecations light unexpectedly where the curser least intended them. Reconcilement in sin is quickly effected: and the most covetous

CHAPTER XVIII.

(1) Some Danites send spies to Laish; and they by the way get acquaintance with Micah's priest: 1—6. (2) Six hundred warriors march against Laish; and by the way rob Micah of his gods and his priest: 7—26. (3) Having conquered Laish, they there set up Micah's idols, and consecrate his priest and his descendants to the service of them: 27—31.

IN [a] those days there was no king in Israel:* and in those days the tribe of the Danites sought them an inheritance to dwell in; for [b] unto that day all their inheritance had not fallen unto them among the tribes of Israel.

2 And the children of Dan sent of their family five men from their coasts, † men of valour, [c] from Zorah, and from Eshtaol, to spy out the land, and to search it; and they said unto them, Go, search the land: who, when they came to [d] mount Ephraim, to the house of Micah, they lodged there.

3 When they were by the house of Micah, they [e] knew the voice of the young man the Levite:‡ and they turned in thither, and said unto him, Who brought thee hither? and what makest thou in this place? and what hast thou here?

4 And he said unto them, [f] Thus and thus dealeth Micah with me, and hath hired me, and I am his priest.

5 And they said unto him, [g] Ask counsel, we pray thee, of God, that we may know whether our way which we go shall be prosperous.

6 And the priest [h] said unto them, Go in peace: [i] before the LORD is your way wherein ye go.

7 ¶ Then the five men departed, and came to [k] Laish, and saw the people that were therein, how they dwelt careless, after the manner of the Zidonians, quiet and secure; and there was no § magistrate in the land, that might put them to shame in any thing; and they were far from the Zidonians, and had no business with any man.‖

8 And they came unto their brethren to [l] Zorah and Eshtaol; and their brethren said unto them, What say ye?

9 And they said, Arise, that we may go up against them: for we have seen the land, and, behold, it is very good; and are ye [m] still? [n] be not slothful to go, and to enter to possess the land.

10 When ye go, ye shall come unto a people secure, and to a large land: for [o] God hath given it into your hands;* a place [p] where there is no want of any thing that is in the earth.

11 ¶ And there went from thence of the family of the Danites, out of Zorah, and out of Eshtaol, six hundred men † appointed with weapons of war.

19 And they said unto him, Hold thy peace, [z] lay thine hand upon thy mouth, and go with us, and be to us [a] a father and a priest: is it better for thee to be a priest unto the house of one man, or that thou be a priest unto a tribe and a family in Israel?

wretches liberally devote their idolized substance to the service of the devil. From what small beginnings are the vilest corruptions introduced into nations and churches! The grossest idolatries are often varnished with high pretences to religion. But sad are the times when faithful ministers are almost starved for want! and what an easy prey for Satan and his agents are unsettled professors, and especially rambling clergymen! God readily leaves those to debase themselves who have once abandoned themselves to a neglect of his worship and service: and permits those, who should be reprovers of sin, to be principal countenancers of it, for the sake of their belly. And upon what slight, nay, damnable grounds, do hardened sinners reckon themselves entitled to the favour of God!

AND it came to pass in those days, [a] when there was no king in Israel, that there was a certain Levite sojourning on the side of [b] mount Ephraim, who took to him [*c] a concubine out of [d] Beth-lehem-judah.

2 And his concubine [e] played the whore against him, and went away from him unto her father's house to Beth-lehem-judah, and was there [†‡] four whole months.

3 And her husband arose, and [f] went after her, [g] to speak [h] friendly unto her, and to bring her again, having his servant with him, and a couple of asses: and she brought him into her father's house; and when the father of the damsel saw him, he rejoiced to meet him.

4 And his father-in-law, the damsel's father, [i] retained him; and he abode with him three days: so they did eat and drink, and lodged there.

5 And it came to pass on the fourth day, when they arose early in the morning, that he rose up to depart: and the damsel's father said unto his son-in-law, [i] Comfort thine heart with a morsel of bread, and afterward go your way.

6 And they sat down, and did eat and drink both of them together: for the damsel's father had said unto the man, Be content, I pray thee, and tarry all night, and let thine heart be [k] merry.*

7 And when the man rose up to depart, his father-in-law urged him; therefore he lodged there again.

8 And he arose early in the morning on the fifth day to depart: and the damsel's father said, Comfort thine heart, I pray thee. And they tarried [†] until afternoon, and they did eat both of them.

9 And when the man rose up to depart, he, and his concubine, and his servant, his father-in-law, the damsel's father, said unto him, Behold, now the day [‡] draweth toward evening, I pray you tarry all night: behold, the [§] day groweth to an end; lodge here, that thine heart may be merry; and [l] to-morrow get you early on your way, that thou mayest go [‖] home.

10 But the man would not tarry that night, but he rose up and departed, and came [*] over against [m] Jebus, (which is Jerusalem,) and there were with him two asses saddled; his concubine also was with him.

11 And when they were by Jebus, the day was far spent; and the servant said unto his master, Come, I pray thee, and let us turn in unto this city of the Jebusites, and lodge in it.

12 And his master said unto him, We will not turn aside hither into [n] the city of a stranger,† that is not of the children of Israel; we will pass over to Gibeah.

13 And he said unto his servant, Come, and let us draw near to one of these places to lodge all night, in [o] Gibeah, or in Ramah.

14 And they passed on, and went their way; and the sun went down upon them when they were by Gibeah,‡ which belongeth to Benjamin.

* This narrative, at once so simple and so tragical, is in this part calculated and intended to convey a great moral lesson—the dangers resulting to families and friends from indiscreet hospitality. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—Outward straits will push men to great diligence for obtaining the comforts of this life; and often they go far to seek that which, by attending to God's direction, they might have had near home. Very often such are permitted of God to fall into ruinous snares: and, however earnestly they shun outward wants or hazards, they rush headlong into the most sinful temptations. When men are ignorant or negligent of consulting God and his word, they readily apply to the devil for direction and encouragement; and receive answers to their wish. But accomplices in wickedness ordinarily prove unfaithful to one another. And none is more apt to be treacherous than a clergyman who is ambitious of preferment, and chiefly concerned for his honour and his salary. Deplorable is the case of those who have gods which can be taken from them, and hearts which cannot part with them, though they be the means of their ruin. But hard is their state, when men dare not complain of injustice or robbery without risking their life; and unhappy is the condition of those who are destitute of proper government, especially if they are also plunged into carelessness and carnal security: for prosperity in an evil way encourages men to persevere in it. And the most sinful customs, when once they are established, are the most permanent: it is far easier to keep them out than to root them out.

there was no man that [p] took them into his house to lodging.*

16 ¶ And, behold, there came an old man [q] from his work out of the field at even, which was also of mount Ephraim; and he sojourned in Gibeah: but the men of the place were [r] Benjamites.

17 And when he had lifted up his eyes, he saw a wayfaring man in the street of the city: and the old man said, Whither goest thou? and whence comest thou?

18 And he said unto him, We are passing from Beth-lehem-judah toward the side of mount Ephraim; from thence am I: and I went to Beth-lehem-judah, but I am now going to [s] the house of the LORD; and there is no man that [t] receiveth me to house.

19 Yet there [u] is both straw† and provender for our asses; and there is bread and wine also for me, and for thy handmaid, and for the young man which is with thy servants: there is no want of any thing.

20 And the old man said, [x] Peace be with thee: howsoever, let all thy wants lie upon me; [y] only lodge not in the street.

21 So he brought him into his house, and gave provender unto the asses: and they [z] washed their feet, and did eat and drink.

22 ¶ Now, as they were making their hearts merry, behold, the men of the city, certain [a] sons of Belial, beset [b] the house round about, and beat at the door, and spake to the master of the house, the old man, saying, Bring forth the man that came into thine house, that we may [c] know him.

23 And the man, the master of the house, went out unto them, and said unto them, [d] Nay, my brethren, nay, I pray you, do not so wickedly;‡ seeing that this man is come into mine house, do not this [e] folly.

24 Behold, [f] here is my daughter, a maiden, and his concubine; them I will bring out now, and humble ye them, and do with them what seemeth good unto you: but unto this man do not so [§] vile a thing.

25 But the men would not hearken to him: so the man took his concubine, and brought her forth unto them; and [g] they knew her, and abused her all the night until the morning: and when the day began to spring, they let her go.

26 Then came the woman in the dawning of the day, and fell down at the door of the man's house where her [h] lord was, till it was light.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—How great is the sovereignty of God in honouring Beth-lehem, which lately furnished an idolatrous priest, and now an adulterous concubine, with the birth of his distinguished King, and of his only Son! Worthless clergymen and evil women are the greatest plagues to society: and parents' indulgence of their children, and infidelity to marriage vows, often issue in wide-spread ruin. Frequently the intended kindness of friends is a real injury; and what was designed for our welfare becomes a trap to ensnare us. Where we might reasonably expect distinguished kindness, we often meet with the most abominable neglect, and most ruinous abuse. Apostates from God are often void of humanity and natural affection; while truly charitable sojourners on earth are patterns of hospitality and brotherly kindness; look out for, and are happy in finding, opportunities of doing good, particularly to ministers of Christ. We are apt to hope that our troubles are at an end when the worst storm is but gathering. To what horrible lengths in wickedness will not apostate professors go! and what barefaced impudence continuance in lewdness begets! When sinners are once given up to their own hearts' lust, they easily sink into the most unnatural crimes: and, when saying, [1] We will not any of us go to his tent,* neither will we any of us turn into his house:

9 But now, this shall be the thing which we will do to Gibeah; we will go up [m] by lot against it:

10 And we will take ten men of an hundred throughout all the tribes of Israel, and an hundred of a thousand, and a thousand out of ten thousand, to fetch victual for the people,† that they may do, when they come to Gibeah of Benjamin, according to all the folly that they have wrought in Israel.

11 So all the men of Israel were gathered against the city, ‡ knit together as one man.

12 ¶ And the tribes of Israel [n] sent men through all the tribe of Benjamin, saying, What wickedness is this that is done among you?

13 Now therefore [o] deliver us the men, the [p] children of Belial, which are in Gibeah, that we may put them to death, and put away evil from Israel. But the children of Benjamin would not [q] hearken to the voice of their brethren the children of Israel;

14 But the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together out of the cities unto Gibeah, to go out to battle against the children of Israel.

15 And the children of Benjamin were numbered at that time, out of the cities, [r] twenty and six thousand men that drew sword, besides the inhabitants of Gibeah, which were numbered seven hundred chosen men.§

16 Among all this people there were seven hundred chosen men [s] left-handed: every one could sling stones at an hair-breadth, and not miss.

17 And the men of Israel, besides Benjamin, were numbered [t] four hundred thousand men that drew sword: all these were men of war.

18 ¶ And the children of Israel arose, and went up to the [u] house of God, and [x] asked counsel of God, and said, Which of us shall go up first‖ to the battle against the children of Benjamin? And the LORD said, [y] Judah shall go up first.

19 And the children of Israel [z] rose up in the morning, and encamped against Gibeah.

20 And the men of Israel went out to battle against Benjamin; and the men of Israel put themselves in array to fight against them at Gibeah.

21 And the children of Benjamin came forth out of Gibeah, and [a] destroyed down to the ground of the Israelites that day twenty and two thousand men.

¤ Hence it is evident that these supplementary narratives, commencing at chap. 17, are intended to show the manner in which idolatry and anarchy were introduced, and specially to evince, how soon the most blessed work of revival, such as came in with Joshua about the time of crossing the Jordan, may be succeeded by coldness, deadness, forgetfulness, apostasy, idolatry, anarchy, and the most polluting immorality. — Note. they are become desperate in wickedness, they will neither bear restraint, nor hear admonition. When we commit one sin to avoid a greater, we ordinarily plunge ourselves into further snares: and God fearfully marks sin in its punishment. The fleshly lust, which had been this woman's sin, is now made her punishment. And in justice never will he extenuate men's wickedness. With the most deliberate concern, unanimity, and faithfulness, ought the important affairs of churches and nations to be transacted. And such as would obtain God's blessing on a land, must seek to purge it by the execution of justice on notorious criminals.

36 So the children of Benjamin saw that they were smitten: for [u] the men of Israel gave place to the Benjamites, because they trusted unto the liers in wait which they had set beside Gibeah.

37 And the liers in wait hasted, and rushed upon Gibeah; and the liers in wait [x] drew themselves along, and smote all the city with the edge of the sword.

38 Now there was an appointed ‡ sign between the men of Israel § and the liers in wait, [y] that they should make a great ‖ flame with smoke to rise up out of the city.

39 And [z] when the men of Israel retired in the battle, Benjamin began * to smite and kill of the men of Israel about thirty persons; for they said, Surely they are smitten down before us, as in the first battle.

40 But when the flame began to arise up out of the city with a pillar of smoke, the Benjamites looked behind them, and, behold, [a] the flame of the city ascended up to heaven.

41 And when the men of Israel turned again, [b] the men of Benjamin were amazed: for they saw that evil † was come upon them.

42 Therefore they turned their backs before the men of Israel unto the way of the wilderness; but the battle overtook them:‡ and them which came out of the cities they destroyed in the midst of them.

43 Thus they [c] enclosed the Benjamites round about, and chased them, and trode them down § with ease ‖ over against Gibeah toward the sun-rising.

44 And there fell of Benjamin eighteen thousand men: all these were men of valour.

45 And they turned, and fled toward the wilderness unto the rock of [d] Rimmon: and they gleaned of them in the highways five thousand men; and pursued hard after them unto Gidom, and slew two thousand men of them.

46 So that all which fell that day of Benjamin were * twenty and five thousand * men that drew the sword: all these were men of valour.

47 [f] But six hundred men turned, and fled to the wilderness unto the rock Rimmon, and abode in the rock Rimmon four months.

48 And the men of Israel [g] turned again upon the children of Benjamin, and smote them with the edge of the sword, as well the men of every city, as the beast, and all that * came to hand: also they set on fire all the cities that † they came to.

(1) The Israelites bitterly bewail the ruin of their Benjamite brethren: 1—4, 6, 15. (2) For a reparation of that ruin, they provide wives for the six hundred who remained. 1. The virgins of Jabesh-gilead, whose city they utterly destroyed for neglecting to attend their late general rendezvous at Mizpeh; 5, 7—14. 2. The daughters of Shiloh, whom they permit the Benjamites to apprehend at a public procession: 16—25.

A. M. 2579, or 2569. B. C. 1425, or 1415.

NOW the men of Israel [a] had sworn in [b] Mizpeh, saying, There [c] shall not any of us give his daughter unto Benjamin to wife.*

2 And the people came to the [d] house of God, and abode there till even before God, and lifted up their voices, and wept sore;†

3 And said, O LORD God of Israel, [e] why is this come to pass in Israel, that there should be to-day one tribe lacking in Israel?

4 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the people [f] rose early, and built there an altar, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings.

5 And the children of Israel said, Who is there among all the tribes of Israel that came not up with the congregation unto the LORD? For they [g] had made a great oath concerning him that came not up to the LORD to Mizpeh, saying, He shall surely be put to death.

6 And the children of Israel [h] repented them for Benjamin their brother, and said, There is one tribe cut off from Israel this day:

7 How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing we have [i] sworn by the LORD, that we will not give them of our daughters to wives?

8 ¶ And they said, What one is there of the tribes of Israel that came not up to Mizpeh to the LORD? and, behold, there came none to the camp from [k] Jabesh-gilead to the assembly.

9 For the people were numbered,‡ and, behold, there were none of the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead there.

10 And the congregation sent thither twelve thousand men of the valiantest, and commanded them, saying, [l] Go and smite the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead with the edge of the sword, with the women and the children.

11 And this is the thing that ye shall do, [m] Ye shall utterly destroy every male, and every woman that [n] hath lain by man.

† Sorrow for sin, is a hopeful, but by no means a certain sign of repentance; for there is much difference between feeling sorrow for the inconveniences, annoyance, and loss, occasioned by sin to ourselves, and feeling grief for the insult that sin has offered to God. So Israel "wept sore" for the national injury of their rash vow; but, so far from being truly penitent, they prepare to rectify the vow by a verbal evasion, and to remedy one sin by the perpetration of another.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—It is comely when professors of the true religion are unanimous and hearty in their zeal against enormous crimes; and when, with prudent deliberations and proper despatch, they proceed to the punishment of them. But infatuated are they who patronise and protect the vicious, especially when at the expense of their own liberties and lives. Proud self-dependence is the ruin of sinners; and such as draw the sword in a bad cause, may expect to see it bathed in their own blood. The dispensations of Providence appear very mysterious in thus calling men to work, and yet frowning upon them in the execution of it. But let us not be so inconsiderate as to judge of a cause from the prosperity or adversity which attends it. There is need to wait patiently for the issue of things: and such as punish others should be innocent, or at least penitent, themselves. Short is the triumphing of the wicked, and fatal to them at last. It is vain to fight where God is our enemy, or to flee when he pursueth. What desolations sin makes in the earth! but dreadful indeed will be the case of sinners at the last day; of Jabesh-gilead four hundred [a] young virgins, that had known no man by lying with any male: and they brought them unto the camp [o] to Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan.

13 And the whole congregation sent some [†] to speak to the children of Benjamin that were in [p] the rock Rimmon, and to [q] call peaceably unto them.

14 And Benjamin came again at that time; and they gave them wives [‡] which they had saved alive of the women of Jabesh-gilead: and yet so they [r] sufficed them not.

15 And the people repented them for Benjamin, because that the LORD had made a breach in the tribes of Israel.

16 ¶ Then the elders of the congregation said, How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing the women are destroyed out of Benjamin?

17 And they said, [§] There must be an inheritance for them that be escaped of Benjamin, that a tribe be not destroyed out of Israel.

18 Howbeit we may not give them wives of our daughters: for the children of Israel [s] have sworn, saying, Cursed be he that giveth a wife to Benjamin.

19 Then they said, Behold, there is a [t] feast of the LORD in Shiloh [‖] yearly,[*] in a place which is on the north side of Beth-el, [†] on the east side [‡] of the highway that goeth up from [u] Beth-el to Shechem, and on the south of Lebonah.

20 Therefore they commanded the children of Benjamin, saying, Go and lie in wait in the vineyards;

21 And see, and, behold, if the daughters of Shiloh come out to [x] dance in dances, then come ye out of the vineyards, and catch you every man his wife of the daughters of Shiloh, and go to the land of Benjamin.

22 And it shall be, when their fathers or their brethren come unto us to complain, that we will say unto them, [y] Be favourable unto them for our sakes; because we reserved not to each man his wife in the war: for ye did not [z] give unto them at this time, that ye should be guilty.[*]

23 And the children of Benjamin did so, and took them wives, according to their number, of them that danced, whom they caught; and they went and returned unto their inheritance, and [a] repaired the cities, and dwelt in them.

24 And the children of Israel departed thence at that time, every man to his tribe, and to his family, and they went out from thence every man to his inheritance.

25 [b] In those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was [c] right in his own eyes.[†] when there shall be no rock to hide them, nor mountain to cover them. And who knows what extensive and everlasting wo may proceed from one moment of indulged lust!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Rash oaths are ordinarily ensnaring. True zeal may be carried too far. And there is often an overdoing in well-doing.—War may be ill ended that was well begun. Even necessary justice ought to be executed with deliberation and deep compassion; for strong passions prepare work for an after repentance. And one rash step, or even rash word, sometimes draws after it the most terrible consequences. In perplexities and distress, it is proper to have recourse to God, and the atoning blood of his Son. He can extricate us in a decent and honourable manner. But, amidst violent fits of repentance, men are often readier to support their own authority than to consult God, and to extirpate brethren rather than Canaanites. Dancing, even without mixture of sexes, often renders persons an easy prey. And who knows how often the ambuscades of evil spirits transport souls from the dancing-floor into everlasting destruction! How great the confusion of an unsettled government! It is a great mercy for a land to have proper rulers in church or state.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE BOOK OF JUDGES.

CHAP. I. Ver. 2. Judah shall go up.—Israel was formerly a camp, now it is a federation of settlements and colonies, in which each tribe is to assert its own territorial rights, but still under the national sanction and banner. Here is the true exemplar of the churches. In the movements and progress of reformation, they constitute one army united by common doctrines and common dangers. When the storm of opposition or persecution gives place to the calm of success, the churches settle down in territorial divisions; each church having allotted to it, by providence, its own peculiar work of faith, and labour of love; while all the churches should remain the members of one great federation, of which Christ is the head, and whose separate or combined energies should all be directed to the spiritual subjugation of their common enemies, and the advancement of the glory of their common Lord.——Ver. 6. Cut off his thumbs and his great toes.—This punishment, grievous as it appears, was more politic than cruel. The removal of the thumb, was intended to unfit for holding the war spear. The removal of the great toes, to unfit for running; and so to obviate the necessity of imprisonment or death. There seems no room for supposing, with some, that the great toes were cut off merely to prevent Adoni-bezek from employing them as a kind of additional hands, as is common with artisans in the east, and as is sometimes seen in Europe, in the case of persons born without hands. In a cruel tyrant, such as Adoni-bezek was, we scarcely expect either the diligence or dexterity of an artisan.——Ver. 7. As I have done, so God hath requited me.—A heathen once wisely said of a criminal, "He has blushed, and all is well;" and may not a Christian hope, that where conscience is not dead, there still is hope of spiritual revival? Adoni-bezek acknowledges the justice of God; may we not judge in charity, that he likewise saw his mercy?——Ver. 13. Caleb's younger brother took it.—Joshua had already taken Arba, (Hebron), Josh. 10. 36., how then does it require to be taken again? Are not these accounts contradictory? By no means. The Canaanites had, in the mean time, retaken them, and they now required to be reconquered, an occurrence very common in all warfare.——Ver. 19. Could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had chariots of iron.—These words, as translated, seem to ascribe incapacity to Jehovah. The proper solution lies in translating the last clause of the sentence interrogatively, thus:—"Could he not therefore have caused the inhabitants of the valley to be driven out, though they had chariots of iron?" This is a truth in war. For when mountaineers are driven from their natural fortresses—and the earth affords none stronger than those of Palestine—the force that drove them out, must, with far greater ease drive out the inhabitants of the plain, no matter how strong their walls, or how great their means of defence. This solution confirms the declaration, (Josh. 17. 18.) and is perfectly consistent with the translation of similar sentences in other parts of the Hebrew Scriptures, while it removes the apparent admission of incapacity in God, to the want of faith, obedience, zeal, and courage in the armies of Judah.——Ver. 20. He expelled thence the three sons of Anak.—Therefore how much more should Judah have expelled the inhabitants of the plain, seeing the Anakims were the mightiest, and most dreaded of the inhabitants of Canaan, Deut. 9. 2.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. An angel of the Lord came up from Gilgal to Bochim.—Having first appeared in Gilgal, as the star of our Lord first appeared in the east, the angel came to the place of a general assembly of the nation then met, which place received thence the name of Bochim, or weepers, as a memorial of the miraculous appearance. This angel was Jehovah, "the Son of God," "God manifest," as appears from comparing Gen. 24. 7. & 26. 3, with the oath recorded in this verse, and again repeated, Heb. 6. 13.——Ver. 3. I will not drive them out from before you.—Is not this a breach of covenant and promise on the part of God? No. For he had commanded the Israelites to drive out the wicked idolaters, and that, thus using their obedience, he would drive them out, but with disobedience he had made no covenant, and to rebels no such promise.——Ver. 10. Which knew not the Lord.—The rapid change to idolatry would appear, if not incredible, at least peculiar, to hard-hearted and stiff-necked Israel, were not the experience of all ages in perfect accordance with the inspired narrative. The reformations under David, Josiah, Hezekiah, and Ezra, lasted little beyond the lives of their promoters. The greater reformation under our Lord, scarcely outlived the days of the apostles. Nay, while an apostle lived to write, there were those who had forgotten their first love. The glorious reformation of the sixteenth century ceased to grow, even during the lives of the reformers; and the various revivals since bestowed, in different parts of the churches, have seldom continued even during the generation that has experienced them.—Note. The word of God requires no confirmation beyond its own authority; yet, that men may be without excuse, all historical record, and universal experience confirm it by their perfect concurrence.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. The nations which the Lord left to prove Israel.—To prove, not to discover any thing in them unknown to God, "for he knows what is in man;" but to disclose to themselves their wickedness by the judgments that righteously followed it; and, to display to other nations and churches, as well as to Israel, the nature of that moral government which God exercises over all. God also intended to prove—to demonstrate—the power of faith, that is, the believing reception of God's word, and a firm reliance upon his truth, mercy, and power; and thereby to bear witness to a faithless generation, that "God's arm was not shortened that it could not save," seeing the arm of man, when nerved by faith, was instrumentally sufficient for their deliverance.—Note. The faith of these judges and their true followers, was faith in Christ, the promised deliverer, whose "day they saw afar off and were glad."——Ver. 2. Teach them war.—Not to teach them war as an employment, but to let them feel it as a judgment; and only a duty when in self-defence, or the commanded punishment of abandoned criminals.——Ver. 7. Served Baalim and the groves.—How any one could worship Baal, and, in the same sense, worship a grove, is scarcely intelligible. The Hebrew word, however, translated "groves," signifies, according to the high authority of Castel, "a wooden image dedicated to Astarte, or Venus." The word employed by the Septuagint to translate the Hebrew, Theodoret explains by Astarte, Venus, or Ashtaroth. A clear proof of th is interpretation occurs 2 Kings 23. 6, where it is recorded that "Josiah brought out the groves from the house of the Lord." Now, a grove could not have grown in the house; the word must, therefore, signify an image for idolatrous worship.——Ver. 9. Caleb's younger brother.—Family descent is neither proudly and foolishly to be overvalued, nor as proudly or foolishly despised. God gives many promises in family descent—he assigns his largest encouragements to family education—he delights to be called "the God of our fathers;" and here, the first deliverer illustrates the importance of family character, hereditary honour, courage, and piety. ——Ver. 13. City of palm-trees.—Whether this city was Jericho or Engedi, which lay near to each other, is matter of question. Brown Patterson, in his judicious notes, says it was Jericho, or a city erected by the Moabites on its site, but gives no authority, and in this opinion he is joined by the annotator in the Pictorial Bible. Syme in his Geography identifies Hazezon-tamar, the city of palm-trees, with Engedi. That it was not Jericho, appears more than probable from consulting ch. 1. 16; for Jericho having been utterly destroyed, and its re-erection denounced, it can scarcely be imagined that the Kenites were inhabiting its ruins.——Ver. 29. Ten thousand men.—Moab had the country only by military occupation, not by agricultural or commercial settlements. There is therefore no account but of men —a sure note of the grent moral corruption both of the occupying army, and the conquered country.——Ver. 31. Slew of the Philistines six hundred men with an ox-goad.—The Syrian ox-goad of modern times—and from the eastern tenacity of ancient forms, manners, and customs, we may infer of ancient times likewise—is a strong pole of wood, seven or eight feet long, with a pointed iron at one end; and a broad chisel at the other—the one to goad the oxen, the other to clean the plough—a truly formidable weapon, and, perhaps, intended for defence, in a country where still in many places, as travellers declare, the gun forms a regular appurtenance of the plough. The exploit of Shamgar, is extraordinary; an infidel would say incredible. Not so, however, if Scripture language receive the same justice with other history; for we say, a general gained a battle, when we make no mention of the soldiers who alone fought for it, while he never struck a single blow. Shamgar may, accordingly have led on a party of Israelites against Moabite marauders, he being armed merely with an ox-goad. Or if any say that the words describe the 600 as actually slain by his own hand, still it is not said that he slew them at once; but may have destroyed so many in successive encounters.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 2. That reigned in Hazor.—Reconquered and rebuilt by the Canaanites, after being burned by Joshua, Josh. 11. 13. Such revolutions are common in war, and indicate no contradiction in the history. Its restoration is not recorded simply because the author writes not the general history of Jabin, but of Israel, and notices only so much of Jabin as is necessary to illustrate the religious defection and political troubles of Israel.——Harosheth of the Gentiles.—A city of northern Galilee, long retained by the Canaanites, and has the distinctive appellation "of the Gentiles," as most probably there was another city of the same name within the possession of the tribes.——Ver. 15. Sisera lighted down off his chariot. —Why not rather keep in the chariot, and trust to the swiftness of the horses? Partly to avoid notice of himself, by drawing away the pursuers after the chariot, as actually took place; partly, perhaps, to get into broken ground or underwood, so as to escape detection, partly to make his way to the nearest friendly tribe, who had actually informed of Barak's levies on Tabor, ver. 12.——Ver. 20. Thou shalt say, No.—That the modern Arab code of honour must have thus early been recognised, is evident from the fact, that Sisera goes confidently to sleep in the tent, with no defence but Jael's implied denial of his concealment. He was fully aware that no one dared to violate the privacy of the tent in search of Sisera. The crime would have been considered inexpiable. Nay, even if certain he was concealed within, it is questionable whether any one acquainted with Arabian law would have ventured to enter.——Ver. 22. Sisera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples.—Do the Scriptures sanction the breach of implied and conventional honour, or the practice of assassination, either for private or political crimes? We answer, they sanction neither; they denounce both. How then are we to defend the conduct of Jael? The answer is easy. We feel tied to no such defence. The candid student of the Bible is referred, for the general principle of Scripture in such cases, to the note on ch. 3. 23. And it may be proper to add, that when the Scriptures neither pause to condemn nor to justify, but merely to state the facts, we must now be utterly incompetent to pronounce any thing but a conditional verdict, whether of guilt or acquittal, in as much as we are totally ignorant of many of the concurrent circumstances under which the event took place.

CHAP. V. Ver. 7. The inhabitants of the villages ceased.—As in the case of Jael, so in the case of Sisera, we are unable to ascertain the complete facts of the indictment. What his personal delinquencies may have been, we cannot tell; but there is here a note of his administration of the government, that marks him as a political and military delinquent of the deepest dye.——Ver. 16. Great searchings of heart.—God searching the hearts, and showing what was in them, (Psal. 139. 23.)—the thoughtful in Reuben searching why God was contending with them by confounding their counsels.—Note. What a lesson to the divided churches. Why divided in doctrine? why divided in love? why in forbearance? why in mutual help—the help of the Lord against the mighty? Shed abroad, O Lord, thy love in the hearts of thy churches; and teach them to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."——Ver. 22. Prancings of their mighty ones.—"Mighty ones," strong steeds, as translated by Kennicot. "Horse hoofs broken," because not shod with iron, a thing unknown in several ancient nations, and still unpractised in several districts of the East. The hoofs were broken in the rugged ways and rapid flight.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. Made them the dens which are in the mountains.—Though shorter, this is much more grievous than any of the foregoing expressions. Israel is driven from villages and towns altogether, and can now only hide in dens and caves of the mountains. With such retreats Canaan abounded—God thus mingling mercy with judgment, and keeping a seed alive to serve him. These memorials of their misery are still found by the curious traveller in the deep recesses of the mountains.——Ver. 25. The second bullock of seven years old.—Why is the second bullock mentioned, and its age? (1) The Midianites had carried off all the cattle they could discover, (ver. 4.) so that Joash, a man of rank, with a large establishment of servants, (see ver. 27.) had no ox of three years old, the proper age for such a sacrifice. See Gen. 15. 9. (2) The choice of an ox of seven years may have had a reference to the past seven years of Midianitish oppression. (3) Most probably he is called the second, not in reference to one of greater age or value, but in reference to his place in the plough, meaning the off, or right hand bullock.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 3. Mount Gilead.—Gilead certainly lay on the east, while Gideon was now on the west of Jordan. How then are any to depart from a place where they were not? Some have supposed, that though Gilead Proper was on the enst of Jordan, the continuation on the west might also have been called Gilead. Others suppose Gilead an error, and that it should be Gilboa, but this change is unsupported by authority. Hales reads it thus—"Whosoever from mount Gilead is afraid," &c. a feeling most likely in the Manassites from that district, as they were nearest to their Midianitish oppressors.——Ver. 16. He put a trumpet in every man's hand.—How can we account for the ease with which Gideon obtains 300 trumpets, in such a wretched and oppressed country, and especially 300 men qualified by practice; and it requires no little, to blow on them? By recollecting that the Levites used the trumpets in the worship of the Lord; and that being now laid aside, the use of the trumpet had probably been transferred to the worship of their idols, and extended from the Levites to all the people. The circumstance of so many trumpets and qualified blowers favours the idea suggested in the note on preceding chapter, ver. 34, that the oppressed Israelites had established something equivalent to telegraphic communication, by means of the different trumpet-calls.——Ver. 22. The Lord set every man's sword against his fellow.—The host of the enemy was not exclusively Midianitish, but included the Amalekites, and the various Arab tribes called "children of the East," (chap. 6. 33.) it is therefore easy to comprehend how such a mixed multitude, numerous as grashoppers, might mistake each other for enemies, and commit the kind of self-slaughter recorded.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 4. Faint, yet pursuing them.—Duty, when justly appreciated, is always a pleasure; but, in many cases the pain and toil of duty are grievous to flesh and blood. The conduct of Gideon's army is the true measure for performance of a difficult duty, in which the believer is faint, yet pursuing. Gal. 6. 9.—— Ver. 16. Taught the men of Succoth.—It is a fact in human nature, that few, perhaps none, can be taught any thing without privation or suffering. The Succothites needed a severe lesson to rebuke their inhumanity. Still, Europeans, who have not attended to eastern ideas and customs, will be ready to imagine this infliction much greater than in reality it was. In most European countries, corporal punishment implies some kind of degradation, and is chiefly or entirely confined to the most abandoned offenders. In the east, especially in Persia, it carries no idea of degradation, and is inflicted on the highest officer of state, as readily as on the lowest menial.——Ver. 19. The sons of my mother.—In a country where polygamy was tolerated, brother did not convey the same endearment, as "son of my mother." ——Ver. 20. Up, and slay them.—It may seem strange to European eyes, that Gideon should order his son to slay the two princes. But the Hebrews had no public executioner. The witnesses and the people inflicted the sentence of death. Till this day, in the East, where there is a public executioner, it is one of the highest offices of honour, so was the occasional appointment amongst the Hebrews. See 1 Kings 2. 25, 29, 31, 35.——Ver. 28. The country was in quietness forty years.— This is now the third time it has been said, "the land had rest forty years," (chap. 3. 11. & 5. 31.) a coincidence so strange that its probability has been questioned. But, besides the historic authority, which no mere hypothesis or doubt has a right to call in question; this was the period of "tentation in the wilderness," and which God thus repeats to bring, by the association of similarity, his judgments to remembrance.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 4. They gave him threescore and ten pieces of silver.—The value of the piece of silver cannot be positively ascertained, but there can be scarcely a doubt that it was the shekel, value little above two shillings. That so small an amount should hire a sufficient number of followers to render his success probable, will not astonish any one who is historically acquainted with the great value of money in certain periods and states of society, and also with the short period of service for which mercenaries have often been engaged.——Vain and light persons.—Empty, unsettled, poor, and vagabond—having nothing to lose, and every thing to covet, to hope for, or to plunder—the ordinary tools of all such unprincipled revolutions—the disgraces of the society that has reared them without education or employment; and, finally, the scourge of Providence to a negligent and godless people. ——Ver. 25. Told Abimelech.—Not that they were robbing, for he was as unprincipled as themselves, but that they were lying in wait to seize or to slay him.——Ver. 54. That men say not of me, A woman slew him.—Pride is one of the most natural and inveterate propensities of the unrenewed human heart. Zebah and Zalmunna felt pride gratified in dying by the hand of a valiant man, instead of a timid boy, and here Abimelech desires to die by the hand of one of his martial followers, that he may escape the imaginary disgrace of dying by the hand of a weak woman.—Note. How hard must it be to humble pride, seeing that it is stronger than death! What need to learn of him that is meek and lowly in heart, and to mortify pride that we may live and die like him!

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. Shamir in mount Ephraim.—There was another Shamir in the hill country of Judah, (Josh. 19. 22.) therefore this city is specially described as belonging to Ephraim. Of Tola, nothing particular is related, but his defence, or deliverance of Israel, and the character of distinguished valour generally bestowed upon the whole family of Issachar, 1 Chr. 7. 1.——Ver. 6. Forsook the Lord, and served not him.—A religion addressed to the senses has wonderful attractions either for a very refined, or a very sensual people. Two states that may be either separate or combined. When refinement and sensuality are combined, religion chiefly consists in a taste for painting, statuary, music, processions, and ceremonies, with great moral laxity, compensated by pilgrimages, penances, or fines. Where sensuality reigns alone, the evils are the same, but the hope of remedy greater; for the refinement is wanting by which idolatry is recommended, and its grosser deformities covered from the eyes.——Ver. 10. The children of Israel cried unto the Lord.—Under whose government this occurred, we are not expressly told. From the following chapter, it would seem to have been in a kind of interregnum, between the death of Jair and the elevation of Jephthah. The time, however, is of no importance. The convictions of sin, and religious revival indicated, are the points of real importance.——Ver. 11. The Lord said unto the children of Israel.—By whom the Lord spoke, whether by a prophet, or the high priest, or by his angel, we are not informed. By reference to ch. 13. 3, it would appear most probable, that in this case, it was the Lord himself that spoke.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. Son of an harlot.—Some high authorities propose to translate the word "hostess," "a tavern-keeper;" such persons, however, in the Eastern countries around Canaan, are, in modern times, totally unknown; nor do we see any indications in the Scriptures that would lead to the belief of their existence in ancient times. Taking the word as it stands in our version—and we believe it must be so taken—it indicates an important fact, that an unworthy parent may have a worthy child. See Ezek. 18. 2, &c.——Ver. 3. Land of Tob.—A petty kingdom of Syria, on the east of the Hauran, having Zoba on the north, and the Ammonites on the south. It was a populous district, as it furnished 12,000 men to the confederacy against David, 2 Sam. 10. 6.——Ver. 5. The elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah.—It is of no little importance, for the encouragement of the young, to see that in all cases, a distinguished man finds distinguishing employment. Talents, industry, and acquirements, may, for a time, remain in obscurity, but some event will still occur to call them into exercise, and assign them due reward.—Note. Let not this fact encourage either pride or vain expectations; humility of expectation is one of the most essential handmaidens of success. ——Ver. 35. I have opened my mouth unto the Lord.—However imperfect the character of Jephthah may be, piety to the Lord was his predominant feeling, and his acquaintance with Scripture, familiar, as is obvious from ver. 9, 11, 15—17, as well as from this verse. Therefore, nothing can, a priori, appear more unlikely, than that a man, familiar with Scripture, and piously disposed, should vow a sacrifice most solemnly denounced in Scripture, (Lev. 20. 2.); nor can it be readily supposed, that a believer who would not dare to profane the altar by "the price of a dog," (Ex. 23. 18.) would profane it still more by a sacrifice, not only illegal, but most cruel and unnatural.——Ver. 40. Went yearly to lament the daughter of Jephthah.—The word translated "to lament," signifies also "to praise, celebrate, or talk with." An attention very natural in her young companions, and consolatory to the unhappy recluse, debarred from the hope of every Israelitess, that of being "a mother in Israel," and probably the mother of Messiah. In conclusion. Jephthah is celebrated by Paul as an example of faith, (Heb. 11. 32.) which we judge impossible, had he been guilty of an act, whatever might be the motive, still worse than that of Cain, and which would have identified his religion with the worst feature of the idolatry of Canaan.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 14. That rode on threescore and ten ass colts.—This circumstance is mentioned as the most intelligible historical evidence of the fulfilment of the promises of God, and mark of the peace and prosperity of the land, so long as the people continued faithful to his covenant.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 23. Have told us such things as these.—To argue from the past to the future, is one of the soundest principles of piety. The believer "calls to remembrance his song in the night;" "he remembers the days of old;" especially he argues that, "if God spared not his own Son, but freely gave him up to the death for us all, how much more will he also with him, freely give us all things." So argued the wife of Manoah, one of the most perfect specimens of good understanding and solid piety, that the Scriptures anywhere record.——Ver. 25. The Spirit of the Lord began to move him at times.—Many changes take place between childhood and youth; still the child is, generally, the miniature of the future man, in character as much as in body. Parental partiality is not, indeed, either the most impartial or most accurate judge; but if a community notice any extraordinary endowments of a child, they seldom fail to be developed in the man. These extraordinary qualifications may, or may not, be indicated by bodily form; but their origin the Scriptures ascribe not to matter, organization, and form, but to the Spirit of the living God. See note on chap. 11. 29.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 4. Sought an occasion against the Philistines.—God overrules, what men desire wrong and do wrong, as well as what they desire right and do right. By the envy of Joseph's brethren, which envy he condemned, he yet sent Joseph to Egypt to preserve the life of his father and brethren. So now, by the imprudent, though not unlawful, marriage of Samson, "he seeks occasion against the Philistines," to punish them by their unnatural quarrels with their adopted relatives. ——Ver. 19. The Spirit of the Lord came upon him.—The Spirit of the Lord presented before him the lawless wrongs to which his country was subjected, and, endowing him with supernatural strength and courage, sent him down to punish robbers, murderers, and manstealers.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 4. Samson went and caught three hundred foxes.—The species of fox here meant, is admitted upon all hands to be the jackal, of which Volney, the enemy of all Scripture, admits from his own observation, that "they are concealed by hundreds in the gardens, and among ruins and tombs." There could therefore be little difficulty, by aid of a few friends and nets, in taking the three hundred which Samson employed.——Ver. 5. When he had set the brands on fire.—We are neither informed what material Samson employed to fasten the foxes, nor its length, nor what species of combustible was used; objections arising from particular suppositions, are, therefore, no more than suppositions. The question is, was the matter practicable? And any one who considers that statement in the former note, as to the multitudes of foxes, and the facilities of obtaining them—who considers the habits of the animals, and the state of the country, and who would but exercise a little ingenuity, will find no difficulty in devising means for the execution of Samson's plan. It is specially to be remembered, that it is not said, that Samson let them all loose from one point, or that it was all effected in one night.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1. Gaza, 62 miles south-west of Jerusalem. It must have been very ancient, as it is mentioned Gen. 10. 19. It was taken shortly after the death of Joshua, (Judg. 1. 18.) but must have been soon recovered by the Philistines. It subsequently became a place of great strength, and stood a siege of three months, against Alexander the Great. It is at present inhabited by Turks and Arabs, and contains about 3,000 inhabitants.——Ver. 3. Samson lay till midnight.—While infidels delight to point to the failings and sins recorded of God's servants, and to deduce from them an argument against the Bible, the believer, with all propriety, adduces from the record of them an irresistible argument on behalf of the Bible. The Bible is the only book that ever recorded the faults and sins of those who may be called its heroes. Were the lives of infidels as faithfully recorded, they would perhaps be slower in bringing railing accusations. The conduct of Samson is a sad disgrace to a Nazarite, and a Judge,—a melancholy example of the weakness of human nature, and the power of sin.——Ver. 22. The hair of his head began to grow.—There is reason to think that Samson's discovery that the Lord had sensibly departed from him, was the beginning of his repentant return to God, and that thus with the growing of his hair, he felt his supernatural powers returning.——Ver. 23. Dagon their god.—The common opinion is that Dagon, which signifies a fish, or corn, is described by Diodorus Siculus, as a woman's head and body, terminating in a fish, somewhat resembling the imaginary European figure of the mermaid.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 5. Ephod and teraphim.—"Ephod," the principal part of the priest's dress, and particularly remarkable for having engraved on precious stones, the names of the tribes, (Ex. 23. 4—6, &c.,) an emblem of the communion of saints, and the preciousness of God's people to the heart of the great High Priest. "Teraphim." The word signifies images, but of what form is not precisely known; see note on ch. 18. 14.——Ver. 6. In those days there was no king in Israel.—The time is not precisely known, farther than that it was after the days of Joshua, and most probably soon after the death of Joshua; for Phinehas, the grandson of Aaron, was still alive, see ch. 20. 28. This and the following chapters, may therefore be considered as an Appendix to the Memoirs of the Judges.——Ver. 7. A young man out of Beth-lehem-judah, of the family of Judah, who was a Levite.—His father may have been of Levi, his mother of Judah, or this "Beth-lehem-judah" may have belonged to the particular division of the tribe of Judah, which bore the family name of Judah; for each tribe was divided into distinct families.——Ver. 13. The Lord will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest.—Micah was a worldly, superstitious, ignorant man—the proper elements of an idolater. Worldly; for he stole his mother's silver; superstitious; for he gave it back, not from a moral feeling of honesty, but dread of a curse; ignorant; for he is led by the name of a Levite, without any reference to the law of God, as to the priestly family, or place of worship.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 30. Until the day of the captivity of the land.—Many eminent expositors, by a slight change on a Hebrew word, read "captivity of the ark," a related 1 Sam. 4. 5. But, without sufficient MS. authority, we judge it worse than unadvisable to suggest or sanction such changes.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1. It came to pass in those days when there was no king in Israel.—That is, during some of the periods between the death of one judge and the election of another. During these times, however, the country was not altogether without local governments, exercised by the heads of families, and territorial princes of the congregation, (Josh. 9. 18.) but the want of a strong general government, permitted such popular outrages against strangers, who had no local friends, as the shocking narrative in this chapter records.——Ver. 2. His concubine played the whore against him.—The translation probably charges the unhappy woman with more guilt than she had really incurred. Josephus and other authorities, conceive she had merely separated from her husband. Had her guilt been greater, when eastern manners are considered, it is not probable her father would have received her into his house.——Ver. 29. He took a knife, and laid hold on his concubine, and divided her.—This is a most frightful narrative, and while it awakens thoughts of horror, should equally awaken thoughts of thankfulness for the civilizing power of Christianity, and efficient protection of well-ordered government. The Levite, no doubt, sent a circumstantial account of the wicked conduct of the Gibeonites; and the spectacle of the fragments of the murdered woman was calculated to rouse the tribes to ample vengeance. The practice continued in Israel, but the victim was a bullock, (1 Sam. 7. 11.) and, from Lucian we learn that the Scythians and Molossians had a similar custom. The Crean Tarigh, a cross seared in fire and quenched with blood, in which the Highland chieftains of Scotland were wont to summon their clans to battle, seems to have originated in similar ideas.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1. Mizpeh.—This Mizpeh originally belonged to Judah, but seems to have been afterwards ceded to Benjamin, Josh. 15. 38. & 18. 26. It was situate in a plain, about eighteen miles south-west of Jerusalem; and seems to have been therefore chosen as the rendezvous of the eleven tribes. Some infidels have mocked at the idea of so small a place containing so many soldiers. But it is certain they never could have measured the space on which they could be mustered, else this objection never had been started. Besides it is not said they assembled in the town, but in Mizpeh, which, as often happens, might be the name of a district as well as of a town. In these countries a name is often common to a city, and a whole country. ——Ver. 21. Destroyed down to the ground of the Israelites that day twenty and two thousand men.—As objections to Scripture history have frequently arisen from the numbers of the Israelites coming out of Egypt, or subsequently engaging or falling in battle; an answer has been attempted, by showing that some eastern nations placed the units first, and thence advanced in their numeration. This mode of numeration would make the number killed at Gibeah 2,020, instead of 22,000, but the 18,000 in ver. 25, silences at once these vain attempts to evade and conciliate, rather than to reply to infidelity. The proper reply is the character of the historians, and the internal and external evidences which demonstrate the divine origin of the history.—Note. It is worthy of remark, as another, and a just reply to infidel objectors, that it is not said, either in ver. 21, or 25, that so many Israelites were slain, but "destroyed down to the ground," put, as in modern phrase, hors de combat.——Ver. 48. They set on fire all the cities that they came to.—Alas, for Israel! alas, for Benjamin! Rather alas, for the kindred tribes, Christ's churches! Had Israel and Benjamin but united and fought against the Philistines with half the determination, and half the courage, and half the zeal, with which they fought, almost to extermination, against one another, how much happier had been their lot, how much more glorious their history!

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 4. Offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings.—The transition from a peace-offering to another act of extermination, seems an almost incredible contradiction. But the history of human nature furnishes many instances of not merely making professed religious services the prelude to cruelty, but of actually commingling them together. The history of the Crusades against the Waldenses, affords an example of the one, and the auto da fes of the Spanish inquisition, afford an example of the other—the massacre of St Bartholomew, in some degree exceeds both; for the massacre of the sleeping and unoffending Huguenots was celebrated at Rome by a solemn Te Deum.

R U T H

Is another appendix to the history of the Judges; calculated to represent the marvellous providence of God, the propriety of constant dependence thereon; and to show the happy issue of patience, humility, and industry. It was probably penned by Samuel, and relates to events which happened about the time of Ehud or Barak, Judg. iii, or iv.; particularly the afflictions of Naomi and Ruth, ch. i.; their industry and humility, ii.; their alliance with Boaz, iii.; and happy settlement by means thereof; iv.

CHAPTER I.

(1) Naomi, forced by a famine from Beth-lehem-judah into the land of Moab: 1, 2. (2) As a widow, bewailing the death of Elimelech her husband, and of Mahlon and Chilion her sons: 3—5. (3) As a mother-in-law, returning to her own country; parting, in sorrow, with Orpah, one of her daughters-in-law; and reluctantly taking Ruth the other, along with her: 6—18. (4) As a poor destitute woman, remitted by providence to her former abode, a spectacle of wretchedness, to live on the bounty of her friends: 19—22.

NOW it came to pass, [a] in the days when the judges [b] ruled, that there [c] was a famine in the land: and a certain man of Beth-lehem-judah went to [d] sojourn in the country of Moab, he, and his wife, and his two sons.

2 And the name of the man was Elimelech, and the name of his wife Naomi, and the name of his two sons Mahlon and Chilion, [e] Ephrathites of Beth-lehem-judah: and they came into the country of Moab, and [f] continued there.

3 And [g] Elimelech, Naomi's husband, died; and she was left, and her two sons.

4 And they [h] took them wives of the women of Moab; [‡] the name of the one was [i] Orpah, and the name of the other [k] Ruth: and they dwelled there about ten years.

5 And [l] Mahlon and Chilion died also both of them; and the woman was left of her two sons and her husband.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Numerous and diversified are the arrows in God's quiver for the punishment of men's sins: and often, while his enemies riot in plenty, his people are pinched with scarcity and want. A diligent care to provide for our family is highly commendable: but it is seldom safe to flee from God's land, though he frown on it; or to suffer scarcity of bread to draw us from the ordinances of God. It is not in fleeing from God's mighty hand, but in humbling ourselves under it, that safety lies. It is not in outrunning crosses, but in taking them up, and following Christ, that true comfort is to be had. Young people often mistake in their marriage, through want or neglect of their parent's advice. But marriages and deaths are near neighbours; and one death in a family way; for I am [u] too old to have an husband. If I should say, I have hope, [*] if I should have an husband also to-night, and should also bear sons;

13 Would ye [†] tarry for them till they were grown? would ye stay for them from having husbands? nay, my daughters: for [‡] it grieveth me much for your sakes, [§] [x] that the hand of the LORD is gone out against me.

14 And they lifted up their voice, and wept again: and Orpah [y] kissed her mother-in-law; but Ruth [z] clave unto her.

15 And she said, Behold, thy sister-in-law is gone back unto her people, and unto her gods: [a] return thou after thy sister-in-law.

16 And Ruth said, [‖] [b] Entreat me not to leave thee,[*] or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.

17 Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: [c] the LORD do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me.

18 When she saw that she [†] was stedfastly minded to go with her, [d] then she left speaking unto her.

19 ¶ So they two went until they came to Beth-lehem. And it came to pass, when they were come to Beth-lehem, that all the city was moved about them;[‡] and they said, [f] Is this Naomi?

20 And she said unto them, Call me not [§] Naomi, call me [‖] Mara: for the Almighty hath [g] dealt very bitterly with me.

21 I went out full, and the LORD hath brought me home again empty: why then call ye me Naomi, seeing the LORD hath [h] testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?

22 So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter-in-law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab: and [i] they came to Beth-lehem in the beginning of barley harvest.

CHAPTER II.

(1) Of Ruth's humility, industry, regard to Naomi her mother-in-law, and dependence on, and direction by, the providence of God: 2, 3. (2) Of Boaz's wealth; his pious courtesy to his reapers; his particular care about Ruth, and her humble and respectful carriage towards him: 1, 4—16. (3) Of Ruth's return home with her gleanings to Naomi, and report of what had befallen her: 17—28.

AND Naomi had a [a] kinsman of her husband's, a mighty man of wealth, of the family of Elimelech; and his name was Boaz.

2 And Ruth the Moabitess said unto Naomi, Let me now go to the field, and [b] glean ears of corn after him in whose sight I shall find grace.[*] And she said unto her, Go, my daughter.

3 And she went, and came and gleaned in the field after the reapers: and her [c] hap was to light on a part of the field[†] belonging unto Boaz, who was of the kindred of Elimelech.

4 ¶ And, behold, Boaz came from Beth-lehem, and said unto the reapers, [d] The LORD be with you. And they answered him, The LORD bless thee.[‡]

5 [e] Then said Boaz unto his servant that was set over the reapers, [§] Whose damsel is this?

6 And the servant that was [e] set over the reapers answered and said, It is [f] the Moabitish damsel that came back with Naomi out of the country of Moab.

7 And she said, [g] I pray you,[‖] let me glean and gather after the reapers among the sheaves: so she came, and hath [h] continued even from the morning until now, that she tarried a little in the house.[*]

8 Then said Boaz unto Ruth, Hearest thou not, [i] my daughter? [k] Go not to glean in another field, neither go from hence, but abide here fast by my maidens.[†]

9 Let thine eyes be on the field that they do reap, and go thou after them: have I not charged the young men that they shall [l] not touch thee? and when thou art athirst, [m] go unto the vessels, and drink of that which the young men have drawn.

10 Then [n] she fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou shouldest take knowledge of me, seeing I am a stranger?

11 And Boaz answered and said unto her, [o] It hath fully been showed me all that thou hast done unto thy mother-in-law since the death of thine husband; and how thou hast left thy father and thy mother,[‡] and the land of thy nativity, and art come unto a people which thou knewest not heretofore.

12 The LORD [p] recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the LORD God of Israel, under whose [q] wings thou art come to trust.

13 Then she said, [§] Let me [r] find favour in thy sight, my lord; for that thou hast comforted me, and for that thou hast spoken [‖] friendly is but the forerunner and warning of another. Both comforts and crosses are often nearer us than we suspect; and, if we are shut up into the society of the wicked, we should escape for our life as soon as our hinderances are removed. It is a mercy when God imbitters our condition of distance from himself, that we may be weaned from it, and hastened to our heavenly home; but yet it is pleasant to see near relations knit together in love, and loath to part. With the most strong and fixed resolution should we set out in the Lord's way, as we know not what repeated and strong temptations we may have to turn back: but the difficulties of the way, which discourage the temporary believer, will but bind the faithful soul the more closely to Jesus Christ. Nothing, no, not death, can separate them from him and his people. Poverty and age make great alterations on mankind: and it is proper that all around should remark it with solemn awe and cordial sympathy; for surely it is but madness to set our heart on that comeliness and wealth which so quickly fade. Let us therefore keep waiting on God in the way of his judgments; in patience possessing our souls; eyeing the Lord's hand in all that we meet with; humbling ourselves under humbling providences; mourning, but never murmuring under his hand; and ever remarking how the minutest circumstances of our lives are directed by the over-ruling providence of God.

unto thine handmaid, though I be [s] not like unto one of thine handmaidens.

14 And Boaz said unto her, [t] At meal-time come thou hither, and eat of the bread, and dip thy morsel in the vinegar. And she sat beside the reapers: and he reached her [u] parched corn,* and she [x] did eat, and was sufficed, and left.

15 And when she was risen up to glean, Boaz commanded his young men, saying, Let her glean even among the sheaves, and [†] reproach her not:[‡]

16 And [y] let fall also some of the handfuls of purpose for her, and leave them, that she may glean them, and rebuke her not.

17 So she [z] gleaned in the field until even, and beat out that she had gleaned; and it was about an [a] ephah of barley.

18 ¶ And she took it up, and went into the city; and her mother-in-law saw what she had gleaned: and she brought forth, and gave to her [b] that she had reserved after she was sufficed.

19 And her mother-in-law said unto her, Where hast thou gleaned to-day? and where wroughtest thou? Blessed be he that did take knowledge of thee. And she showed her mother-in-law with whom she had wrought, and said, The man's name with whom I wrought to-day is Boaz.

20 And Naomi [c] said unto her daughter-in-law, Blessed be he of the LORD, who hath not left off his kindness to [§] the living and to the dead. And Naomi said unto her, The man is near of kin unto us, [d] one of our next kinsmen.

21 And Ruth the Moabitess said, [e] He said unto me also, Thou shalt keep fast by my young men,[‖] until they have ended all my harvest.

For though gleaning was amply provided for by the Mosaic law, it would appear to have commenced, not during the reaping time but after. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—How infinite is the condescension of God in taking notice of a poor Moabitish gleaner! Let me then never be proud; for I know not to what straits I may be reduced in life; and never let me be ashamed of honest industry. If the Lord debase me, it is my honour to concur with his providence, and to be content with the least and coarsest crumbs from his hand. In caring for my poor or aged friends, let me with diligence depend upon his kindness, and thank him for every circumstance thereof. Whether I am master or servant, let a savour of Christ and religion always attend me; and the law of kindness be in both heart and mouth. If I am a stranger, let me be always humble, mannerly, and thankful. If I am not, let me show kindness to strangers, especially to those who are such from a love to Christ. Who knows how they may bless, or even reward me? For the poorest, by their earnest prayers, may return the richest rewards to the most wealthy. The more highly others think of me, let me think the more humbly of myself: and let me always regard my benefactors, and with the utmost care make choice of my companions. A modest, humble, and respectful behaviour, accompanied with a tender regard to parents in age and poverty, is commendable even in the meanest. And, when we go out in the way of duty, depending on God, who knows with what rich blessings we may return loaded? Happy is that family where parents and children mutually vie in deep concern for one another's real welfare. And comfortably may even the poorest live together, if they have but godliness, with contentment, which is great gain.

THEN went Boaz up [a] to the gate,* and sat him down there: and, behold, the kinsman of whom Boaz spake [b] came by; unto whom he said, Ho, such a one! turn aside, sit down here. And he turned aside, and sat down.

2 And he took [c] ten men of the elders of the city, and said, Sit ye down here. And they [d] sat down.

3 And he [e] said unto the kinsman, Naomi, that is come again out of the country of Moab, selleth a parcel of land, which was our brother Elimelech's:

4 And [†] I thought to advertise thee, saying, [f] Buy it before the inhabitants, and before the elders of my people. And he said, I will [g] redeem it.

5 Then said Boaz, What day thou buyest the field of the hand of Naomi, [h] thou must buy it also of Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance.

6 ¶ And the kinsman said, I cannot redeem it for myself, [i] lest I mar mine own inheritance: [‡] redeem thou my right to thyself; for I cannot redeem it.

7 [k] Now this was the manner in former time in Israel, concerning redeeming, and concerning changing, for to confirm all things; a man [*] plucked off his shoe, and gave it to his neighbour: and this was a testimony in Israel.

8 Therefore the kinsman said unto Boaz, [l] Buy it for thee: so he drew off his shoe. [†]

9 ¶ And Boaz said unto the elders, and unto all the people, Ye are [m] witnesses this day, that I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi.

10 Moreover, [n] Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of Mahlon, have I purchased to be my wife, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance, that [o] the name of the dead be not cut off from among his brethren, and from the gate of his place: [‡] ye are witnesses this day.

11 And all the people that were in the gate, and the elders, said, We are witnesses. [p] The LORD make the woman that is come into thine house like [q] Rachel and like Leah, which two did build the house of Israel; and [§] do thou worthily in Ephratah, and [‖] be famous in Bethlehem:

12 And let thy house be like [r] the house of Pharez, [s] (whom Tamar bare unto Judah,) of the seed which the LORD shall give thee of this young woman.

13 ¶ So Boaz [t] took Ruth,* and she was his wife: and when he went in unto her, [u] the LORD gave her conception, and she bare a son.

14 And the [x] women said unto Naomi, Blessed be the LORD, which hath not left thee this day without a kinsman, that his name may be famous in Israel.

15 And he shall be unto thee a [y] restorer of thy life, and [z] a nourisher of thine old age: for thy daughter-in-law, which loveth thee, which [a] is better to thee than seven sons, hath born him.

16 And Naomi took the child, and laid it in her bosom, and became [b] nurse unto it.

17 And the women her neighbours [c] gave it a name, saying, There is a son born to Naomi; and they called his name [d] Obed: [†] he is the father of Jesse, the father of David.

18 ¶ Now these are the generations of Pharez: [e] Pharez begat Hezron,

19 And Hezron begat Ram, and Ram begat Amminadab,

20 And Amminadab begat Nahshon, and Nahshon begat [f] Salmon,

21 And Salmon begat Boaz, and Boaz begat Obed,

22 And [g] Obed begat Jesse, and Jesse begat David.

‡ The genealogy, however, never gives the name of Mahlon. But this is to be accounted for in two ways. (3) Because the retention of the name of Boaz gives a second evidence of the Moabitish origin of Ruth, who, as a Gentile engrafted into the genealogy of our Lord, exemplifies the calling of the Gentiles into the fellowship of the covenant of promise.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—It is often safest for young widows to marry. And it is the duty of parents to promote the settlement of their children in a comfortable marriage: for it is no small mercy when the married state fixes the affections at a rest, in which it is well with the parties. Dress and cleanliness are commendable, so far as they are calculated to engage proper affections. But in courtship and marriage there ought always to be a strict attention to the commands of God. It is not enough that we do no evil;—we must indulge ourselves in no appearance of it. But what an advantage is it when we have to do with such as have the deepest regard to our chastity and honour; who are disposed to think no evil, but to interpret our innocent familiarities in the best sense; and who, in matters of importance, will certainly be faithful and diligent! Yes, hopeful is the match which is made up in dependance on God, and regard to the authority of parents. But we cannot be too ready to start at temptations, which steal softly upon us; nor too careful to remove every occasion from the envenomed tongue of slander. What is liable to be misinterpreted had best never be known. And, when we circumspectly proceed in the way of our duty, we may comfort our minds in the hope of God's salvation in due time.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—It is pleasant indeed to behold a man diligent in business, and the providence of God succeeding his endeavours;—to see in marriage the principal regard paid to the holiness and virtue of the partner, not to beauty or wealth; to see persons of honest intentions risking the most strict and public cognizance;—to see the professed followers of Christ using the most fair and open dealing in all their agreements;—to see affectionate lovers depending wholly on God to make them comfortable to one another;—to see humility, virtue, prudence, and honesty, issuing in remarkable honour and happiness;—to see God raising up the poor, and causing them to sit with princes; and making up the loss of those relations, from whom they expected much comfort, in the enjoyment of those from whom they expected nothing;—to see neighbours rejoicing in one another's welfare;—and to see the providences of God, in every circumstance, leading and directing us to Jesus, David's Lord. But, in fine, in Boaz the Beth-lemite I discern Jesus our Kinsman-redeemer, who remembered us in our low estate;—pitying our poor and miserable condition, and moved, not indeed by any respectful behaviour in us, but his own infinite compassion, he hath allowed us, sinners of the Gentiles, to glean in the field of his oracles and ordinances. For our encouragement, he hath appointed handfuls of precious promises, and offers of grace and salvation, for our use. At infinite expense, and with infinite care and equity, he hath espoused our race, and raised up a seed of servants to God. Let us, conscious of our poverty, and affected with his kindness, return him the most humble and thankful acknowledgments.—Let us glean for our souls only in his field.—Let us abide by his maidens, the faithful ministers of his word.—Let us approach his throne of grace in the full assurance of faith, pleading that he, as our nearest Kinsman, would spread his robes of righteousness, and garments of salvation, over our naked souls. And let us commit our way to him: he will bring it to pass, and perfect that which concerns us.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE BOOK OF RUTH.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. In the days when the judges ruled.—The date of the events in this book, it is impossible to fix with any certainty, farther than that it was between the days of Joshua and Saul. It is evident, however, either that two, or more judges ruled contemporaneously, or that the emigration of Naomi took place under one judge, and her return under another. But as the book relates to the time of Boaz, whose descendants were allied to Jesse and David; and as Nahshon, their ancestor, was contemporary with Moses, and his son Salmon the father of Boaz, the date must be some time in the first half of the government of the judges.——A famine in the land.—No one that reads the history of the times of Gideon, Judg. 6. 4, 6, 11. can wonder at the occurrence of famine. But while men clearly discover the secondary causes of want—a weak and unsettled government, and the cruel oppression of invaders—let them not overlook the other causes, the sins of an ungrateful people, and the judgments of an offended God.——Ver. 5. Left of her two sons and her husband.—A woman bereft of the husband of her youth, and her two manly sons, and with two unprovided and fatherless daughters-in-law, (ver. 8.) presents a melancholy picture of human life. But, like the shorn lamb, the less protected from the storm, the more sensibly does she illustrate the government of Providence, and the triumphs of natural affection, matronly prudence, and religious principle, Jer. 49. 11.——Ver. 15. Return thou after thy sister-in-law.—Naomi has been blamed for attempting to send her daughters back to an idolatrous land, instead of bringing them with her to Canaan; but her accusers do not reflect how Israel, at this time, was probably as idolatrous as Moab, as undoubtedly it was during much of the time of the judges. Besides, in the lips of Naomi, an evident believer in Jehovah, the word Elohim, translated Gods, does not necessarily convey any recognition of polytheism.—Note. The words of God's people should be judged, not by any meaning they will bear, or that may be forced upon them, but by the meaning that coincides with their acknowledged faith and character.——Ver. 17. The Lord do so to me, and more also.—That is, let the Lord smite me with death;—and more also, that is, with the judgment to follow, if I prove false to this engagement.——Ver. 21. The Almighty hath afflicted me.—This reference of her affliction to the hand of God, contains no murmuring or repining, but the spirit of humble resignation to His sovereign will. She even admits she deserved her affliction, and that it was a witness from God against her.—Note. Nothing so effectually lightens affliction as pious resignation to the will of God. But, wo unto him that striveth with his Maker! Is. 45. 9.

CHAP. II. Ver. 12. The Lord God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust.—This is not a metaphor, but a literal statement. The wings referred to are the wings of the cherubim shadowing the mercy-seat.——Ver. 14. Dip thy morsel in the vinegar.—A sauce prepared from vinegar in which bread is dipped, is still a common food in the East, and, in conjunction with olives, is highly relished by a people not habituated to luxury.

CHAP. III. Ver. 4. Uncover his feet, and lay thee down.—This is the ordinary mode in which servants still sleep in many parts of the East, lying in a direction across their masters' feet. This translation is not to be construed by European customs or sentiments, but by the customs of the time and place, by the religious and benevolent character of Boaz, and the innocence and purity of Naomi and Ruth.——Ver. 7. His heart was merry.—There is a striking connexion between piety, benevolence, a pure conscience, and cheerfulness, or even well-regulated mirth. We have heard the laughter of fools, and men think it joyful; but this we have also felt, that the more godly men become, the more cheerful and happy they become.—Note. It is a debt that religious men owe to the world, to convince them, by the mildness, meekness, and cheerfulness of their demeanour, that religion is neither austere nor melancholy, while yet it is staid and serious.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 5. Thou must buy it also of Ruth the Moabitess.—If the kinsman should buy the land from Ruth, it is not very apparent how it could follow from the purchase that he was to take Ruth to wife. Kennicot and others, on the authority of some very valuable MSS. render the passage, "Thou shalt also obtain Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead;" and this, at all events, is the sense of the passage.——Ver. 9. I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi.—The property of the sons had reverted to the mother in point of fact, or its reverting may have been admitted in point of law, because any right derived through Ruth, might have been afterwards questioned, and difficult to establish. The right of Naomi, passing, however, under the silence, or with the consent of Ruth, could not be questioned or disturbed.

THE FIRST BOOK

S A M U E L.

THIS book and the following are denominated from the prophet SAMUEL, perhaps, because he wrote the first twenty-four chapters of this; at least, from his being the subject of much of it; and whatever relates to David, the subject of the other, is but the issue of his unction to the kingdom by Samuel. This book contains the history of at least eighty years; and exhibits an account (1) Of Eli's negligence, and the wickedness of his sons; with the terrible calamities occasioned by these to the Israelites; and even to the Philistines, who took captive the ark; ii—vi. (2) Of Samuel's birth; education; call to be a prophet; deliverance and government of Israel; resignation of his government; and death; i, ii, iii, vii—xii, xiii, xv, xvi, xix, xxv. (3) Of the Israelites' resolute demand of a king; and the instalment, prosperity, mal-administration, and unhappy end of Saul; viii—xxvi, xxviii, xxxi. (4) Of the unction of David to be king; his diverting of Saul when melancholy, with his music; his conquest of Goliath; his friendship with Jonathan; persecution by Saul; marriage with Michal the daughter of Saul, and with Abigail the widow of Nabal; his retreat into the land of the Philistines; discharge from their army; and his slaughter of the Amalekites who had burned Ziklag; xvi—xxvii, xxix, xxx.

CHAPTER I.

(1) The affliction of Hannah through want of children; aggravated by the reproaches of Peninnah, Elkanah's other wife; mitigated by his kindness: 1—8. (2) Her fervent prayer and vow to God under her trouble: 9—18. (3) Her bearing and nursing of Samuel: 19—23. (4) Her presenting of him to the Lord: 24—28.

NOW, there was a certain man of Rama-thaim-zophim, of [a] mount Ephraim, and his name was [b] Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, the son of Elihu, the son of Tohu, the son of Zuph, an Ephrathite.

2 And he had [c] two wives; the name of the one was Hannah, and the name of the other Peninnah: and Peninnah had children, but Hannah had no children.

3 And this man went up out of his city [*d] yearly, [†] to worship and to sacrifice unto the LORD of hosts [e] in Shiloh: [‡] and the [f] two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, the priests of the LORD, were there.

4 ¶ And when the time was that Elkanah offered, he gave to Peninnah his wife, and to all her sons and her daughters, [§] portions. [§]

5 But unto Hannah he gave [h] a worthy [‖] portion; [i] for he loved Hannah: but the LORD had shut up her womb.

6 And her [k] adversary also provoked her sore, for to make her fret, because the LORD had shut up her womb.

7 And as [l] he did so year by year, [*†] when she went up to the house of the LORD, so she provoked her; therefore she wept, and did not eat.

8 Then said Elkanah her husband to her, Hannah, [m] why weepest thou? and why eatest thou not? and why is thy heart grieved? am not I [n] better to thee than ten sons?

9 ¶ So Hannah rose up after they had eaten in Shiloh, and after they had drunk: (now Eli the priest sat upon a seat by a post of [o] the temple of the LORD:)

10 And she was [‡p] in bitterness of soul, and prayed unto the LORD, and wept sore.

11 And she [q] vowed a vow, and said, O LORD of hosts, if thou wilt indeed look on the affliction of thine handmaid, and remember me, and not forget thine handmaid, but wilt give unto thine handmaid a [§] man-child, then I will give him unto the LORD all the days of his life, and [r] there shall no razor come upon his head.

12 And it came to pass, as she [‖s] continued praying before the LORD, that Eli marked her mouth.

13 Now Hannah, she [t] spake in her heart; only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard: therefore Eli [u] thought she had been drunken.

14 And Eli said unto her, [x] How long wilt thou be drunken? put away thy wine from thee.

15 And Hannah answered and said, [y] No, my lord; I am a woman [*] of a sorrowful spirit: I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink, but have [z] poured out my soul before the LORD.

16 Count not thine handmaid [a] for a daughter of Belial: for [b] out of the abundance of my [*] complaint and grief have I spoken hitherto.

17 Then Eli answered and said, [c] Go in peace: and the God of Israel grant thee thy petition that thou hast asked of him.

18 And she said, [d] Let thine handmaid find grace in thy sight. So the woman went her way, and did eat, and her [e] countenance was no more sad. [†]

19 ¶ And they rose up in the morning [f] early, and worshipped before the LORD, and returned, and came to their house to Ramah: and Elkanah knew Hannah his wife; and the LORD [g] remembered her.

20 Wherefore it came to pass, [‡] when the time was come about, after Hannah had conceived, that she bare a son, [§] and called his name [‖] Samuel, saying, Because I have asked him of the LORD.

21 And [h] the man Elkanah, and all his house, went up to offer unto the LORD the yearly sacrifice, and his vow.

22 [i] But Hannah went not up; [*] for she said unto her husband, I will not go up until the child be weaned, and then I will bring him, that he may appear before the LORD, and there [k] abide for ever.

23 And Elkanah her husband said unto her, Do what seemeth thee good; tarry until thou have weaned him: only the LORD [l] establish his word. [†] So the woman abode, and [m] gave her son suck, until she weaned him.

24 ¶ And when she had weaned him, she [n] took him up with her, with three bullocks, [‡] and one ephah of flour, and a bottle of wine, [§] and brought him unto the house of the LORD in Shiloh: [‖] and the child was young.

25 And they slew a bullock, and brought the child to Eli.

26 And she said, Oh my lord! [o] as thy soul liveth, my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the LORD.

27 [p] For this child I prayed; and the LORD hath given me my petition which I asked of him:

28 Therefore also I have [*†] lent him to the LORD; as long as he liveth he shall be lent to the LORD. And [q] he worshipped the LORD there. [‡]

‡ From ch 2. 11, it appears the child was of sufficient age to aid Eli in the service. Hence we may conclude that the person who worshipped the Lord, (ver. 28.) was Samuel. The worship of a child! How beautiful! He knew the Scriptures from childhood, and they had made him wise unto salvation.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—A divided family is most unhappy: and they bring upon themselves redoubled trouble and vexation, who dare transgress God's institution of marriage in order to obtain redoubled pleasures. Rarely do we behave aright under either remarkable prosperity or remarkable adversity: under the former, the heart swells with pride; under the latter, it sinks and rends with discontent and murmuring. The fretfulness of our temper often lays us open to continual uneasiness: and the unthankfulness of our heart doubles our affliction by overlooking our mercies. But sinful and hurtful is that grief which diverts us from our duty to God, and imbitters the comfort which we have in him. Our most deserved crosses are abundantly mixed with undeserved mercies; and religion and reason will afford us a cure. Distress ought to make us double our diligence in attending on the ordinances of God. Fervent prayers and solemn vows are often means of relief to broken spirits: yea, it is peculiarly becoming under sore trials, and amidst general apostasy and profaneness, to be punctual and earnest attenders on the ordinances of God. But base and devilish must that spirit be which can take pleasure to vex the distressed in mind, even when they are attending upon God's solemn worship. It is more becoming to balance others' abuse with our tender affection, and do all that we can to comfort those who are cast down. For peculiarly afflicting is it to perplexed souls, to have the godly, and even ministers, misinterpreting their wrestlings with God as hypocrisy and wickedness. Yet,

AND Hannah [a] prayed, and said, My heart rejoiceth in the LORD; [b] mine horn is exalted in the LORD; my [c] mouth is enlarged over mine enemies; because I [d] rejoice in thy salvation.

2 [e] There is none holy as the LORD: for there is none besides thee; neither is there any rock like our God.

3 [f] Talk no more so exceeding proudly; let not arrogancy come out of your mouth: for the LORD is [g] a God of knowledge, and by him actions are weighed.

4 The [h] bows of the mighty men are broken, and they that stumbled are girded with strength.

5 They [i] that were full have hired out themselves for bread; and they that were hungry ceased: so that the [k] barren hath born seven; and [l] she that hath many children is waxed feeble.

6 [m] The LORD killeth, and maketh alive: [n] he bringeth down to the grave, and bringeth up.

7 The LORD [o] maketh poor, and maketh rich: he bringeth low, and lifteth up.*

8 [p] He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory: for the [q] pillars of the earth are the LORD's, and he hath set the world upon them.†

9 He [r] will keep the feet of his saints, and the wicked shall be [s] silent in darkness; for [t] by strength shall no man prevail.

10 [u] The adversaries of the LORD shall be broken to pieces; out of heaven shall he thunder upon them: the LORD [x] shall judge the ends of the earth; and he shall [y] give strength unto his king, and exalt the horn of his anointed.‡

11 And Elkanah went to Ramah to his house; and the child did [z] minister unto the LORD before Eli the priest.

12 ¶ Now [a] the sons of Eli were sons of Belial; they knew not the LORD.§

13 And the priest's custom with the people was, that when any man offered sacrifice, the priest's servant came, while the flesh was in seething, with a flesh-hook of three teeth in his hand;

A. M. 2879, or 2839. B. C. 1125, or 1165.

14 And he struck it into the pan, or kettle, or caldron, or pot; [b] all that the flesh-hook brought up the priest took for himself. So they did in Shiloh unto all the Israelites that came thither.

15 Also, before [c] they burnt the fat, the priest's servant came, and said to the man that sacrificed, Give flesh to roast for the priest; for he will not have sodden flesh of thee, but raw.

16 And if any man said unto him, Let them not fail to burn the fat * presently, and then take as much as thy soul desireth; then he would answer him, Nay; but thou shalt give it me now: and if not, I will take it by force.†

17 Wherefore the sin of the young men was [d] very great before the LORD; for men abhorred the offering of the LORD.

18 ¶ But Samuel * ministered before the LORD, being a child, girded with a linen ephod.

19 Moreover, his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him [f] from year to year, when she came up with her husband to offer the yearly sacrifice.

20 ¶ And Eli [g] blessed Elkanah and his wife, and said, The LORD give thee seed of this woman for the ‡ loan which is lent to the LORD. And they went unto their own home.

21 And the LORD [h] visited Hannah, so that she conceived, and [i] bare three sons and two daughters. And the child Samuel [k] grew before the LORD.§

22 ¶ Now Eli [l] was very old, and heard all that his sons [m] did unto all Israel; and how they lay with the women that [n] assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

23 And he said unto them, [o] Why do ye such things? for [p] I hear of your evil dealings by all this people.

24 Nay, my sons: for it is [q] no good report that I hear; ye make the LORD's people * to transgress.†

25 If [r] one man sin against another, the judge shall judge him: but [s] if a man sin against the LORD, who shall entreat for him? Notwithstanding they [t] hearkened not unto the voice of their father, because ‡ the LORD would slay them.

26 And the child Samuel [u] grew on, and was in favour both with the LORD, and also with men.§

27 ¶ And there came [x] a man of God unto Eli,‖ and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, [y] Did I plainly appear unto the house of thy however distressing, injurious reproach should always be answered with the greatest candour and meekness. And men, convinced of their mistake, should turn their sinful censures into fervent prayers for the persons injured. Devotions towards God ought to be preferred to every convenience of our own. Early and earnest devotions are the best presages of happy days and successful undertakings: and nothing but works of necessity and mercy ought to detain us from the solemn worship of God. With the most distinguished expressions of gratitude ought we to commemorate the mercies which we have received in answer to our prayers. Children ought to be carefully trained up, not merely with an eye to the law of nature, as they are ours, but chiefly with an eye to the covenant of grace, as they are given to God. And with great care and expedition ought we to perform our vows, particularly in the solemn surrender of our children to God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—We owe to God the most exalted praises upon receipt of his favours. Yea, pleasant and valuable mercies should always lead to an affecting contemplation of the excellencies which are in God himself. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he often shows them things to come. Nothing is returned with such certainty and interest as that which is lent to the Lord: and early activity in God's service is a hopeful presage of an eminently useful life. But dreadful and threatening is the appearance when those who fill the highest offices in church or state, become absolute monsters in impiety, lust, and rapacity. It is criminal to administer to such only a soft rebuke; and their contempt of reproof is an awful prelude of near and certain destruction. God permits such contemners to proceed in their wickedness till they have ripened themselves for ruin. Parents' indulgence of their children in sin may occasion fearful distresses to their family and nation; and the most tremendous judgments appear marked out for those who disregard even the mildest reproofs of their parents. The more remarkable the favours which have been abused, the more tremendous the judgments which may be expected; and sharers in sin shall share in correspondent punishment. But God's work and cause will never fall to the ground for want of hands to carry it on. Though ministers' wickedness may destroy themselves, it cannot destroy the ministry. The church is founded on a Rock, which the gates of hell cannot prevail against. Jesus, the faithful priest on his throne, is her principal governor; who can turn out her wicked officers, and fill their room with such as will be faithful unto death.

7 And the Philistines [n] were afraid; for they said, God is come into the camp.[o] And they said, Wo unto us! for there hath not been such a thing [†] heretofore.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Dreadful is the case of a church when her fellowship with God is interrupted: but great the mercy, that God raises up new instruments in his church to carry on his work, when others have proved unfaithful. Early piety is often honoured with special intimacy with God; when God passes by his aged saints, who have offended him, and perfects praise out of the mouths of babes and sucklings. But it becomes aged ministers to be well satisfied with the Lord's carrying on his work, even at the expense of dishonouring themselves; and to be ready to assist those whose rising glory may eclipse their own. It is an unspeakable mercy when God repeats his calls to men till he renders them effectual: and promising is the appearance when such extraordinary revelations animate men to the very lowest offices in religion, instead of rendering them proud; especially when humble modesty and exact fidelity meet together. Ministers must often begin their work with fearful denunciations of God's wrath against sinners. Yea, how terribly God avenges even the sins of his own people, and of their families! He renders their condition base, tormenting, and in appearance desperate; and the most abundant measure of grace is requisite to render one resigned to such a stroke; yet resignation is the proper and only way to lighten the burden. But frequently he renews his visits to those who had been early seekers of him; and such as improve one gracious visit shall not be long without a second. Yea, the most abundant care shall be taken to honour his faithful servants, and to verify their words in the salvation or destruction of mankind.

hath been also a great slaughter among the people; and thy two sons also, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead; and the ark of God is taken.

18 And it came to pass, [z] when he made mention of the ark of God, that he fell from off the seat backward, by [a] the side of the gate, and his [b] neck brake, and he died; for he was an old man, and heavy: and he had judged Israel forty years.

The custom arose partly from the heat of the climate, which rendered morning and evening the most comfortable time for travel, labour, or religious exercises. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Lesser judgments only exasperate hardened sinners against the Lord, instead of making them search their ways, and return to him; while those, who are most destitute of the power of godliness, glory in, and trust to, their external forms and privileges.—Sinners are often perfectly secure when their destruction comes upon them as a whirlwind. And a good cause may fearfully suffer for the wickedness of those who espouse it. But, very justly, the first and sorest judgments light on the heads of wicked and unfaithful ministers: and quickly they, who refused to shed the tears of godly sorrow, are made to shriek under the strokes of judgment. How near the heart of exercised saints do the ark and church of God lie! Yet God pursues his offending servants to the very brink of eternity with awful frowns and fearful strokes; and, if they will be unfaithful, they must die without comfort. Pregnant women have need to be in readiness for death; for in an hour which they think not, the Son of man may require their soul. But how great is the misery of a nation when the ordinances and presence of God, which are the glory thereof, are taken from it! Draw near, ye careless, ye indulgent parents, and tremble; behold in what ruin to your family and nation your conduct may issue!

16 And when the five lords of the Philistines had seen it, they returned to Ekron the same day.

17 And these are the golden emerods which the Philistines returned for a trespass-offering unto the LORD; for Ashdod one, for Gaza one, for Askelon one, for Gath one, for Ekron one:

18 And the golden mice, according to the number of all the cities of the Philistines belonging to the five lords, both of fenced cities and of country villages, even unto the [s] great stone of Abel, whereon they set down the ark of the LORD: which stone remaineth unto this day in the field of Joshua the Beth-shemite.

19 ¶ And he [t] smote the men of Beth-shemesh, because they had looked into the ark of the LORD, even he smote of the people [†] fifty thousand and threescore and ten men. And the people lamented, because the LORD had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter.

20 And the men of Beth-shemesh said, [u] Who is able to stand before this holy LORD God? and to whom shall he go up from us?

21 ¶ And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of [x] Kirjath-jearim, saying, The Philistines have brought again the ark of the LORD; come ye down, and fetch it up to you.

low; but God will, in due time, and often when it is least expected, make it to triumph. No power of devils or men can withstand him, or even prevent their own ruin. It is very dangerous to profane his holy things. If men will not glorify God by due reverence, he will glorify himself in taking just vengeance: and such as contend with him shall be infallibly ruined at last. Men indeed are often more eager to get rid of God's judgments than to get rid of their sins which procured them: and, when they smart under his stroke, they are solicitous to have God put from them, rather than to enter into friendly connexions with him. But such as tempt God shall find every essay more and more imbittered by his curse and heavy hand upon them. And what has been gotten by fraud or sacrilege must be thrown back again before the sinner feel quietness within him.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—To be deprived of God's ordinances, though it be only for a time, is very alarming; yet much more so to have them made a plague to us. By holding fast their sins, men only prolong their sorrows. God can easily make the stoutest of his enemies to bow down to him, and even cause them to become, to his honour, lasting memorials of their own shame. But it is much happier to be warned by other men's experience than by our own. And when we have repented of our sins, we may hope for a removal of our miseries. Wicked men would fain shift their convictions, and ascribe their sufferings to any cause rather than to the hand of God. And God often patiently suffers himself to be tempted and put to the trial; but the issue shall tend to his own glory; and the very means, which men had taken to confirm themselves in infidelity, shall turn out to their more unanswerable conviction of the truth. He alone can deliver his church, and restore his ordinances, when all others lie by unconcerned. And with great joy and thanksgiving, even to the interruption of the most urgent earthly concerns, ought his returns and revivals of religion to be welcomed. But what fear and reverence are due to him, and his ordinances, in the meetings of his saints! He is a holy Lord God! and it is dangerous to indulge a vain curiosity in our concerns with him; and infinitely destructive to come near to behold the broken law, but as fulfilled in Christ. How miserable is that nation in which no common care is taken about the ordinances of Christ: but one place yields them to another, and forfeits those blessings which God has connected with them! Let us learn properly to value the privileges which God graciously bestows; and so to improve them, that they may not become a curse but a blessing to us.

2 And it came to pass, while the ark abode in Kirjath-jearim, that the time was [b] long; for it was twenty years: and all the house of Israel [c] lamented after the LORD.*

3 ¶ And Samuel spake unto all the house of Israel, saying, If ye [d] do return unto the LORD with all your hearts, then [e] put away the strange gods and Ashtaroth from among you, and [f] prepare your hearts unto the LORD, and serve him only, and he will deliver you out of the hand of the Philistines.

4 Then the children of Israel [g] did put away Baalim and Ashtaroth, and served the LORD only.

5 And Samuel said, Gather all Israel to [h] Mizpeh, and I will pray for you unto the LORD.

6 And they gathered together to Mizpeh, and [i] drew water, and poured it out before the LORD, and [k] fasted on that day, and said there, [l] We have sinned against the LORD. And Samuel [m] judged the children of Israel in Mizpeh.

7 ¶ And when the Philistines [n] heard that the children of Israel were gathered together to Mizpeh, the lords of the Philistines went up against Israel: and when the children of Israel heard it, they were [o] afraid of the Philistines.

8 And the children of Israel said to Samuel, †[p] Cease not to cry unto the LORD our God for us, that he will save us out of the hand of the Philistines.

9 ¶ And Samuel [q] took a sucking lamb, and offered it for a burnt-offering wholly unto the LORD: and [r] Samuel cried unto the LORD for Israel; and the LORD ‡ heard him.

10 And as Samuel was offering up the burnt-offering, the Philistines drew near to battle against Israel: but the LORD [s] thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines, and discomfited them; and they were smitten before Israel.

11 And the men of Israel went out of Mizpeh, and pursued the Philistines, and smote them, until they came under Beth-car.§

12 Then Samuel [t] took a stone, and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it [u] Eben-ezer,‖ saying, [x] Hitherto hath the LORD helped us.

13 ¶ So the Philistines were subdued, and they came no more into the coast of Israel: and the hand of the * LORD was against the Philistines all the days of Samuel.†

2 Now the name of his first-born was [b] Joel, and the name of his second Abiah: they were judges in [c] Beer-sheba.

3 [d] And his sons walked not in his ways, but turned aside after lucre, and took bribes, and perverted judgment.

4 Then all the elders of Israel gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto [e] Ramah,

5 And said unto him, [f] Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now [g] make us a king to judge us, like all the nations.

6 ¶ But the thing *[h] displeased Samuel, when they said, Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel [i] prayed unto the LORD.†

10 ¶ And Samuel told all the words of the LORD unto the people that asked of him a king.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—God's ordinances will still find a place somewhere; and, if priests neglect them, pious Levites or Israelites will take care of them. The church may continue long in a wilderness state; but, when men begin to lament after a hiding God and departed ordinances, their deliverance is nigh. If we wish remarkable interposals of Providence for our relief, we must put away our idols, and apply ourselves to solemn repentance, fasting, and supplication. God saves men from their sins, not in them. But it is a great mercy to have a noted favourite of heaven with us on critical occasions. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. And a minister's other labours, without earnest prayers, seldom avail to the reformation of the world, or the edification of souls. The first struggles for glory are often the hardest. Scarcely can men begin to repent, but hell and earth will be in arms against them. But the prayer of faith, fixed on Jesus' atoning sacrifice, will make things easier than could have been expected. Whatsoever we ask, believing, we shall receive; and, when God arises, his enemies must be scattered. But let us remember, that noted answers of prayer deserve memorials of gratitude: and, while we gratefully acknowledge past help, we may depend on future protection. When a man's ways please the Lord, he makes his enemies to be at peace with him. Prayer and penitence can do more

3 And the [c] asses of Kish, Saul's father, were lost: and Kish said to Saul his son, Take now one of the servants with thee, and arise, go seek the asses.

4 And he passed through [*] [d] mount Ephraim, and passed through the land of [e] Shalisha, but they found them not: then they passed through the land of [f] Shalim, and there they were not; and he passed through the land of the Benjamites, but they found them not.

5 And when they were come to the [g] land of Zuph, Saul said to his servant that was with him, Come, and let us return; lest my father leave caring for the asses, and take thought for us.[†]

6 And he said unto him, Behold now, there is in this city [h] a man of God, and he is an [i] honourable man; [k] all that he saith cometh surely to pass: now let us go thither; peradventure he can show us our way that we should go.

7 Then said Saul to his servant, But, behold, if we go, [l] what shall we bring the man? for the bread [‡] is spent in our vessels, and there is not a present to bring to the man of God: what [§] have we?

for a nation than the mightiest armies. And every blessing may be expected in that land, where magistrates or ministers unite remarkable diligence, equity, and faithfulness, with exemplary holiness and ardent devotions.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—We had need to be busy in our proper work while we are able; old age will quickly indispose us for it. Neither the piety of parents, nor the best education, can render a person gracious. All men transmit corruption to their posterity; no man his virtues or graces. Many children, awed by their parents' inspection, conceal the vices which afterwards appear when the restraint is taken off. Yea, many, after promising beginnings, turn out a disgrace to their parents, and a plague to their country. The love of money is a prolific root of evil; a most dangerous plague to the soul; and renders the public administrations of church and state a public nuisance and pest. It is a common thing for people to be harmonious in casting off the government of God, discovering the vilest ingratitude to his faithful servants, and studying conformity to the world: but abusive vexation from men should drive us to our prayers for ourselves and for them. God will grant us direction and comfort when others contemn and abuse us. To punish men for their sin, God often grants them what they wish: and things, good in themselves, become a curse when they are obtained in a wrong way. But rejection of God, when we are at ease, assuredly issues in his rejection of us when we are in trouble. However great a curse unsanctified relations may be, most men are set on obtaining them. And no reproofs or warnings will restrain the obstinate sinner; but the kindest advice is frequently misrepresented, as selfish and designing.

13 As soon as ye be come into the city, ye shall straightway find him, before he go up to the high place to eat: for the people will not eat until he come, because he doth [r] bless the sacrifice; and afterwards they eat that be bidden. Now therefore get you up; for about [*] this time ye shall find him.

14 And they went up into the city: and when they were come into the city, behold, Samuel came out against them, for to go up to the high place.[†]

15 ¶ [s] Now the LORD had [t] told Samuel in his ear [u] a day before Saul came, saying,

16 To-morrow about this time I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him to be captain over my people Israel, that he may save my people out of the hand of the Philistines; for [x] I have looked upon my people, because their cry is come unto me.

17 And when Samuel saw Saul, [y] the LORD said unto him, Behold the man whom I spake to thee of! this same shall [z] reign over my people.

18 Then Saul drew near to Samuel in the gate, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, where the seer's house is.[‡]

19 And Samuel answered Saul, and said, I am the seer: go up before me unto the high place; for ye shall eat with me to-day, and to-morrow I will let thee go, and will tell thee all that is in thine heart.

20 And as for thine asses that were lost [§] three days ago, set not thy mind on them; for they are found.[‖] And [a] on whom is all the desire of Israel? is it not on thee, and on all thy father's house?

21 And Saul answered and said, Am not I a [b] Benjamite, of the smallest of the tribes of Israel? and my family the least of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin? wherefore then speakest thou [*] so to me?

22 And Samuel took Saul and his servant, and brought them into the parlour, and [c] made them sit in the chiefest place among them that were bidden, which were about thirty persons.

23 And Samuel said unto the cook, Bring the [d] portion which I gave thee, of which I said unto thee, Set it by thee.

24 And the cook took up the [e] shoulder,[†] and that which was upon it, and set it before Saul. And Samuel said, Behold that which is [f] left! set it before thee, and eat; for unto this time hath it been kept for thee since I said, I have invited the people. So Saul did eat with Samuel that day.

25 ¶ And when they were come down from the high place into the city, Samuel communed with Saul [g] upon the top of the house.

26 And they arose early: and it came to pass about the spring of the day, that Samuel called Saul to the top of the house,[*] saying, Up, that I may send thee away. And [h] Saul arose, and they went out both of them, he and Samuel, abroad.

27 And as they were going down to the end of the city, Samuel said to Saul, Bid the servant pass on before us, (and he passed on,) but stand thou still [†] a while, that I may [‡] show thee the word of God.

THEN Samuel took [a] a vial of oil, and poured it upon his head, and [b] kissed him, and said, Is it not because the LORD hath anointed thee to be [c] captain over his [d] inheritance?

2 When thou art departed from me to-day, then thou shalt find two men by [] Rachel's sepulchre, in the border of Benjamin, at Zelzah; and they will say unto thee, The asses which thou wentest to seek are found: and, lo, thy father hath left [] the care of the asses, and sorroweth for you, saying, What shall I do for my son?[†]

3 Then shalt thou go on forward from thence, and thou shalt come to the plain of Tabor, and there shall meet thee three men going up [f] to God to Beth-el,[‡] [g] one carrying three kids, and another carrying three loaves of bread, and another carrying a bottle of wine:

4 And they [h] will salute thee, and give thee two loaves of bread; which thou shalt receive of their hands.

5 After that thou shalt come to the [i] hill of God, where is the garrison of the Philistines: and it shall come to pass, when thou art come thither to the city, that thou shalt meet a [k] company of prophets coming down from the high place [l] with a psaltery, and a tabret, and a pipe, and a harp, before them; and they shall prophesy:

6 And the [m] Spirit of the LORD will come upon thee, and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shalt be turned into [n] another man.[§]

7 And let it be, when these signs are come unto thee, that thou do as [o] occasion shall serve thee; for [p] God is with thee.

† The object of this simple narrative is to exhibit the great purposes of Providence as dependent upon little things. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—When nations provoke God to give them magistrates or ministers according to their heart, they are like to have portly figures, but little piety or sense. If men have much of this world, they may lay their account with frequent losses. Persons may be affectionate children, and yet destitute of grace. How sadly many mistake the ministerial office and work, and look on the messengers of God as but cunning diviners that need to be hired; and are more solicitous about outward trifles than about their eternal salvation! But it is shameful when handmaids know more of Christ and his ministers, than the sons of the great; and when men, like beasts, feast on their daily provision, and attend the ordinances of God, without first asking his blessing thereon! With what deep designs are the most fortuitous circumstances ordered by God; and the most trivial beginnings issue in the most important events! Humility is the most direct road to distinguished honour. And whom God honours we must respect for his sake; never envying those whom he is pleased to advance, though we ourselves should be eclipsed by them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—God should be always viewed as the author of all our promotions; and the tokens for good, which he gives in his providence, carefully observed. He works many wonderful changes on the heart, as well as on the station. Sudden changes indeed are not always to be trusted. We may get a new tongue, new company, new stations, and new manners, and yet want the new heart. It is not prudent to be forward in proclaiming our own honours, or in rushing on great works; but to wait till the Lord, by his word and providence, clear up our way: thus will our path be secure and happy. It is not enough that we obtain the things which we desire; we should consider whether we get them in love or in wrath; whether in answer to the cravings of our lust, or in fulfilment of the gracious promises of God. In all elections to government, in church or state, God's direction should be earnestly consulted and attended to. If the Lord call to important work, no meanness of spirit, or earthly consideration, should ever make us to evade it. He who gives the call, will give furniture for the work. Let the directions of God's word be our constant rule: and then neither weakness in ourselves, nor contempt in others, should dismay or provoke us in the way of duty. And let us always remember, that patience and forbearance often heal those breaches which would otherwise have been irreparable.

5 And, behold, Saul came [f] after the herd out of the field; and Saul said, What aileth the people that they weep? And they told him the tidings of the men of Jabesh.

6 And the [g] Spirit of God came upon Saul when he heard those tidings, and his [h] anger was kindled greatly.*

7 And he took a yoke of oxen, and [i] hewed them in pieces, and sent them throughout all the coasts of Israel by the hands of messengers, saying, Whosoever cometh not forth after Saul and after Samuel, so shall it be done unto his oxen.† And the fear of the LORD fell on the people, and they came out ‡ with one consent.

8 And when he numbered them in [k] Bezek, the children of Israel [l] were three hundred thousand, and the men of Judah thirty thousand.

9 And they said unto the messengers that came, Thus shall ye say unto the men of Jabesh-gilead, To-morrow, by that time the sun be hot,§ ye shall have ‖ help. And the messengers came and showed it to the men of Jabesh; and they were glad.

10 Therefore the men of Jabesh said, [m] To-morrow we will come out unto you, and ye shall do with us all that seemeth good unto you.

11 And it was so on the morrow, that [n] Saul put the people in [o] three companies; and they came into the midst of the host in the [p] morning-watch, and slew the Ammonites until the heat of the day: and it came to pass, that they which remained were scattered, so that [q] two of them were not left together.

12 ¶ And the people said unto Samuel, [r] Who is he that said, Shall Saul reign over us? bring the men, that we may put them to death.

13 And Saul said, [s] There shall not a man be put to death this day; for to-day the LORD hath wrought salvation in Israel.

14 ¶ Then said Samuel to the people, Come, and let us go to Gilgal, and [t] renew the kingdom there.*

15 And all the people went to Gilgal; and there they made Saul king before the LORD in Gilgal; and there [u] they sacrificed sacrifices of peace-offerings before the LORD; and [v] there Saul and all the men of Israel rejoiced greatly.

CHAPTER XII.

(1) Samuel resigns the government into the hands of Saul, and solemnly purges himself from every suspicion of mal-administration, and the people assent thereto: 1—5. (2) He reminds them of the great things which God had done for them and their fathers: 6—13. (3) He sets before them the blessing and the curse: 14, 15. (4) He calls for thunder and rain at an unusual season: 16—19. (5) He encourages the people that things should yet go well if they took heed to their way, but, if they did not, they might look for ruin to themselves and to their king: 20—25.

AND Samuel said unto all Israel, Behold, I have [a] hearkened unto your voice in all that ye said unto me, and have made a king over you.

2 And now, behold, the king [b] walketh before you: and [c] I am old and gray-headed; and, behold, my sons are with you: and I have walked before you from my childhood unto this day.

3 Behold, here I am: witness against me before the LORD,* and before his anointed; [d] whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or [e] of whose hand have I received any † bribe ‡ to blind mine eyes therewith? and I will restore it you.

4 And they said, [f] Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither hast thou taken ought of any man's hand.

5 And he said unto them, [g] The LORD is witness against you, and [h] his anointed is witness this day, that ye have not found ought in my hand. And they answered, He is witness.

6 ¶ And Samuel said unto the people, It is the LORD [i] that § advanced Moses‖ and Aaron, and that brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt.

7 Now therefore stand still, that I [k] may reason with you before the LORD of all the * righteous acts of the LORD, which he did to you, and † to your fathers.

8 [l] When Jacob was come into Egypt, and your fathers cried unto the LORD, then the LORD sent Moses and Aaron, which brought forth your fathers out of Egypt, and made them dwell in this place.

9 And [m] when they forgat the LORD their God, he sold them into the hand of Sisera, captain of the host of Hazor, and into the hand of the Philistines, and into the hand of the king of Moab; and they fought against them.

10 [n] And they cried unto the LORD, and said, We have sinned, because we have forsaken the LORD, and have served Baalim and Ashtaroth: but now deliver us out of the hand of our enemies, and we will serve thee.

11 And the [o] LORD sent Jerubbaal, and Bedan,‡ and Jephthah, and Samuel, and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies on every side, and ye dwelled safe.

12 And [p] when ye saw that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon came against you, ye said unto me, Nay; but a king shall reign over us: when the LORD your God was [q] your king.

§ The proper idea of government is—God, by his Spirit and law reigning in the conscience: and were all consciences enlightened by his Spirit, and amenable to his law, government would be perfect. The sin of Israel lay not merely in desiring to change their government without consulting God, nor merely in their foolish desire to imitate the surrounding nations; but in their being seduced to substitute the will of a man for the will of God, and acknowledging it their duty to obey that will, though in opposition to the will of God.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Inheritances, hastily gotten at the beginning, are often marked with terrible vexations; and God remarkably displays his wrath against some cities or nations. What a plague is it to live beside bad neighbours! But inhuman barbarity often issues in men's own ruin. Kind sympathy with others in their trouble, and holy indignation against deeds of cruelty and wickedness, are highly commendable. Deep humility, a hearty concern for their subjects, zeal for the interests and honour of God, proper courage and authority, prudence, and confidence in God for success, attended with activity and despatch in business, are truly ornamental in magistrates: and the fear of God ought to influence subjects to their duty. Never ought men to be more forward in forgiving others, than when the Lord hath done great things for themselves. And, with hearty thanksgivings to God, and increasing regard to his appointments, ought we to acknowledge the deliverances which he grants, or the honours which he confers.

SAUL [*a] reigned one year; and when he had reigned two years over Israel,[†]

2 Saul [b] chose him three thousand men of Israel; whereof two thousand were with Saul in [c] Michmash and in mount Beth-el, and a thousand were with Jonathan in [d] Gibeah of Benjamin: and the rest of the people he sent every man to his tent.

3 ¶ And Jonathan smote [e] the garrison of the Philistines that was in [f] Geba; and the Philistines heard of it. And Saul [g] blew the trumpet throughout all the land, saying, Let the Hebrews hear.[‡]

4 And all Israel heard say, that Saul had smitten a garrison of the Philistines, and that Israel also [h] was had in abomination with the Philistines. And the people were called together after Saul to [i] Gilgal.

5 ¶ And the Philistines gathered themselves together to fight with Israel, thirty thousand [§] chariots, and six thousand horsemen, and people [k] as the sand which is on the sea-shore in multitude: and they came up and pitched in Michmash, eastward from [l] Beth-aven.

6 ¶ When the men of Israel saw that they [m] were in a strait, (for the people were distressed,) then the people did hide themselves in caves, and in thickets, and in rocks, and in high places, and in pits.

7 And [n] some of the Hebrews[‖] went over Jordan to the land of [o] Gad and Gilead: as for Saul, he was yet in Gilgal, and [p] all the people [*] followed him trembling.

8 ¶ [q] And he tarried seven days, according to the set time that Samuel had appointed: but Samuel came not to Gilgal; and the people were scattered from him.

9 And Saul said, Bring hither a burnt-offering to me, and peace-offerings. And he [r] offered the burnt-offering.

10 And it came to pass, that [s] as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, behold, Samuel came; [†] and Saul went out to meet him, that he might [t] salute him.

11 ¶ And Samuel said, [u] What hast thou done? And Saul said, Because I saw that the people were scattered from me, and that thou camest not within the days appointed, and that the Philistines gathered themselves together at [x] Michmash;

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—To vindicate our character from calumny is a debt which we owe to God and to ourselves: and such, as are conscious of their integrity, will not fear the strictest scrutiny of their conduct. But it is the greatest comfort to have God the witness of our uprightness. To resign a station on account of age, with a conscience uncorrupted, and with a character which malice itself dares not to calumniate, is glorious indeed; yet good men scarcely ever leave either church or state in so good a condition as they would wish. Hence they are so earnest in God's work when he is taking it out of their hand: and it is honourable to die with a savoury testimony for God and his ways. But, whatever changes take place on earth, it will always be well with the righteous, and ill with the wicked. The careful remembrance of God's former mercies and judgments, and the observation of his awful providences, are both too little to make us active and constant in the service of God: and how terrible is the case of his enemies, who can arm all nature against them! How dangerous to have the prayers of his ministers turned against us! But for nations and churches to enjoy the fervent prayers, and the faithful admonitions and encouragements of JEHOVAH'S favourites, is one of the greatest mercies, and will be much prized by such as are truly penitent. Nor must any ill usage provoke them to give over; if they be faithful and compassionate to the death, whatever be their success, they have delivered their own soul. In high sovereignty God distributes his special favours; and these, when enjoyed, not [*] made supplication unto the LORD: [x] I forced myself therefore, and offered a burnt-offering.

13 And Samuel said to Saul, [a] Thou hast done foolishly: thou hast not kept the commandment of the LORD thy God, which he commanded thee;[†] for now would the LORD have established thy kingdom upon Israel for ever.

14 But [b] now thy kingdom shall not continue: the LORD hath sought him a man after his own heart, and the LORD hath commanded him to be captain over his people, [c] because thou hast not kept that which the LORD commanded thee.

15 And Samuel arose, and gat him up from Gilgal unto Gibeah of Benjamin: and Saul numbered the people that were [‡] present with him, [d] about six hundred men.

16 And Saul, and Jonathan his son, and the people that were present with them, abode in Gibeah of Benjamin: but the Philistines encamped in Michmash.

17 ¶ And the spoilers[§] came out of the camp of the Philistines in three companies: one company turned unto the way that leadeth to Ophrah, unto the land of Shual:

18 And another company turned the way to [f] Beth-horon: and another company turned to the way of the border that looketh to [g] the valley of [‖] Zeboim, toward the wilderness.

19 ¶ Now [h] there was no smith found throughout all the land of Israel: (for the Philistines said, Lest the Hebrews[*] make them swords or spears:)

20 But all the Israelites went down to the Philistines to sharpen[†] every man his share, and his coulter, and his axe, and his mattock.

21 Yet they had [‡] a file for the mattocks, and for the coulters, and for the forks, and for the axes, and [§] to sharpen the goads.

22 So it came to pass, in the day of battle, [‖] that there was neither sword nor spear found in the hand of any of the people that were with Saul and Jonathan: but with Saul, and with Jonathan his son, was there found.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—God quickly renders men miserable in the enjoyment of their own inventions for safety: and leaves such as trust to their own understanding, to the most impolitic, if not treacherous conduct. It is easy for him to awaken the resentment of nations, or to levy prodigious armies, when he hisses for them, and musters the host to the battle. And the greatest nations, and most flourishing churches, when God has deserted them, appear pitiful and contemptible. In perplexing straits, men often entangle themselves more and more by using sinful means of relief. Impatience to help ourselves, and unwillingness to leave our

14 And that first slaughter, which Jonathan and his armour-bearer made, was about twenty men, within as it were [a] an half acre of land, which a yoke of oxen might plough. [†]

15 ¶ And [o] there was trembling in the host, in the field, and among all the people: the [p] garrison, and the spoilers, they also trembled; and the earth quaked: [‡] so it was [q] a very great trembling.

16 And the watchmen of Saul in Gibeah of Benjamin looked; and, behold, the multitude melted away, and they went on beating down one another.

17 ¶ Then said Saul unto the people that were with him, Number now, and see who is gone from us. And when they had numbered, behold, Jonathan and his armour-bearer were not there.

18 And Saul said unto Ahiah, [r] Bring hither the ark of God: [§] (for [s] the ark of God was at that time with the children of Israel.)

19 ¶ And it came to pass, while Saul talked unto the priest, that the [‖] noise that was in the host of the Philistines went on and increased; and [t] Saul said unto the priest, Withdraw thine hand. [*]

20 And Saul and all the people that were with him [†] assembled themselves, and they came to the battle: and, behold, [u] every man's sword was against his fellow, and there was a very great discomfiture.

21 [x] Moreover, the Hebrews that were with the Philistines before that time, which went up with them into the camp from the country round about, even they also turned to be with the Israelites that were with Saul and Jonathan.

22 Likewise all the men of Israel which had [y] hid themselves in mount Ephraim, when they heard that the Philistines fled, even they also followed hard after them in the battle.

23 So the LORD [z] saved Israel that day: [‡] and [a] the battle passed over unto Beth-aven.

24 ¶ And the men of Israel were distressed that day: for [b] Saul had adjured the people, saying, Cursed be the man that eateth any food until evening, [§] that I may be avenged on mine enemies. So none of the people tasted any food.

25 And all they of the land came to a wood; and there was [c] honey upon the ground.

26 And when the people were come into the wood, behold, the honey dropped; [‖] but no man put his hand to his mouth: for the people [d] feared the oath.

28 Then answered one of the people, and said, Thy father [‡] straitly charged the people with an oath, saying, Cursed be the man that eateth any food this day. And the people were [§] faint.

29 Then said Jonathan, My father hath troubled the land: see, I pray you, how mine eyes have been enlightened, because I tasted a little of this honey;

30 How much more, if haply the people had eaten freely to-day of the spoil of their enemies which they found? [‖] for had there not been now a much greater slaughter among the Philistines?

31 ¶ And they smote the Philistines that day from Michmash to [f] Aijalon: and the people were very faint.

32 And the people flew upon the spoil, and took sheep, and oxen, and calves, and slew them on the ground: and the people [g] did eat them with the blood. [*]

33 ¶ Then they told Saul, saying, Behold, the people sin against the LORD, in that they eat with the blood. And he said, Ye have [h] transgressed: [i] roll a great stone unto me this day.

34 And Saul said, Disperse yourselves among the people, and say unto them, Bring me hither every man his ox, and every man his sheep, and slay them here, and eat; and sin not against the LORD in eating with the blood. And all the people brought every man his ox [†] with him that night, and slew them there.

35 ¶ And Saul [k] built an altar unto the LORD: the same was the first altar that he built unto the LORD. [‡]

36 ¶ And Saul said, Let us go down after the Philistines by night, and spoil them until the morning light, and let us not leave a man of them. And they said, Do whatsoever seemeth good unto thee. Then said the priest, [l] Let us draw near hither unto God. [§] concerns in God's hands, serve only to involve us in new troubles. It is infinitely dangerous for the greatest to invade the ministerial office, and run when God has not sent them: it may cost them a kingdom, nay, their everlasting damnation. Disobedience against God's positive precepts, can admit of no excuse. Every attempt to extenuate our guilt is a proof of an unhumbled spirit. The more we sin against conviction, the more aggravated is our transgression: and pretences to religion, whilst we act in opposition to God's commands, are but barefaced hypocrisy. Want of true sense always accompanies want of grace. Sins, which to us appear very little, have dangerous consequences; and plain and faithful rebukes become God's ministers. How unstable is earthly grandeur—to-day we may be enthroned, and to-morrow deposed! Miserable is a guilty, a defenceless, nation—and much more they who are destitute of the whole armour of God.

39 For as the LORD liveth, which saveth Israel, though it be in Jonathan my son, he shall surely die.[a] But there was not a man among all the people that answered him.

40 Then said he unto all Israel, Be ye on one side, and I and Jonathan my son will be on the other side. And the people said unto Saul, Do what seemeth good unto thee.

41 Therefore Saul said unto the LORD God of Israel, [p] Give a perfect lot. And Saul and Jonathan were taken; but the people [†] escaped.

42 And Saul said, Cast lots between me and Jonathan my son. And Jonathan was taken.

43 Then Saul said to Jonathan, Tell me what thou hast done. And Jonathan told him, and said, [q] I did but taste a little honey with the end of the rod that was in mine hand, and, lo, I must die.

44 And Saul answered, [r] God do so, and more also: for [s] thou shalt surely die, Jonathan.[‡]

45 And the people said unto Saul, Shall Jonathan die, who hath [t] wrought this great salvation in Israel? God forbid: as the LORD liveth, [u] there shall not one hair of his head fall to the ground; for [x] he hath wrought with God this day. So the people rescued Jonathan, that he died not.

46 Then Saul went up from following the Philistines: and the Philistines went to their own place.

47 ¶ So Saul [y] took the kingdom over Israel, and fought against all his enemies on every side, against [z] Moab, and against the children of Ammon, and against Edom, and against the kings of [a] Zobah, and against the Philistines: and whithersoever he turned himself, he vexed them.

48 And he [§] gathered an host, and [b] smote the Amalekites, and delivered Israel out of the hands of them that spoiled them.

SAMUEL also said unto Saul, [a] The LORD sent me to anoint thee to be king over his people, over Israel: now therefore hearken thou unto the voice of the words of the LORD.

2 Thus saith the [b] LORD of hosts, [c] I remember that which Amalek did to Israel, how he laid wait for him in the way, when he came up from Egypt.

3 Now go and [d] smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both man and woman, [e] infant and suckling, [f] ox and sheep, camel and ass.[*]

4 And Saul gathered the people together, and numbered them in [g] Telaim, [h] two hundred thousand footmen, and ten thousand men of Judah.

5 And Saul came to a city of Amalek, and [†] laid wait in the valley.

6 ¶ And Saul said unto the [i] Kenites, Go, [k] depart, get you down from among the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them: for ye [l] showed kindness to all the children of Israel when they came up out of Egypt. So the Kenites [‡] departed from among the Amalekites.

7 ¶ And Saul [m] smote the Amalekites from Havilah until thou comest to [n] Shur, that is over against Egypt.

8 And he [o] took Agag the king of the Amalekites alive, and utterly destroyed [p] all the people with the edge of the sword.

9 But Saul and the people spared Agag, and [q] the best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and [§] of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them: but every thing that was vile and refuse, that they destroyed utterly.

10 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Samuel, saying,

11 It [r] repenteth me that I have set up Saul to be king: for he [s] is turned back from following me, and hath not performed my commandments. And it [t] grieved Samuel; and he cried unto the LORD all night.

12 ¶ And when Samuel rose early to meet Saul in the morning, it was told Samuel, saying, Saul came to [u] Carmel, and, behold, he [x] set him up a [‖] place, and is gone about, and passed on, and gone down to Gilgal.

13 And Samuel came to Saul; and Saul

[*] In many preceding notes the sentence of expulsion or extirpation pronounced against the nations of Canaan, as well as against Amalek, has been defended against the cavils and impious accusations of infidels. The sentence against adults was righteously pronounced for their sins of robbery, malicious waylaying with intent to kill, (Ex. 17. 14.) murder, manstealing, &c., &c. The sentence against the sheep, &c., &c., was intended for preventing war from becoming a trade, to gratify covetousness; but how shall we defend the sentence against the children? What need is there of any defence? Do not children die by infantile diseases in multitudes? Does Providence require any defence? Yet surely the God who employs disease in the one case, and the sword in the other, is the same? Unless, therefore, the infidel accuse Providence, he cannot accuse the Lord speaking by his prophet.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—Carnal men are often more anxious for the presence of God's ministers than for his own. But how seasonable are God's interpositions for the deliverance of his people! He makes the faith of his servants strong, and then delights to crown their strong faith with signal victories and honours. The proud derision of their enemies issues in terrible destruction. Yea, the mightiest armies, in the hand of such an angry God, make a most pitiful appearance. And it is easy for the weakest cowards to pursue those whom the Lord hath routed. In all our ways it is best to consult God's word. But how ready are wicked consulters, like Saul, to take their own way, without waiting for an answer! Yet rash expedients, to obtain carnal ends, are often the noted hinderances of these ends. And such as cast abroad curses, firebrands, and death, endanger themselves and families; and entangle their children, who are far better than them-said unto him, Blessed be thou of the LORD: [r] I have performed the commandment of the LORD.*

14 And Samuel said, What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?

15 And Saul said, They have brought them from the Amalekites: for [s] the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen, [a] to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God; [†] and the rest we have utterly destroyed.

16 Then Samuel said unto Saul, Stay, and I will tell thee [b] what the LORD hath said to me this night. And he said unto him, Say on.

17 And Samuel said, When thou wast [c] little in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the LORD anointed thee king over Israel?

18 And the LORD sent thee on a journey, and said, Go and utterly destroy the [d] sinners the Amalekites, and fight against them until [‡] they be consumed.

19 Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the LORD, but didst [e] flee upon the spoil, [§] and didst evil in the sight of the LORD?

20 And Saul said unto Samuel, Yea, I have [f] obeyed the voice of the LORD, and have gone the way which the LORD sent me, and have brought Agag the king of Amalek, and have utterly destroyed the Amalekites:

21 But [g] the people took of the spoil, sheep and oxen, the chief of the things which should have been utterly destroyed, to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God in Gilgal.

22 And Samuel said, [h] Hath the LORD as great delight in burnt-offerings and sacrifices as in obeying the voice of the LORD? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.

23 [i] For rebellion is as the sin of [k] witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry: because thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, he hath also rejected thee from being king.

24 ¶ And Saul said unto Samuel, [l] I have sinned: for I have transgressed [‖] the commandment of the LORD, and thy words; because I [m] feared the people, and obeyed their voice.

25 Now therefore, I pray thee, [n] pardon my sin, and turn again with me, that I may worship the LORD.

2 And Samuel said, [d] How can I go? if Saul hear it, he will kill me. And the LORD said, Take an heifer with thee, and say, [e] I am come to sacrifice to the LORD.*

3 And call Jesse to [†] the sacrifice, and I will show thee what thou shalt do: and thou selves. When God refuses to answer, it is an evidence that he is angry; and it is time to think seriously in what we have offended him. Violent tempers are prone to sacrifice their nearest relations to their angry passions. In such a case we ought to resist them, kings not excepted; and to protect such as are not only innocent, but honoured of God. Wicked men's zeal often flames in trifling matters, while it languishes in things important; and rash cursing bids fair to end in profane perjury. The comforts and honours of royalty are dearly bought, by the constant care, danger, and toil which attend them. And often men's earthly glory makes a blaze just before the dark night of ignominy and wo seizes upon them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Injuries done to God's Israel will, sooner or later, be resented by him. He often bears long with the vessels of his wrath fitted for destruction: but the longer judgments are forborne, they will only be the more severe when they come; and bloody instruments will be chosen for bloody work. How dangerous is it to live among the devoted enemies of God! But kindness to God's people often procures safety to men's offspring many ages afterward. A covetous and hypocritical heart makes men do the work of God by halves: and men's sins often make God change his methods of providence, though he never changes his mind or purpose. While the ruin of sinners is the grief of God's faithful ministers, the most deceitful men are most ready to boast of their exact obedience to his law: but hypocritical protestations of obedience are often contradicted by the most undeniable proofs. Such as are most forward to justify them-

4 And Samuel did that which the LORD spake, and came to Beth-lehem: and the elders of the town [f] trembled at his [*] coming, and said, [g] Comest thou peaceably?[†]

5 And he said, Peaceably: I am come to sacrifice unto the LORD; [h] sanctify yourselves,[‡] and come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Jesse and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice.

6 ¶ And it came to pass, when they were come, that he looked on [i] Eliab, and said, Surely the LORD's anointed is before him.

7 But the LORD [k] said unto Samuel, Look not on his [l] countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD [m] seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the [§] outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart.[‖]

13 Then Samuel took [t] the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and [u] the Spirit of the LORD [§] came upon David from that day forward. So Samuel rose up, and went to [x] Ramah.

14 ¶ But the [y] Spirit of the LORD departed from Saul, and an [z] evil spirit from the LORD [‖] troubled him.[*]

15 And Saul's servants said unto him, Behold now, an evil spirit from God troubleth thee.

16 Let our lord now command thy servants which are before thee to seek out a man who is a cunning player on an harp: and it shall come to pass, when the evil spirit from God is upon thee, that [a] he shall play with his hand, and thou shalt be well.[*]

17 And Saul said unto his servants, Provide me now a man that can play well, and bring him to me.

18 Then answered one of the servants, and said, Behold, I have seen a son of Jesse the Beth-lehemite, that is cunning in playing, [b] and a mighty valiant man, and a man of war, and prudent in [†] matters, and a comely person, and the LORD is with him.

19 ¶ Wherefore Saul sent messengers unto Jesse, and said, Send me David thy son, which is [c] with the sheep.

20 And Jesse took an ass laden with bread, and a bottle of wine, and [d] a kid, and sent them by David his son unto Saul.

21 And David came to Saul, and [e] stood before him: and he [f] loved him greatly; and he became his armour-bearer.[‡]

22 And Saul sent to Jesse, saying, Let David, I pray thee, [g] stand before me; for he hath found favour in my sight.

23 And it came to pass, when the evil spirit from God was upon Saul, that David took an harp, and played with his hand: so Saul [h] was refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him.

NOW the Philistines gathered together their armies to battle, and were gathered together at [a] Shochoh, which belongeth to Judah, and pitched between Shochoh and Azekah, in [b] Ephes-dammim.

2 And Saul and the men of Israel were gathered together, and pitched by the valley of Elah,* and [†] set the battle in array against the Philistines.

3 And [c] the Philistines stood on a mountain on the one side, and Israel stood on a mountain on the other side: and there was a valley between them.

4 ¶ And there went out a [d] champion out of the camp of the Philistines, named Goliath, selves, are ordinarily the readiest to condemn others: and throwing of the blame on our partners in, or tempters to sin, is a shrewd evidence of an unhumbled heart. Those, whom God hath highly exalted from low beginnings, ought to remember it as an excitement to do great things for God their exalter. Ministers of Christ ought to deal faithfully with the greatest: and to hunt them out of all their lying refuges and ill-grounded excuses.—Next to Jesus' atonement, nothing is more pleasing to God than true holiness of heart and life. But to live in disobedience to the true God is as bad as to set up false gods, the devil not excepted: and those are unworthy to rule over men who are unwilling to be ruled by God. Fear of man causeth a snare. To confess the sins which we cannot conceal, and to be chiefly afraid of their shame, is no more than may be expected even from an unhumbled heart. But such repentance comes too late, when God hath passed a sentence of rejection. So little are hardened sinners affected with God's threatenings, that honour before the people is dearer to their hypocritical hearts than reconcilement with him. But bloody murderers will at last be reckoned with by God. And never is the destruction of most sinners nearer than when they have no apprehension of it. Let us therefore withdraw from intimacy with such, but never neglect to mourn over their deplorable condition; for it is truly bitter to see those, whom we love, in the ways of death and hell.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—God tenderly sympathises with his people's griefs; and yet what fear of man remains in the most noble hearts! How awful of Gath, whose height was [a] six cubits and a span.[†]

5 And he had an helmet of brass upon his head, and he was [‡] armed with a coat of mail;[§] and the weight of the coat was [‖] five thousand shekels of brass.

6 And he had greaves[*] of brass upon his legs, and a [†] target of brass between his shoulders.

7 And the staff of his spear was like a weaver's beam;[‡] and his spear's head weighed [§] six hundred shekels of iron: and one bearing a shield went before him.

8 And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, and said unto them, Why are ye come out to set your battle in array?[‖] Am not I a Philistine, and ye servants to Saul? choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me.

9 If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants: but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us.

10 And the Philistine said, [a] I defy the armies of Israel this day: give me a man, that we may fight together.

11 When Saul and all Israel heard those words of the Philistine, they were dismayed, and greatly afraid.

12 [a]¶ Now David was [f] the son of that Ephrathite of Beth-lehem-judah, whose name was Jesse; and he had eight sons: and the man went among men for an old man in the days of Saul.

13 And [g] the three eldest sons of Jesse went and followed Saul to the battle: and the names of his three sons that went to the battle were Eliab the first-born, and next unto him Abinadab; and the third [h] Shammah.

14 And David [i] was the youngest:[†] and the three eldest followed Saul.

15 But David went and returned[‡] [k] from Saul to feed his father's sheep at Beth-lehem.

16 And the Philistine drew near morning and evening, and presented himself [l] forty days.

17 And Jesse said unto David his son, Take now for thy brethren an ephah of this parched corn, and these ten loaves, and run to the camp to thy brethren;

18 And carry these ten [§] cheeses unto the captain of their thousand, and look how thy brethren fare, and [a] take their pledge.

19 Now Saul, and they, and all the men of Israel, were in the valley of Elah, [†] fighting[‡] with the Philistines.

20 ¶ And David rose up early in the morning, and left the sheep with a keeper, and took, and went, as Jesse had commanded him; and he came to the [m] trench[*] as the host was going forth to the [n] fight, and shouted for the battle.

21 For Israel and the Philistines had put the battle in array, army against army.

22 And David left [†] his carriage in the hand of the keeper of the carriage, and ran into the army, and came and [o] saluted his brethren.

23 And as he talked with them, behold, there came up the champion (the Philistine of Gath, Goliath by name) out of the armies of the Philistines, and spake [p] according to the same words: and David heard them.

24 And all the men of Israel,[‡] when they saw the man, fled [q] from him, and were sore afraid.

25 And the men of Israel said, Have ye seen this man that is come up? surely to defy Israel is he come up: and [r] it shall be, that the man who killeth him, the king will enrich him with great riches, and will give him his daughter, and make his father's house free in Israel.[§]

26 And David spake to the men that stood by him, saying, What shall be done to the man that killeth this Philistine, and taketh away the [a] reproach from Israel? for who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of [t] the living God?[‖]

27 And the people answered him after this manner, saying, So shall it be done to the man that killeth him.

28 ¶ And Eliab his eldest brother heard when he spake unto the men; and Eliab's [u] anger was kindled against David, and he said, Why camest thou down hither? and with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderness?[*] [x] I know thy pride, and the naughtiness of thine heart; for thou art come down that thou mightest see the battle.

29 And David said, What have I now done? [y] Is there not a cause?[†]

30 ¶ And he [‡] turned from him toward another, and spake after the same [§] manner: and the people answered him again after the former manner.

31 And when the words were heard which David spake, they rehearsed them before Saul; and he [‖] sent for him.

32 ¶ And David said to Saul, [z] Let no man's heart fail because of him; thy servant [a] will go and fight with this Philistine.

33 And Saul said to David, Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him; for thou art but [a] a youth, and he [b] a man of war from his youth.

are the faithful ministers of Christ to all around; and what need have we to prepare ourselves for God's noted favours by solemn repentance, application to Jesus' blood, and surrender of ourselves to his service! The choicest saints are apt to dote too much on external appearances, even after they have, to their grief, got proofs of its vanity. For God in sovereign authority distributes his favours and honours: yea, often to those who seem least likely to manage them aright. But where he sends on his work, he abundantly qualifies for the employ. How quickly the devil takes possession of those whom God has deserted! Yet, notwithstanding the numerous expedients which carnal men devise for the removal of their inward troubles, they will all at last prove only ruinous and deceitful.

34 And David said unto Saul, Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion and a bear,[a] and took a † lamb out of the flock;

35 And I went out after him, and smote him, and delivered it out of his mouth: and when he arose‡ against me, I caught him by his beard, [c] and smote him, and slew him.

36 Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear; and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them, seeing he hath defied the armies of the living God.

37 David said moreover, [d] The LORD that delivered me§ out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. And Saul said unto David, Go, and the LORD be with thee.

38 ¶ And Saul ‖ armed David with his armour, and he put an helmet of brass upon his head; also he armed him with a coat of mail.

39 And David girded his sword upon his armour, and he assayed to go; for he had not proved it.* And David said unto Saul, I cannot go with these; for I have not proved them. And David [e] put them off him.†

40 And he took his [f] staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the ‡ brook, and put them in a shepherd's § bag which he had, even in a scrip, and his sling was in his hand;‖ and he drew near to the Philistine.

41 And the Philistine came on, and drew near unto David; and the man that bare the shield went before him.

42 And when the Philistine looked about, and saw David, he [g] disdained him; for he was but a youth, and ruddy, and of a fair countenance.

43 And the Philistine said unto David, Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with staves? And the Philistine [h] cursed David by his gods.

44 And the Philistine said to David, Come to me, and I will give thy flesh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the field.

45 Then said David to the Philistine, Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield; but [i] I come to thee in the name of the LORD of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied.

46 [k] This day will the LORD * deliver thee into mine hand; and I will smite thee, and take thine head from thee; and I will give the carcasses of the host of the Philistines this day unto the fowls of the air, and to the wild beasts of the earth; that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel.*

47 And all this assembly† shall know ‖ that the LORD saveth not with sword and spear: for the battle is the LORD's, and he will give you into our hands.‡

48 And it came to pass, when the Philistine arose, and came and drew nigh to meet David, that David hasted,§ and ran toward the army to meet the Philistine.

49 And [m] David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a stone, and slang it, and smote the Philistine in his forehead, that the stone ‖ sunk into his forehead; and he fell upon his face to the earth.

50 So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone,* and smote the Philistine, and slew him; but there was no sword in the hand of David.

51 Therefore David ran, and stood upon the Philistine, and took his sword, and drew it out of the sheath thereof, and [n] slew him, and cut off his head therewith. And when the Philistines saw their champion was dead, they fled.

52 ¶ [o] And the men of Israel and of Judah† arose, and shouted, and pursued the Philistines, until thou [p] come to the valley, and to the gates of Ekron: and the wounded of the Philistines fell down by the way to ‡ Shaaraim, even unto Gath, and unto Ekron.

53 And the children of Israel returned from chasing after the Philistines, and they spoiled their tents.

54 ¶ And David [q] took the head of the Philistine, and brought it to [r] Jerusalem; but he put his armour in [s] his tent.§

55 ¶ And when Saul saw David go forth against the Philistine, he said unto Abner, the captain of the host, Abner, ‖ whose son is this youth? And Abner said, As thy soul liveth, O king, I cannot tell.

56 And the king said, Inquire thou whose son the stripling is.

57 And as David returned from the slaughter of the Philistine, Abner took him, and brought him before Saul, with the head of the Philistine in his hand.

58 And Saul said to him, Whose son art thou, thou young man? And David answered, [t] I am the son of thy servant Jesse the Bethlehemite.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—It was a great mercy that God suspended this invasion till Saul had recovered from his distraction, and David was prepared to encounter this giant. And often, though unnoticed, God manifests peculiar mercy in the timing of our troubles. Pride naturally establishes itself upon bulk, bodily strength, and other weak endowments of human nature: and, relying upon these, the enemies of God earnestly watch for advantages against his people. But when God leaves them to themselves, not only individuals but armies become mean-spirited and terrified on every approach of danger: their strength is turned into weakness, and their courage into shame. If we would be good soldiers of Jesus Christ, it is necessary that we endure hardness; and it bodes well when God endows us with a deep regard for his honour. Yet how often those, whom God calls out to glorious exploits, meet with much discouragement from a carnal world: particularly their own relations. But let them in patience possess their souls, and in meekness instruct those that oppose themselves. A soft answer turneth away wrath. And we must not be discouraged in well-doing because our good intentions are misrepresented and abused. What God has done for us ought to be improved, as an encouragement to do more and more for him at his call. They are well armed that go forth with a good conscience in a good cause. The righteous are bold as a lion; but they need never be ashamed of an honest calling, however mean. Pride goes before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.

CHAPTER XVIII.

(1) David becomes Saul's attendant, Jonathan's friend, and the common favourite of the Hebrew nation: 1—7, 16. (2) The disagreeable consequences of it. 1. Saul, provoked with David's praise, hates, and seeks to murder him: 8—11. 2. Observing his prudent conduct, and the people's love to him, he is afraid of him: 12—16. 3. Offers him to wife Merab his eldest daughter; but gives her to another: 17—19. 4. He gives him Michal his younger daughter, upon the most dangerous terms: 20—25. (3) Having performed these conditions, David becomes more and more esteemed among the people: 26—30.

AND it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking unto Saul,* that [a] the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul.

2 And Saul took him that day, and would let him go [b] no more home to his father's house.

3 Then Jonathan and David [c] made a covenant, because he loved him as his own soul.

4 And Jonathan [d] stripped himself of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle.†

5 ¶ And David went out whithersoever Saul sent him, and ‡ [e] behaved himself wisely: and Saul set him over the [f] men of war;§ and he was accepted in the sight of all the people, and also in the sight of Saul's servants.

6 ¶ And it came to pass, as they came, when David was returned from the slaughter of the ‖ Philistine, that the women came out of all the cities of Israel, [g] singing and dancing, to meet king Saul, with tabrets, with joy, and with [h] instruments of music.

7 And the women [i] answered one another as they played, and said, [k] Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands.

8 And Saul was very wroth, and the saying [l] displeased him; and he said, They have ascribed unto David ten thousands, and to me they have ascribed but thousands: and what can he have more [m] but the kingdom?

9 And Saul [n] eyed† David from that day and forward.

10 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that the evil [o] spirit from God came upon Saul, and he prophesied‡ in the midst of the house; and David [p] played with his hand, as at other times: and there was a [q] javelin in Saul's hand.

11 And Saul [r] cast the javelin; for he said, I will smite David even to the wall with it. And David avoided out of his presence twice.

12 ¶ And Saul was [s] afraid of David, because the LORD was with him, and was departed from Saul.

13 Therefore Saul [t] removed him from him, and made him his captain over a thousand; and he [u] went out and came in before the people.

14 And David §[v] behaved himself wisely in all his ways; and the LORD was with him.

* The subject and length of the conversation does not appear; but the effect of it in winning the kindred spirit of Jonathan, is not surprising. 15 Wherefore when Saul saw that he behaved himself very wisely, he was afraid of him.

16 But all Israel and Judah loved David, because he went out and came in before them.

17 ¶ And [x] Saul said to David, Behold, my elder daughter Merab, her will I give thee to wife; only be thou * valiant for me, and fight the [y] LORD's battles: for Saul said, Let not mine hand be upon him, [z] but let the hand of the Philistines be upon him.†

18 And David said unto Saul, [a] Who am I? and what is my life, or my father's family in Israel, that I should be son-in-law to the king?‡

19 But it came to pass, at the time when Merab, Saul's daughter, should have been given to David, that she was given unto [b] Adriel the Meholathite to wife.

20 ¶ And [c] Michal, Saul's daughter, loved David: and they told Saul, and the thing § pleased him.‖

21 And Saul said, I will give him her, that she may be a [d] snare to him, and that the hand of the Philistines may be against him. Wherefore Saul said to David, Thou shalt this day be my son-in-law in the one of the twain.

22 ¶ And Saul [e] commanded his servants, saying, Commune with David secretly, and say, Behold, the king hath delight in thee, and all his servants love thee: now therefore be the king's son-in-law.

23 And Saul's servants spake those words in the ears of David. And David said, [f] Seemeth it to you a light thing to be a king's son-in-law, seeing that I am a poor man, and lightly esteemed?

24 And the servants of Saul told him, saying, * On this manner spake David.

27 Wherefore David arose and went, he and his men, [h] and slew of the Philistines two hundred men;* and David brought their foreskins, and they gave them in full tale to the king, that he might be the king's son-in-law. And Saul gave him [i] Michal his daughter to wife.

The curse that is causeless falls on the head of him that utters it; and the presumption of the proud destroys him. How vain is the arm of flesh against the power of God! the mightiest enemies are easily defeated when we go forth against them strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might; while they who trust in man find their dependence at last but as a broken reed. It is not high birth, but deeds of high desert, that constitute true nobility. But of how little avail is the notice of earthly courts, where one may be so soon forgotten, or so quickly hated.

LORD was with David, and that Michal, Saul's daughter, loved him.

29 And Saul was yet [k] the more afraid of David; and Saul became David's enemy continually.

30 Then the princes of the Philistines went forth: and it came to pass, after they went forth, that David behaved himself [l] more wisely than all the servants of Saul; so that his name was much [m] set by.

(1) David is delivered by the mediation of Jonathan: 1—7. (2) By his own quickness: 8—10. (3) By Michal his wife: 11—17. (4) By Samuel's protection, and God's turning Saul into a temporary prophet: 18—24.

AND [a] Saul spake to Jonathan his son, and to all his servants, that they should kill David.

2 But Jonathan, Saul's son, [b] delighted much in David; and Jonathan told David, saying, Saul my father seeketh to kill thee:* now therefore, I pray thee, take heed to thyself until the morning, and abide in a secret place, and hide thyself:

3 And I will go out and stand beside my father in the field where thou art, and I will commune with my father of thee; and what I see, that I will tell thee.

4 ¶ And Jonathan [c] spake good of David unto Saul his father, and said unto him, Let not the king [d] sin against his servant, against David; because he hath not sinned against thee, and because [e] his works have been to thee-ward very good.

5 For he [f] did put his life in his hand, and slew the Philistine, and the LORD [g] wrought a great salvation for all Israel:† thou sawest it, and didst rejoice; wherefore then wilt thou sin against innocent blood, to slay David without a cause?

6 And Saul hearkened unto [h] the voice of Jonathan: and Saul sware, As the LORD liveth, he shall not be slain.‡

7 And Jonathan called David, and Jonathan showed him all those things: and Jonathan brought David to Saul, and he was in his presence as [§] in times past.

8 ¶ And there was war again: and [i] David went out and fought with the Philistines, and slew them with a great slaughter; and they fled from [‖] him.

9 And the [k] evil spirit from the LORD* was upon Saul as he sat in his house with his javelin in his hand; and David played with his hand.

with him. Let me love the virtuous, though it should be at the expense of losing all that I have in the world for their sake: and let me count a faithful friend among the greatest of human blessings. If friendship be true, it will be constant, and will not startle at giving the strongest assurances. But how difficult to act so, in a high station, as to procure honour, without provoking envy! Even the due praises of merit are grating to the ears of the envious; and often their malignant eye betrays the rancour of their heart, while indulgence of their evil thoughts invites the devil to take possession of their souls. Jealousy is cruel as the grave, and thirsts for the precious life. But God guards his people from many a mortal blow secretly aimed at them. How base is it to devise hurt against those who dwell securely by us—to lay snares for our neighbour, under pretence of regard to him—and to cover hatred with lying lips! But, if we are hated on earth, and snares laid for our life, let us behave with the more prudence, humility, and true bravery. Let us count it all joy when we fall into divers temptations, and through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God! God can overrule the most wicked designs of our enemies for our good, and to their confusion. And modest worth will shine with double lustre at last. God will confound the wise in their own craftiness; and, in spite of every danger, exalt the man whom he delights to honour.

A. M. 2945. B. C. 1059.

AND David [a] fled from Naioth in Ramah, and came and said before Jonathan, [b] What have I done? what is mine iniquity? and what is my sin before thy father, that he seeketh my life?

2 And he said unto him, [c] God forbid; thou shalt not die: behold, my father will do nothing, either great or small, but that he will [*] show it me; and why should my father hide this thing from me? it is not so.

3 And David [d] sware[†] moreover, and said, Thy father certainly knoweth that I have found grace in thine eyes; and he saith, Let not Jonathan know this, lest he be grieved: but [e] truly, as the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, [f] there is but a step between me and death.

4 Then said Jonathan unto David, [g] Whatsoever thy soul desireth, I will even do it for thee.

5 And David said unto Jonathan, Behold, to-morrow is [h] the new-moon,[‡] and I should not fail to sit with the king at meat: but let me go, that [i] I may hide myself in the field unto the third day at even.

6 If thy father at all miss me, then say, David earnestly asked[§] leave of me that he might run to [k] Beth-lehem his city; for there is a yearly [l] sacrifice there for all the family.

7 If he say thus, It is well; thy servant shall have peace: but if he be very wroth, then be sure that evil is determined by him.

8 Therefore thou [m] shalt deal kindly with thy servant; for [n] thou hast brought thy servant into a covenant of the LORD with thee: notwithstanding, [o] if there be in me iniquity, slay me thyself; for why shouldest thou bring me to thy father?

9 And Jonathan said, Far be it from thee: for if I knew certainly that evil were determined by my father to come upon thee, then would not I tell it thee?

10 Then said David to Jonathan, Who shall tell me? or what if thy father answer thee roughly?

11 ¶ And Jonathan said unto David, Come, and let us go out into the field. And they went out both of them into the field.

12 And Jonathan said unto David, [p] O LORD God of Israel,[*] when I have [q] sounded my father about to-morrow any time, or the third day, and, behold, if there be good toward David, and I then send not unto thee, and [†] show it thee;

13 The [r] LORD do so and much more to Jonathan: but if it please my father to do thee evil, then I will show it thee, and send thee away, that thou mayest go in peace; and the [s] LORD be with thee, as he hath been with my father.[‡]

14 And thou shalt not only, while yet I live, show me the kindness of the LORD, that I die not;

15 But also [t] thou shalt not cut off thy kindness from my house for ever: no, not when the LORD hath cut off the enemies of David every one from the face of the earth.[§]

16 So Jonathan [u] made a covenant with the house of David, saying, [x] Let the LORD even require it at the hand of David's enemies.[‖]

17 And Jonathan caused David to swear again, because he loved him: for [y] he loved him as he loved his own soul.

18 ¶ Then Jonathan said to David, [z] To-morrow is the new-moon; and thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be [*] empty.

19 And when thou hast stayed three days,[†] then thou shalt go down [‡§] quickly, and come to the place where thou didst [a] hide thyself [‖] when the business was in hand, and shalt remain by the stone [*] Ezel.

20 And I will shoot three arrows on the side thereof, as though I shot at a mark.

21 And, behold, I will send a lad, saying, Go, find out the arrows. If I expressly say unto the lad, Behold, the arrows are on this side of thee, take them; then come thou: for there is peace to thee, and [†] no hurt, as the LORD liveth.

22 But if I say thus unto the young man, Behold, the arrows are beyond thee; go thy way: for the LORD hath sent thee away.

23 And as touching [b] the matter which thou and I have spoken of, behold, the LORD be [‡] between thee and me for ever.

24 ¶ So David [c] hid himself in the field:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—What a mercy is a true and disinterested friend, who with heartiness and prudence espouses the cause of persecuted saints! Good advice, even from an inferior, deserves attention. But the oath of a common swearer, and the sudden change of a passionate man, are a bad security for one's life. It is good always to keep close to our duty, however ill men may reward us for it. But, while we are on earth, something will ever allay the joys of our triumphs; and no kindness will cure the ranklings of inveterate malice. Happy are they who trust God with their protection and deliverance! He can make the very things intended for ensnaring us the means of our relief. Women justly cleave to their husbands rather than to their parents. But how dangerous is it to begin wandering out of God's way! One lie, or other act of sin, hardens the conscience for another. God can easily disarm the rage of the most furious, and turn persecutors into preachers and praisers. In danger let me therefore always cleave close to the Lord's faithful ministers and people: over all the glory shall be a defence. And let me take heed lest my spiritual gifts or experiences should, like Saul's, be merely occasional, intended for the good of others, not for my own.

and when the new-moon was come, the king sat him down to eat meat.

25 And the king sat upon his seat, as [d] at other times, even upon a seat by the wall; and Jonathan arose, and Abner sat by Saul's side, and David's place was empty.[*]

26 Nevertheless Saul spake not any thing that day: for he thought, Something hath befallen him, he [e] is not clean; surely he is not clean.[†]

27 And it came to pass on the morrow, which was the second day of the month, that David's place was empty; and Saul said unto Jonathan his son, [f] Wherefore cometh not the [g] son of Jesse to meat, neither yesterday nor to-day?[‡]

28 And Jonathan [h] answered Saul, David earnestly asked leave of me to go to Bethlehem:

29 And he said, Let me go, I pray thee; for our family hath a sacrifice in the city, and my brother, he hath commanded me to be there: and now, if I have found favour in thine eyes, let me get away, I pray thee, and see my brethren: therefore he cometh not unto the king's table.

30 Then Saul's anger was kindled against Jonathan, and he said unto him, [§] [i] Thou son of the perverse rebellious woman, do not I know that thou hast chosen the son of Jesse to thine own confusion, and unto the confusion of thy mother's nakedness?[‖]

31 For as long as the son of Jesse liveth upon the ground, thou shalt not be established, nor thy kingdom: wherefore now send and fetch him unto me; for he [*] shall surely die.

32 And Jonathan answered Saul his father, and said unto him, [k] Wherefore shall he be slain? what hath he done?

33 And Saul [l] cast a javelin at him to smite him: whereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to slay David.

34 So Jonathan arose from the table in fierce anger, and did eat no meat the second day of the month: for he was grieved for David,[†] because his father had done him shame.

35 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, that Jonathan went out into the field, [m] at the time appointed with David, and a little lad with him.

36 And he said unto his lad, Run, find out now the arrows which I shoot. And, as the lad ran, he shot an arrow [‡] beyond him.

37 And when the lad was come to the place of the arrow which Jonathan had shot, Jonathan cried after the lad, and said, Is not the arrow beyond thee?

38 And Jonathan cried after the lad, Make speed, haste, stay not. And Jonathan's lad gathered up the arrows, and came to his master.

39 But the lad knew not any thing; only Jonathan and David knew the matter.

40 And Jonathan gave his [*] artillery[†] unto [‡] his lad, and said unto him, Go, carry them to the city.

41 ¶ And as soon as the lad was gone, David arose out of a place toward the south, and fell on his face to the ground, and bowed himself three times;[§] [n] and they kissed one another, and wept one with another, until David [o] exceeded.

42 And Jonathan said to David, Go [p] in peace, [‖] forasmuch as we have sworn both of us in the name of the LORD, saying, The LORD be between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed for ever. [q] And he arose and departed: and Jonathan went into the city.

4 And the priest answered David, and said, There is no common bread under mine hand; but there is [e] hallowed bread, if the young men have kept themselves at least [f] from women.

5 And David answered the priest, and said unto him, Of a truth women have been kept from us about these three days, since I came out, and the [g] vessels of the young men are holy, and the bread is [h] in a manner common, yea, though it were sanctified this day in the vessel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—How great is the value and usefulness of a true friend, especially in a time of distress and danger! The greatest disinterestedness of affection is implied in cordial friendship—it extends to posterity, as well as to its immediate objects. When influenced by it, we cannot endure the shadow of what might produce a separation; and can more readily be abused ourselves, than have our friend ill-treated. Great patience, meekness, and prudence, are necessary when we have to deal with foul-mouthed, malicious, and unreasonable men. And with what tender and solemn concern should friends part, in view of having their next meeting in eternity! But most necessary is a constant cleaving to Jesus Christ, and his everlasting covenant, as all our salvation, and all our desire.

7 Now a certain man of the servants of Saul was there that day, [1] detained before the LORD; and his name was [m] Doeg, an Edomite,* the chiefest of the herdmen that belonged to Saul.

4 And he brought them before the king of Moab; and they dwelt with him all the while that David was in the hold.

5 ¶ And the [k] prophet Gad said unto David, Abide not in the hold; [l] depart, and get thee into the land of Judah. Then David departed, and came into the forest of Hareth.

6 ¶ When Saul heard that David was discovered, and the men that were with him, (now Saul abode in Gibeah under a [m] tree in Ramah,† having his spear in his hand, and all his servants were standing about him,)

7 Then Saul said unto his servants that stood about him, Hear now, ye Benjamites; will [n] the son of Jesse give every one of you fields and vineyards, and make you all captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds;

9 ¶ Then [p] answered Doeg the Edomite, which was set over the servants of Saul, and said, I saw the son of Jesse coming to Nob, to Ahimelech the son of Ahitub.

10 And he [q] inquired of the LORD for him, and gave him victuals, and gave him the sword of Goliath the Philistine.

11 ¶ Then the king [r] sent to call Ahimelech the priest, the son of Ahitub, and all his father's house, the priests that were in Nob: and they came all of them to the king.

12 And Saul said, Hear now, thou son of Ahitub. And he answered, ‡ Here I am, my lord.

14 Then Ahimelech answered the king, [u] and said, And who is so faithful among all thy servants as David, which is the king's son-in-law, and [x] goeth at thy bidding, and is honourable in thine house?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—High stations are slippery places. Often a person is scarcely fixed in when he is driven from them. How weak are the best of men when left to themselves; and how unreasonable therefore to be secure or self-confident! We know not what temptations are before us, or how weak we are to resist them. God will have mercy, and not sacrifice: and what we have devoted to his honour, may become the means of our protection. But even in the house of God Satan has his spies, who come pretending to worship, but are sent by him for mischief. Oppression sometimes makes a wise man mad; and the fear of man causeth a snare. But, in every trial, God can open a way for our escape, and make even our enemies instruments of our deliverance. In distress let me flee to God's sanctuary, where I may have spiritual armour, comfort, and direction. However Providence alter my lot, let me always retain my Christian candour: and if my troubles be great, let strong faith, and prudent circumspection, attend me; not craftiness or dissimulation.

CHAPTER XXIII.

(1) David serves Saul and his kingdom, in delivering Keilah from the Philistines: 1—6. (2) While Saul attempts to seize him, the Keilites had ungratefully betrayed him if the Lord had not warned him to leave their city: 7—13. (3) Jonathan visits him in the wood of Ziph, and encourages him in the Lord: 14—18. (4) The Ziphites inform Saul concerning David, and he marches in pursuit of him: 19—25. (5) When Saul was upon the point of apprehending David, an invasion of the Philistines diverts his pursuit, and David escapes: 26—29.

THEN they told David, saying, Behold, the Philistines fight against a Keilah, and they rob the thrashing-floors.

2 Therefore David b inquired of the LORD,* saying, Shall I go and smite these Philistines? And the LORD said unto David, Go and smite the Philistines, and save Keilah.

3 And David's men said unto him, Behold, c we be afraid here in Judah, how much more then if we come to Keilah against the armies of the Philistines?

4 Then David d inquired of the LORD yet again. And the LORD answered him, and said, Arise, go down to Keilah; for I will deliver the Philistines into thine hand.

5 So David and his men went to Keilah, and fought with the Philistines, and brought away their cattle, and smote them with a great slaughter. So David saved the inhabitants of Keilah.*

6 And it came to pass, when Abiathar the son of Ahimelech e fled to David to Keilah, that he came down with an † ephod in his hand.

7 ¶ And it was told Saul that David was come to Keilah. And Saul said, f God hath delivered him into mine hand; for he is shut in, by entering into a town that hath gates and bars.

8 And Saul called all the people together to war, to go down to Keilah, to besiege David and his men.

9 ¶ And David knew that Saul secretly practised mischief against him, and he said to Abiathar the priest, g Bring hither the ephod.‡

10 Then said David, O LORD God of Israel, thy servant hath certainly heard that Saul seeketh to come to Keilah, to h destroy the city for my sake.

11 Will the men of Keilah deliver me up into his hand? will Saul come down, as thy servant hath heard? O LORD God of Israel, I beseech thee, tell thy servant. And i the LORD said, He will come down.§

12 Then said David, Will the men of Keilah ‖ deliver me and my men into the hand of Saul? And the LORD said, They will deliver thee up.*

13 ¶ Then David and his men, k which were about six hundred, arose and departed out of Keilah, and went whithersoever they could go. And it was told Saul that David was escaped from Keilah; and he forbare to go forth.

14 And David abode in the wilderness in strong holds, and remained l in a mountain in the wilderness of Ziph: and m Saul sought him every day; n but God delivered him not into his hand.†

15 And David saw that Saul was come out to seek his life: and David was in the wilderness of Ziph in a wood.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—What terrible disasters attend earthly promotions! But God will certainly take care that his persecuted people may always have some friends: and such as suffer with them shall be glorified together. Yea, God often puts the greatest honour upon the most unlikely objects. And Jesus will in no wise cast out any that come to him. How unsettled is the life of the saints on earth! and often their trials are reserved for old age, when there is least strength to endure them. But it bodes well when children prefer the safety of their parents to their own; and when in trials we expect good at the Lord's hand, and readily take the advice of his servants. How jealousy torments a man's self with its groundless suspicions! It represents the most faithful as seditious, and accuses them of meditating the worst designs. It is very unsafe to trust to wicked men: our most benevolent actions may by them be turned into the worst of crimes, and truth may be reported in a manner more malignant than gross calumny and falsehood. But generous is that mind which will not hurt the character of another, even when truth admits, and safety requires it. What a terrible plague is a tyrannical king! What barbarous monsters do some render themselves! But it is painful to a good man to be in any wise the occasion of mischief to others. Here likewise let us observe, that, even through this wickedness and rage of Saul, God exactly fulfils his threatenings against Eli; and destroys the remnant of his house. Let us wonder at the depth of his providence, and the faithfulness of his word.

17 And he said unto him, Fear not; for the hand of Saul my father [p] shall not find thee: and thou shalt be king over Israel, and I shall be next unto thee; and that also [q] Saul my father knoweth.

18 And [r] they two made a covenant before the LORD. And David abode in the wood, and Jonathan went to his house.

19 ¶ Then [s] came up the Ziphites to Saul to Gibeah, saying, Doth not David hide himself with us in strong holds in the wood, in the hill of Hachilah,† which is ‡ on the south of § Jeshimon?‖

20 Now therefore, O king, come down according to all the desire of thy soul to come down; and * our part shall be to deliver him into the king's hand.

23 See therefore, and take knowledge of all the lurking-places where he hideth himself, and come ye again to me with the certainty, and I will go with you: and it shall come to pass, if he be in the land, that I [x] will search him out throughout all the thousands of Judah.

24 And they arose, and went to Ziph before Saul: but David and his men were in the § wilderness of Maon,† in the plain on the south of Jeshimon.

25 Saul also and his men went to seek him. And they told David: wherefore he came down into a rock, and abode in the wilderness of Maon; and when Saul heard that, he pursued after David in the wilderness of Maon.

26 And Saul went on this side of the mountain, and David and his men on that side of the mountain: and David made haste to get away for fear of Saul; for Saul and his men [z] compassed David and his men round about to take them.

27 ¶ [a] But there came a messenger unto Saul, saying, Haste thee, and come; for the Philistines have ‡ invaded the land.§

28 Wherefore Saul returned from pursuing after David, and went against the Philistines: therefore they called that place * Sela-hammahlekoth.

AND it came to pass, when Saul was returned from [a] * following the Philistines, that it was told him, saying, Behold, David is in the wilderness of En-gedi.

2 Then Saul [b] took three thousand chosen men† out of all Israel, and went to seek David and his men upon the rocks of the wild goats.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—No wonder that God's enemies invade his land when his people are persecuted in it. God wisely directs his favourite servants where he has work for them: and never are men so likely to prosper, as when they consult the Lord in all their ways. If he direct us, no ill usage from the distressed, or discouragement from our friends, must make us withhold our help. The worst designs are often covered with fair pretexts, and the appearances of providence are imagined tokens of God's approbation; while even good men are hated for their most useful services, and evil-minded wretches are ready to betray their most cordial and noted benefactors. But God knows how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to disappoint the secret purposes of their enemies. And what a mercy is it to have a pious, self-denying, and constant friend, to visit and comfort us in our distress! But what must Jesus be, when Jonathan is so kind and faithful! And what must heaven be, where we shall meet with all the kind angels, and kind spirits of just men made perfect; and with the infinitely kinder Father, Son, and Holy Ghost! Let my new covenant friendship with these be renewed day by day! Behold how men's malice renders them miserable; and how ready brethren of the same tribe are to betray us! but God in his providence interposes for the relief of his people, when their danger is at the greatest. Fear not then, my soul,—only believe, and thou shalt see the glory of God.

said, I will not put forth mine hand against my lord; for he is the LORD'S anointed.

11 Moreover, [1] my father, see; yea, see the skirt of thy robe in my hand: for in that I cut off the skirt of thy robe, and killed thee not, know thou and see that [m] there is neither evil nor transgression in mine hand, and I have not sinned against thee; yet thou [n] huntest my soul to take it.

12 The [o] LORD judge between me and thee, and the LORD avenge me of thee:* but mine hand shall not be upon thee.

13 As saith the proverb of the ancients, [p] Wickedness proceedeth from the wicked: but [q] mine hand shall not be upon thee.

14 After whom is [r] the king of Israel come out? after whom dost thou pursue? after [s] a dead dog, after a flea?

15 The LORD therefore [t] be judge, and judge between me and thee, and see, and plead my cause, and [†] deliver me out of thine hand.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, when David had made an end of speaking these words unto Saul, that Saul said, [u] Is this thy voice,‡ my son David? And Saul lifted up his voice, and [x] wept.§

17 And he said to David, [y] Thou art more righteous than I; for thou hast rewarded me good, whereas I have rewarded thee evil.

18 And thou hast showed this day how that thou hast dealt well with me: forasmuch as when the LORD had [‖] delivered me into thine hand, thou killedst me not.

19 For if a man find his enemy, will he let him go well away? wherefore the LORD reward thee good for that thou hast done unto me this day.

20 And now, behold, [z] I know well that thou shalt surely be king, and that the kingdom of Israel shall be established in thine hand:

21 [a] Swear now therefore unto me by the LORD that thou wilt not cut off my seed after me, and that thou wilt not destroy my name out of my father's house.

22 And David sware unto Saul. And Saul went home; but David and his men gat them up [b] unto the hold.

AND [a] Samuel died; and all the Israelites were gathered together, and lamented him, and buried him in his house at Ramah. And David arose, and went down to the [b] wilderness of Paran.

2 ¶ And there was a man in Maon, [c] whose [*] possessions were in [d] Carmel;[†] and the man was very great, and he had three thousand sheep, and a thousand goats: and he was shearing his sheep in Carmel.

3 Now the name of the man was Nabal, and the name of his wife Abigail: and she was [e] a woman of good understanding, and of a beautiful countenance: but the man [f] was churlish, and evil in his doings; and he was of the house of [g] Caleb.‡

4 ¶ And David heard in the wilderness that Nabal did [h] shear his sheep.

5 And David sent out ten young men; and David said unto the young men, Get you up to Carmel, and go to Nabal, and [i] greet him in my name.

6 And thus shall ye say to him that liveth in prosperity, Peace be both to thee, and peace be to thine house, and peace be unto all that thou hast.

7 And now I have heard that thou hast shearers: now, thy shepherds which were with us we [k] hurt them not, neither was there ought missing unto them, all the while they were in Carmel.

8 Ask thy young men, and they will show thee: wherefore let the young men find favour in thine eyes; (for we come in [i] a good day;) give, I pray thee, whatsoever cometh to thine hand unto thy servants, and to thy son David.[‖]

9 And when David's young men came, they spake to Nabal according to all those words in the name of David, and [‖] ceased.

10 ¶ And Nabal answered David's servants, and said, [m] Who is David? and who is the son of Jesse? There [n] be many servants now-a-days that break away every man from his master.

11 Shall I then take [o] my bread and my water, and my [*] flesh that I have killed for my shearers, [p] and give it unto men whom I know not whence they be?[†]

12 So David's young men [q] turned their way, and went again, and came and told him all those sayings.

13 And David said unto his men, [r] Gird ye on every man his sword. And they girded on every man his sword; and David also girded on his sword: [s] and there went up after David about four hundred men, and two hundred abode by the stuff.‡

14 ¶ But one of the young men told Abigail, Nabal's wife, saying, Behold, David sent messengers out of the wilderness to salute our master; and he [§] railed on them:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—Restless is the malice of wicked men; but God can bring us very near to danger, and yet keep us in perfect safety. And easily can he deliver up his enemies into the hand of the weakest of his people. How falsely rash men misinterpret the promises and providences of God! But we must not avenge our own quarrels, nor take all the advantages against our enemies which Providence puts in our hand; but rather seek to overcome them with patience and kindness. If temptations come to us in a pleasing form, we must flee from them; our conscience must start, not only at evident crimes, but and we were not [*] hurt, neither missed we any thing, as long as we were conversant with them, when we were in the fields.

16 They were [u] a wall unto us both by night and day, all the while we were with them keeping the sheep.

17 Now therefore know and consider what thou wilt do; for evil is determined against our master, and against all his household: for he is such [x] a son of Belial, that a man cannot speak to him.

18 ¶ Then Abigail [y] made haste, and took two hundred [†] loaves, and two [‡] bottles of wine, and five sheep ready dressed, and five measures of parched corn, and an hundred [§] clusters of raisins, and two hundred cakes of figs, and laid them on asses.

19 And she said unto her servants, Go on before me: behold, I come after you. But she [z] told not her husband Nabal.

20 And it was so, as she [a] rode on the ass, that she came down by the covert of the hill, and, behold, David and his men came down against her; and she met them.

21 (Now David had said, Surely in vain have I kept all that [b] this fellow hath in the wilderness, so that nothing was missed of all that pertained unto him; and he [c] hath requited me evil for good.

22 [d] So and more also do God unto the enemies of David, if I leave of all that pertain to him by the morning light [‖] any [] that pisseth against the wall.)[]

23 And when Abigail saw David, she hasted, [f] and lighted off the ass, and fell before David on her face, and bowed herself to the ground.

24 And [g] fell at his feet, and said, Upon me, my lord, [h] upon me let this iniquity be; and let thine handmaid, I pray thee, speak in thine [†] audience, and hear the words of thine handmaid.

25 Let not my lord, I pray thee, [‡] regard this man of Belial, even Nabal: for as his name is, so is he; [§] Nabal [‖] is his name, and folly is with him: but I thine handmaid saw not the young men of my lord, whom thou didst send.

26 Now therefore, my lord, [i] as the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, seeing the LORD hath withholden [*] thee from coming to shed blood, and from [k] avenging thyself with thine own hand, now [l] let thine enemies, and they that seek evil to my lord, be as Nabal.[†]

27 And now this [m] blessing, which thine handmaid hath brought unto my lord, let it even be given unto the young men that [n] follow my lord.

28 I pray thee, forgive the [o] trespass [*] of thine handmaid: for the LORD [p] will certainly make my lord a sure house; because my lord fighteth [q] the battles of the LORD, and [r] evil hath not been found in thee all thy days.

29 Yet a man is risen to pursue thee, and to seek thy soul: but the soul of my lord shall be [s] bound in the bundle of life [†] with the LORD thy God; and the souls of thine enemies, them shall he [t] sling out, as [‡] out of the middle of a sling.

30 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD shall have done to my lord according to all the good that he hath spoken concerning thee, and shall have appointed thee ruler over Israel,

31 That this shall be [u] no grief unto thee, nor offence of heart unto my lord, either that thou hast shed blood causeless, or that my lord hath avenged himself: but when the LORD shall have dealt well with my lord, then [x] remember thine handmaid.

32 ¶ And David [y] said to Abigail, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, which sent thee this day to meet me:

33 And blessed be thy advice, and blessed be thou, which hast kept me this day from coming to shed blood, and from avenging myself with mine own hand.

34 For in very deed, as the LORD God of Israel liveth, which hath kept me back from hurting thee, [§] except thou hadst [‖] hasted and come to meet me, surely there had not been left unto Nabal by the morning light any that pisseth against the wall.[‖]

35 So David received of her hand that which she had brought him,[*] and said unto her, Go up in peace to thine house: see, I have hearkened to thy voice, and have accepted thy person.

36 ¶ And Abigail came to Nabal; and, behold, he held [z] a feast in his house, like the feast of a king; and Nabal's heart was merry within him, for he [a] was very drunken: wherefore she [b] told him nothing, less or more, until the morning light.

37 But it came to pass in the morning, when the wine was gone out of Nabal, and his wife had told him [c] these things, that [d] his heart died within him, and he became as a stone.[†]

38 And it came to pass, about ten days after, that the LORD smote Nabal, that he died.

39 ¶ And when David heard that Nabal was dead, he said, [e] Blessed be the LORD, that at the most distant appearance of evil. It is honourable, when not only there is innocence, but Providence clearly manifests it; and that, instead of ill designs alleged, there was nothing but the most cordial friendship. And observe—soft words are most effectual to break the bones, and turn away strong wrath. What a plague to kings are flattering and deceitful courtiers! And how shameful and galling to find, that through them we have been persecuting our principal friends!

But there may be confession and remorse where there is no real repentance. Love to our enemies, and a mild and generous behaviour under great provocations, are glorious tokens of future greatness. But how mad is the malicious injuring of those, at whose mercy we, and all that we have, may soon lie! and how prudent to keep on our guard against a known enemy! Fits of partial repentance will not last long.

5 ¶ And David arose, and came to the place where Saul had pitched; and David beheld the place where Saul lay, [d] and Abner the son of Ner, the captain of his host: and Saul lay in the [e] trench, and the people pitched round about him.

6 Then answered David, and said to [f] Ahimelech the Hittite, and to [g] Abishai the son of Zeruiah, brother to Joab, saying, Who will go [h] down with me to Saul to the camp?* And Abishai said, I will go down with thee.

7 So David and Abishai came to the people by night; and, behold, Saul lay [i] sleeping within the trench, and his spear stuck in the ground at his bolster: but Abner and the people lay round about him.

8 Then said Abishai to David, God hath [k] delivered thine enemy into thine hand this day: now therefore let me smite him, I pray thee, with the spear even to the earth at once, and I will not smite him the second time.

9 And David said to Abishai, [l] Destroy him not: for who can stretch forth his hand against the LORD's anointed, and be guiltless?†

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—Was not Samuel a figure of Jesus Christ, our great Priest, Prophet, Deliverer, and Judge! How earnestly desired, and how supernatural was his birth! Early was he devoted and called to, prepared for, and employed in, his Father's service. How extensive is his office! He is the illuminated Prophet, that renders our dark earth a valley of vision. He is the unparalleled Priest, who, by his once offering of himself, made peace between God and men. He is the great Deliverer, that makes us free indeed. He is the sovereign Judge of all, particularly the Israel of God. How wretched the case in which he finds his church and people when he appears for their help! His sacrifice and intercession procure lasting friendship with heaven, and noted victories and mercies on earth. How marvellous his conquest of enemies, and restoration of the treacherously abandoned worship of God! Gracious are his instructions, sharp his reproofs, and certain his predictions! By him kings reign, and princes decree justice. Candid, upright, and generous, are his whole administrations! though wickedly, and to their lasting ruin, He and his Father were rejected by his brethren of Judah, who desired a temporal deliverer; and still are by carnal professors. But how distressed their condition, till they seek the Lord, and David their king! But, lo, the righteous are taken away from the evil to come! Nations have reason to mourn, when those who stood in the gap, to prevent the Lord's wrath, are removed by death. Alas! how often the best of men are disgraced by their children, and the best of women by their husbands! There is little happiness in wealth enjoyed by fools; and as little comfort in marriage which is made for the sake of it. It becomes the poor to use entreaties. While we feast, we should distribute our bread to the hungry. One good turn deserves and requires another; but a foul tongue is the sign of a wicked heart. Scurillous invectives are too commonly the fare of God's precious saints in this world. They have puny, if not thievish hearts, who grudge to bestow their superfluities for the relief of such as are in want. How deadly dangerous, and deeply sinful, are violent passions! Some one provocation may quickly exasperate that mind which has calmly borne many such in other forms: but sensible and faithful servants are a great mercy to a family, and especially that one head of it hath sense and grace, when the other is destitute of both. Soft words turn away anger; and a gift in the bosom pacifies strong wrath. But what we do in passion will afterwards be a grief to us: and it is a far greater satisfaction to forgive an offence than to revenge it. Nor ought any to be more ready to forgive injuries than those whom the Lord has marvellously protected. What thanks they deserve who keep us back from sin! And great is the mercy of God, which prevents our sin when we are upon the very point of committing it. If we have sworn to commit wickedness, it is sinful to keep our oath, but our duty bitterly to repent the taking of it. Those who are churlish to God and his people are often abundantly liberal to the devil and his agents, in drunkenness, costly apparel, or the like. Sinners lost in luxury and mirth, are insensible of the wrath of God, which hangs over their head; while beastly drunkards render themselves incapable of profiting either by advice or correction. But quickly will death turn their riotous joys into eternal sorrows, and tear the churl from his idolized portion of earth. Saints need not avenge their own wrongs; God will do it for them in a speedy and awful manner, and render them thankful that he kept them back from usurping his prerogative. Pacific prudence and sense are excellent means to pave our way to a more exalted station: and such, as are content to suffer with the people of God, shall reign with them at last. But they who sinfully multiply their wives must not expect to enjoy much of family pleasures.

Abner the son of Ner, saying, Answerest thou not, Abner? Then Abner answered and said, Who art thou that criest to the king?

15 And David said to Abner, Art not thou a valiant man? and who is like to thee in Israel? wherefore then hast thou not kept thy lord the king? [s] for there came one of the people in to destroy the king thy lord.

16 This thing is not good that thou hast done. As the LORD liveth, ye are [t] worthy to die, because ye have not kept your master, the LORD's anointed. And now see where the king's spear is, and the cruse of water that was at his bolster.

17 And Saul knew David's voice, and said, [u] Is this thy voice, my son David? And David said, It is my voice, my lord, O king.

18 And he said, [x] Wherefore doth my lord thus pursue after his servant? for what have I done? or what evil is in mine hand?

19 Now therefore, I pray thee, let my lord the king hear the words of his servant. CHAPTER XXVII.

(1) David retires to Achish king of Gath: 1—4. (2) Begs Ziklag: 5—7. (3) Invades the Geshurites, &c.; and equivocates to Achish in his account of his expeditions: 10—12.

A. M. cir. 2947. B. C. cir. 1057.

AND David [a] said in his heart, I shall now [*] perish one day by the hand of Saul: there is nothing better for me than that I should speedily escape into the land of the Philistines; [†] and Saul shall despair of me, to seek me any more in any coast of Israel: so shall I escape out of his hand.

2 And David arose, and [b] he passed over with the six hundred men that were with him unto Achish, the son of Maoch, king of Gath.

3 And David dwelt with Achish at Gath, he and his men, every man with his household, even David with [c] his two wives, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail the Carmelitess, Nabal's wife.

4 And it was told Saul that David was fled to Gath; and [d] he sought no more again for him.

5 ¶ And David said unto Achish, If I have now found grace in thine eyes, let them give me a place in some town [e] in the country, that I may dwell there: for why should thy servant dwell in the royal city with thee?

6 Then Achish gave him [f] Ziklag that day: wherefore Ziklag pertaineth unto the kings of Judah unto this day.

7 ¶ And [‡] the time that David dwelt in the country of the Philistines was [g] a full year and four months.

8 ¶ And David and his men went up and invaded the [h] Geshurites, and the [i] Gezrites, and the [k] Amalekites: [§] for those nations were of old the inhabitants of the land, as thou goest to [l] Shur, even unto the land of Egypt.

9 And David [m] smote the land, and left neither man nor woman alive, and took away the sheep, and the oxen, and the asses, and the camels, and the apparel, and returned, and came to Achish.

10 And Achish said, [‖] Whither have ye made a road to-day? And David [n] said, Against [o] the south of Judah, and against the south of the Jerahmeelites, and against the south of the Kenites. [*]

[*] This answer of David was not false in words, for he had done what he said; but it was equivocal in words, and evidently was misunderstood by Achish. How then is David to be vindicated? He cannot be vindicated at all. He had sinned in despairing of God's protection—he had erred in joining himself with the enemies of his country, and now he sins again,—a melancholy example of the weakness of man, when leaning on his own understanding, and for a moment ceasing to trust solely in God. —Note. The honesty of the Scriptures in recording the faults of their chief characters, is alone sufficient to convince infidels that they must have come from God.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—One sin usually involves men in another, lest they should suffer for the former; and none are more restless in promoting mischief than treacherous neighbours and unfaithful kinsmen. Unsanctified hearts soon lose the impression made by convictions of sin; and a little instigation will revive the old grudge, where the reconciliation is not sincere: but God can easily disarm the mighty, and leave them a prey to the feeble. It is dangerous for a wicked heart to meet with an engaging temptation. But what an honour is it to resist strong temptations, and to neglect repeated opportunities of avenging ourselves! And it highly becomes the Christian thus to commit his cause into the hand of God, and to wait his time and way of advancing him to honour. But what malicious enemies are they who tempt us to apostatize from God, by driving us from his worship and people! how severe a reckoning awaits those who shed innocent blood. And wo to the men against whom the people of God bring their just complaints! Sin is the greatest folly, and will appear so at last to the most hardened sinner, even though their convictions should never have any saving issue. God's dispensations do all concur to prove him a righteous judge. They who

AND it came to pass in those days, [a] that the Philistines gathered their armies together for warfare to fight with Israel. And Achish said unto David, * Know thou assuredly [b] that thou shalt go out with me to battle, thou and thy men.

2 And David said to Achish, [c] Surely thou shalt know what thy servant can do. And Achish said to David, Therefore will I make thee keeper of mine head for ever.

3 ¶ Now [d] Samuel was dead, and all Israel had lamented him, and buried him in Ramah, even in his own city: and Saul had put away those that had [e] familiar spirits, and the wizards,† out of the land.

4 ¶ And the Philistines gathered themselves together, and came and [f] pitched in Shunem; and Saul gathered all Israel together, and they pitched [g] in Gilboa.

5 And when Saul saw the host of the Philistines, he was [h] afraid, and his heart greatly trembled.

6 And when Saul [i] inquired of the LORD, the LORD answered him not, neither by [k] dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets.‡

7 ¶ Then said Saul unto his servants, [l] Seek me a woman that hath a familiar spirit, that I may go to her, and inquire of her. And his servants said to him, Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at En-dor.§

8 And Saul [m] disguised himself, and put on other raiment, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night: and he said, I pray thee, divine unto me by the familiar spirit, and bring me him up whom I shall name unto thee.

11 Then said the woman, Whom shall I bring up unto thee? And he said, Bring me up Samuel.

12 And when the woman saw ° Samuel, she cried with a loud voice: and the woman spake to Saul, saying, Why hast thou deceived me? for thou [p] art Saul.†

13 And the king said unto her, Be not afraid: for what sawest thou? And the woman said unto Saul, I saw [q] gods ascending out of the earth.

14 And he said unto her, ‡What form is he of? And she said, An old man cometh up; and he is covered with a mantle. And Saul [r] perceived that it was Samuel, and he [s] stooped with his face to the ground, and bowed himself.

And Saul answered, I am [u] sore distressed; for the Philistines make war against me, and God is departed from me, and answereth me no more, neither by §prophets, nor by dreams: therefore I have called thee, that thou mayest make known unto me what I shall do.

16 Then said Samuel, Wherefore then dost thou ask of me, [x] seeing the LORD is departed from thee, and is become thine enemy?

17 And the LORD hath done to [y] him [z] as he spake by ‖me: for the LORD hath rent the kingdom out of thine hand, and given it to thy neighbour, even to David;

19 Moreover, the LORD will also deliver Israel with thee into the hand of the Philistines; and [b] to-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me: [c] the LORD also shall deliver the host of Israel into the hand of the Philistines.

20 Then Saul * fell straightway all along on the earth, and [d] was sore afraid, because of the words of Samuel: and there was no strength in him; for he had eaten no bread all the day, nor all the night.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—It is hard to withstand repeated and strong temptations to unbelief. It is prudent to withdraw from temptation, and especially for strangers to live as retired from courts as possible. And never shall we be losers by parting with earthly accommodations for the sake of God and our souls. But surely nothing can be more foolish, especially after warning given, than to expect safety out of the Lord's land, rather than in it. It is good to be always zealous

(1) David marches with the Philistines against Israel—their lords except against him as a dangerous ally: 1—5. (2) Achish dismisses him from that service: 6—11.

NOW the Philistines gathered together all their armies to [a] Aphek: [*] and the Israelites pitched by a fountain which is in Jezreel.

2 And the lords of the Philistines passed on by hundreds and by thousands: but [b] David and his men passed on in the rere-ward with [†] Achish.

3 Then said the princes of the Philistines, What do these Hebrews here? And Achish said unto the princes of the Philistines, Is not this David, the servant of Saul the king of Israel, which hath been with me [c] these days, or these years, and I have found [d] no fault in him since he fell unto me unto this day?

4 And the princes of the Philistines were wroth with him; and the princes of the Philistines said unto him, [*] Make this fellow return, that he may go again to his place which thou hast appointed him, and let him not go down with us to battle, lest in the battle he be an adversary to us: for wherewith should he [‡] reconcile himself unto his master? should it not be with the heads of these men?

5 Is not this David, of whom they sang one to another in dances, saying, [f] Saul slew his thousands, and David his ten thousands?

6 ¶ Then Achish called David, and said unto him, Surely, as [g] the LORD liveth, [§] [h] thou hast been upright, and thy going out and thy coming in with me in the host is good in my sight; for I have not found evil in thee since the day of thy coming unto me unto this day: nevertheless [*] the lords favour thee not.

7 Wherefore now return, and go in peace, that thou [†] displease not the lords of the Philistines.

8 And David said unto Achish, [‡] But what have I done? and what hast thou found in thy servant, so long as I have been [‡] with thee unto this day, [k] that I may not go fight against the enemies of my lord the king? [§]

9 And Achish answered and said to David, I know that thou art good in my sight, [l] as an angel of God: notwithstanding the princes of the Philistines have said, He shall not go up with us to the battle.

10 Wherefore [l] now rise up early in the morning with thy master's servants that are come with thee; and as soon as ye be up early in the morning, and have light, depart.

against the Lord's devoted enemies. But we have need of grace, not only to make us do well, but to make us honestly stand to what we have done; otherwise strong temptation will involve us in the guilt of the basest equivocation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—The enemies of the church craftily seize their opportunity when their principal opponents are out of the way. And when God has left a country, it is easy for enemies to penetrate into the very heart of it. How hard it is for saints to act honestly when they have wandered out of God's way! Whether they take part with friends or foes, they are apt to be ensnared. But dreadful is the case of men who are abandoned by God, and deprived of his prophets and ministers. And they who refuse to seek God, while he may be found, will cry in vain when he refuses to answer, and have their troubles doubly aggravated by the terrors of an evil conscience. When men throw off their cloak of religion, they ordinarily abandon themselves to the very abominations against which they had professed much zeal. Works of darkness hate the light: and many who have cast off the fear of God, are ashamed to appear so bad as they are before men. But it is shocking for persons, amidst gospel light, to enter into leagues or fellowship with devils;—absurd to profess hatred to Satan in others, and yet indulge him in our heart; dangerous to flee to the devourer for relief, when the God of grace hath cast us off;—and stupid to fear the laws of men, and the wrath of a wicked king, more than the authority and eternal vengeance of almighty God. But God often gives up the strong and devilish delusions the men who have no pleasure in his truth: and those who undervalue the Lord's prophets, at last get devils in their stead. Cold comfort indeed will the devil administer to his servants, even in their greatest distress. But they have themselves only to blame for all the miseries to which they are reduced; for vain is their knocking when the door of mercy is once shut. Having departed from God, they have forsaken their own mercies. A miserable life, and more miserable death, are all the portion they can expect. And when once a man is given up to despair, he rushes on to his own destruction, as the horse rushes into the battle.

6 And David was [f] greatly distressed: for the people spake of [h] stoning him; because the soul of all the people was [*] grieved, every man for his sons and for his daughters: but David [i] encouraged himself in the LORD his God.[†]

7 And David said to Abiathar the priest, Ahimelech's son, I pray thee, [k] bring me hither the ephod. And Abiathar brought thither the ephod to David.

8 And David inquired at the LORD, saying, Shall I pursue after this troop? shall I overtake them? [l] And he answered him, Pursue; for thou shalt surely overtake them, and without fail recover all.

9 ¶ So David went, he and the [m] six hundred men that were with him, and came to the brook Besor,[‡] where those that were left behind stayed.

10 But David pursued, he and four hundred men: (for two hundred abode behind, which were so faint that they could not go over the brook Besor.)

11 And they [n] found an Egyptian in the field, and brought him to David, and gave him bread, and he did eat; and they made him drink water;

12 And they gave him a piece of a cake of figs, and two clusters of raisins: and [o] when he had eaten, his spirit came again to him; for he had eaten no bread, nor drunk any water, three days and three nights.

13 And David said unto him, To whom belongest thou? and whence art thou? And he said, I am a young man of Egypt, servant to an Amalekite; and my master left me,[§] [p] because three days agone I fell sick.

14 We made an invasion upon [q] the south of the Cherethites,[‖] and upon the coast which belongeth to Judah, and upon the south of Caleb; and we burnt Ziklag with fire.

15 And David said to him, Canst thou bring me down to this company? And he said, [r] Swear unto me by God, that thou wilt neither kill me, nor deliver me into the hands of my master, and I will bring thee down to this company.

16 ¶ And when he had brought him down, behold, they were spread abroad upon all the earth, [s] eating, and drinking, and dancing,[*] because of all the great spoil that they had taken out of the land of the Philistines, and out of the land of Judah.

17 And David [t] smote them from the twilight even unto the evening of [†] the next day: and there escaped not a man of them, save four hundred young men, which rode upon camels, and fled.

[§] There was much sound policy as well as generosity in this act of David. It is probable he sent the cattle taken from the Amalekites, which he had himself little means, if any, of keeping. Besides, had he brought them back, they might have produced war with the Philistines. He enriches his country, while he impoverishes her enemies and attaches his friends.—Ed.

22 ¶ Then answered all the wicked men and [a] men of Belial,[†] of [‡] those that went with David, and said, Because they went not with us, we will not give them ought of the spoil that we have recovered, save to every man his wife and his children, that they may lead them away, and depart.

23 Then said David, Ye shall not do so, [b] my brethren, with that which the LORD hath given us, [c] who hath preserved us, and delivered the company that came against us into our hand.

of God at last into the most perplexing circumstances. David is now upon the point of either proving a murderer of the Israelites, whom God had anointed him to save, or a traitor to the Philistines, who had so kindly protected him. But God takes more care to preserve his people's integrity and honour than they do themselves: and often gives them a decent escape from the nets in which they had sinfully entangled themselves. That which is intended for our disgrace often proves a distinguishing mercy; and it is honourable if the messengers of our disgrace are able and ready to witness for our uprightness.

entail murder and ravage on his own subjects. When we go abroad, we know not what scenes of mourning may meet us at our return. And, the more comfort we promise ourselves in the creature, the more bitter will be our disappointment. We had need to be always in the way of our duty, as it is only in that we can expect God's protection to ourselves and families. He can marvellously restrain the rage of the most barbarous, and save his people alive in their hands. How hard is it to bear heavy trials without fretting against the Lord, and raging against those who imprudently occasion them! But circumstances can never be so bad but there is ground for faith in the promises of God. To encourage ourselves in him as our God, is the surest and shortest method of relief from our troubles: and they are generally great saints indeed, who become such by means of great sufferings. If, by neglecting to consult God, we have formerly plunged ourselves into troubles, we ought the more earnestly to ask his direction, in order to get out of them. He can at once arrest the adversary, and conduct us to them. Even discouraging providences in our way should but excite and animate our faith to press forward. Cruelty, even to servants, entails misery on the guilty, while compassion and charity usually bring their own reward. We know not how much good or evil the weakest instruments may do us. Great events often depend on small and unexpected accidents. Carnal security is the great mean of a sinner's destruction. The dance and song often hand them forward into everlasting fire; when destruction cometh upon them suddenly in an instant. Such followers of Christ as are willing, but weak, ought to be comforted under their infirmities: but the heart of the covetous is hardened against the sufferings of the needy: and it is neither the best companions, nor the best instructions, that will change the hearts of men of Belial: but rulers must oblige such to comply with the ministrations of equity. Such as have shown us kindness deserve a recompense when God puts it in our power: nay, liberality in compliments is, on some occasions, great prudence, and an urgent letter of recommendation. But in a time of need, it will require all engagements to constrain us to our duty.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—In what fearful destruction Israel's desire of a king, and Saul's disobedience to God, issue at last! Dreadful is the case of professors when once the Lord has abandoned them. He turns our comforts into crosses; and the death of our children in our punishment, may render our own doubly miserable. In what awful sovereignty God slays the righteous with the wicked! All things here come alike to all; but eternity will make the difference. God in righteous vengeance suffers them to be their own murderers, who had murdered his priests, or attempted to murder his favourites. But horrid, indeed, is that pride which makes men rush into eternal misery, in order to escape a little infamy. In what shame, and disgrace, and misery, do unsanctified honours terminate! And fearful is the fate of those who court the devil's friendship and direction. But gratitude, even to the wicked, must never be neglected.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE FIRST BOOK OF SAMUEL.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. An Ephrathite.—Not that Elkanah was an Ephraimite, that is, of the tribe of Ephraim, but merely a dweller in one of the Levitical cities within the bounds of that tribe; for Elkanah was a Levite, and of the family of Kohath, 1 Chr. 6. 34. & 33. 27, 28.——Ver. 9. Temple of the Lord.—From mention of the temple, some have supposed that this book was not written till after the time of Solomon. But as the temple is mentioned (Ps. 5. 7. & 25. 4.) in the time of David, no inference, as to time, can be drawn from the use of the word.——Ver. 11. Remember me, and not forget thine handmaid.—These are not equivalent expressions, approaching tautology, but expressions in which the thoughts vary from each other with the delicacy with which the co-mingling colours in a painting vary, yet concur. She pleads, (1) Her affliction. (2) Entreats remembrance of her without any characteristic. (3) Prays not to be forgotten as an handmaid, a servant—all just arguments of prayer, which she had a right to plead with God, to whom she looks in faith, through sacrifice.——I will give him unto the Lord all the days of his life.—As a Kohathite, (see ver. 1.) he was devoted to the Lord from 25 to 50, but his mother devotes him from his birth, and all his days after 50. An emblem of true Christian education, in which a parent "trains up a child in the way he should go," and of believing perseverance, for, "when such an one is old, he will not depart from it."

CHAP. II. Ver. 2. There is none holy as the Lord.—Holiness in God is his entire separation from evil, and his entire devotedness of zeal to his own glory. In God, holiness is original; in man, derivative. None can therefore be holy as the Lord—men become holy because he is holy.——Ver. 3. By him actions are weighed.—The idea of actions being weighed, as in the balance of God, is one well calculated to lead us to examine ourselves. Whether we will hear, or whether we will forbear, God will weigh.—Note. How needful then to pray, God be merciful to us sinners! How blessed our refuge in the "blood that cleanseth from all sin!"——Ver. 9. The wicked shall be silent in darkness.—"This is the condemnation, that light has come into the world, but men have loved darkness;" that is, the banishment of God and his truth from all their thoughts, wherefore, in judgment, when their actions are weighed, they are cast into outer darkness. There, while infidelity and pride are silent for ever, their inheritance is "weeping and gnashing of teeth."

CHAP. III. Ver. 13. His sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not.—

Digitized by Google

The charge against Eli, is his knowledge of his sons' misconduct, and neglect of restraint. He gave excellent advice, (see ch. 2. 23.) but it wanted determination and energy. He had allowed his sons to outgrow his authority, and now he pleads with them in vain.——Ver. 14. The iniquity of Eli's house shall not be purged.—There is no obstruction to the personal salvation of any of Eli's descendants; it lies altogether against their official restoration as a house, and it stands as a warning for ever, to every abuser of religious ordinances, and official influence.——Ver. 17. God do so to thee, and more also, if thou hide any thing.—Eli anticipated evil, he remembered the man of God, (ch. 2. 27.) his conscience smote him, his sons grieved him, he cannot expect good for them, as he knows no good of them, and he is anxious to hear the worst. Therefore, he says, "God do so," &c.; that is, let God inflict all the judgments, and more, upon you than he has threatened against me, if you do not tell me the truth.—Note. This was not an imprecation, but a legal form of appeal to God; for, be it remembered, the same words may be a blasphemy or a prayer, according to place, circumstances, and person who utters them.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 3. It may save us out of the hand of our enemy.—Nothing is more common than to trust in emblems rather than realities. The ark here obtains the confidence due to God alone. So Christians sometimes look upon prayer, baptism, and the Lord's supper, as able to save them, whereas they are but guides to the "Lamb of God," and mere dead elements without the Spirit of life.——Ver. 18. Made mention of the ark of God, that he fell from off the seat.—Eli seems a man sincerely pious, but, through mistaken tenderness, weakly pliable; by over indulgence rendering his sons regardless of his parental admonitions, and so bringing them to an ignominious end, his country to ruin, his religion to disgrace, and his own gray hairs with sorrow to the grave. His piety, however, seems predominant; for he bears the whole catalogue of national and family calamities till the capture of the ark is mentioned—his heart can bear no more—he falls fainting, and dies—a monumental warning to parents, church rulers, and governors, and a melancholy illustration of the fact, that one practical imperfection of temper, or management, may neutralize or destroy the effect of many excellencies.

CHAP. V. Ver. 5. Nor any that come into Dagon's house, tread on the threshold of Dagon.—An acknowledged proof of the power of Jehovah, but which the Philistines, blinded by their idolatry, regard not as supreme and omnipotent, but only as a little, and perhaps for a little time, superior to that of Dagon. Nay, such is the subtilty of Satan, (for the heathen sacrificed to devils,) (1 Cor. 10. 20.), that he turns the disgrace to a new source of idolatry, and teaches them to reverence, to worship, the very threshold where their idol lay prostrate and broken.—Note. Do not the idolaters of riches, ambition, and pleasures, still imitate the foolish Philistines, and worship their idols still, even when convinced of their unsatisfying vanity?——Ver. 6. Emerods.—Some species of epidemic accompanied with ulcers, the precise nature of which is not described.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 4. Five golden emerods, and five golden mice.—Such votive offerings have been, and still are, common both in heathen countries, and amongst superstitious Christians. If it did not previously exist, here is the origin of the custom; and, at all events, this is the earliest historic notice of a practice that flatters human vanity, and indulges will-worship, while it affects to honour God.—Note. Almost all the superstitions that have disfigured and degraded Christianity, may be clearly traced to their origin in heathenism.——Ver. 19. Smote of the people fifty thousand and threescore and ten men.—How so many persons could be collected into a small village appears so strange, as to be considered impossible. Hence every effort of commentators has been made to reduce the number, and so reconcile it with probability. Josephus estimates the people smitten at merely 70. The Syriac and Arabic translations, at 5,070. Others propose to insert a letter, and thereby reduce the number to 50 out of 1,000. These efforts, however, are vain, against the almost universal authority of MSS. and translations. But, after all, are not the difficulties totally artificial, the fault not of the text, but the work of the commentators themselves? Let the text, as it will justly bear, be translated and pointed thus:—"And he smote the men of Beth-shemesh, because they had looked into the ark; and he smote of the people 50,070 men: and the people lamented because the LORD had smitten of the people with a great slaughter." Now the text says, God "smote the men of Beth-shemesh, because they had looked into the ark," but does not state how many. Then the text adds, that "he smote of the people," that is, not of the Beth-shemites in particular, but of the Israelites generally, (Beth-shemites inclusive) 50,070 men, but does not state during what space of time the judgment continued. Now, what can be more natural than that, when the news of the return of the ark to Beth-shemesh would be noised abroad, there should be a vast concourse of the people, day after day, to hear and to see. Would it not be considered an act of patriotism and religion combined, to go on a pilgrimage to visit the recovered centre of their holy services? Where then is the difficulty of comprehending how, in a few days, and, for aught that is said, it may have taken weeks or months, not merely 50,070, but five times 50,070 may have visited Beth-shemesh? Then, it is not said 50,070 died, but only that so many of the people were smitten, most probably, by the Philistine epidemic and emerods. And, when it is added, that "the people lamented, because the Lord had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter," it is not said how many of those who were smitten by the disease actually died in the slaughter, but only that it was great. And now, should any insist that the whole 50,070 must have died; and granting this to have actually been the case, let it only be remembered that these are not asserted to have been Beth-shemites, but of the people, while the time of the judgment is not specified; and if 50,070 did perish in the epidemic contracted at Beth-shemesh, and carried from Dan to Beer-sheba by the pilgrim visitants, the experience of all ages can exemplify greater ravages, although men may not have seen, or acknowledged in them, as the sacred writers did, the immediate finger of God.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. Sanctified Eleazar.—Eleazar was sanctified; that is, appointed and dedicated to keep the ark; but the public services of feasts and solemnities were intermitted or suppressed during the ascendancy of the Philistines.——Ver. 4. Served the Lord only.—Samuel announces the very principle enforced by our Lord, (Mat. 6. 24.) "no man can serve two masters;" and therefore requires, both as a test of sincerity, and a means of reformation, the utter putting away of the idols, Baalim and Ashtaroth; and a return to the sole worship of JEHOVAH.—Note. The same obstruction stands in the way of revival with Christians that stood in the way of Israel; Baalim—lordly passions, such as pride, ambition, false honour; Ashtaroth—fleshly affections, such as gluttony, drunkenness, licentiousness; all these must be cast out of the heart, where the Spirit of God resides, 2 Cor. 7. 1.——Ver. 6. Drew water, and poured it out before the Lord.—According to some; shed tears, and poured out; that is, their hearts in penitential sorrow "before the Lord;" others consider the pouring out of the water emblematic of penitence; but as there was no ceremonial law appointed for such drawing and outpouring of water, we are slow to admit an act of will-worship, where a Levitical rite will account for what is done. Is it not, therefore, to be considered as the extempore adoption of the laver, an essential preparative for the sacrifice that Samuel was about to offer? Comp. Exod. 30. 17—21. with 1 Sam. 7. 9.——Ver. 8. Cry unto the Lord our God for us.—Observe here the spiritual use of temporal calamities. The service of God is forsaken for Baalim and Ashtaroth, till the oppression of the Philistines compels them to cry to JEHOVAH.——Ver. 9. Samuel took a sucking lamb, and offered it for a burnt-offering.—Samuel, as appears from chap. 1. ver. 1, was not a priest, though a Levite; he could not therefore legally perform an act of sacrifice, nor is it necessary to suppose he did so in his own person; for according to the language of Scripture, (see Lev. 2. 1—14. & 3. 1, 3, 7, 9, 12.) he offers a sacrifice who furnishes it to the priest, which is all that Samuel, as a well-instructed Levite and prophet would do.——Ver. 17. There he built an altar unto the Lord.—Not as a second or rival to Shiloh, for that would have been illegal; but Shiloh having been deserted since the capture of the ark, Samuel, in virtue of his prophetic office, reinstitutes the tabernacle' service at Ramah.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 2. They were judges in Beer-sheba.—They were deputy-judges in the southern district, most probably because that frontier was much exposed to Arab incursions, and required a stronger executive than the south-east, and other parts where the Amorites were at peace.——Ver. 3. Took bribes, and perverted judgment.—Samuel, educated under the over-mild regime of Eli, seems to have fallen into Eli's error in the management of his sons; and, though their crimes were not identical with those of Hophni and Phinehas, which arose from sensuality, and were therefore more debasing to the man, yet the crimes of Joel and Abiah, arising from unprincipled covetousness, were equally degrading to the judges.—Note. The determined honesty with which the Scriptures relate these blots in the family of Samuel, affords another of the many similar evidences of the divine origin of the Scriptures. Nothing could have been more easy than the suppression of this statement; and had the subject been in the hands of a mere secular historian, the world had never heard of the guilt of his hero's sons. But the Scriptures have no heroes; they have no narrative but truth, the whole truth; and no end but the glory of God.——Ver. 7. They have rejected me, that I should not reign over them.—Neither God nor Samuel his prophet found any fault with the people for seeking a king, that being provided for in the divine law, Deut. 17. 14—20. The displeasure of both arose, (1) From the total want of piety in not consulting God by his high priest or prophet. (2) From the sight of the people's folly in seeking to model their government on the plan of the wicked and idolatrous nations around them. (3) From the virtual rejection of God, both as judge and king, See ver. 19, 20.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 7. What shall we bring the man?—No man, in Eastern countries, ever approaches a superior without a present—it is a sample of the manners of the time and country, and not an evidence of covetousness in the prophet.——Ver. 12. There is a sacrifice of the people to-day in the high place.—Why the ark was permitted to remain in Kirjath-jearim, does not appear; and that Shiloh had ceased to be the place of sacrifice is historically evident, though the fact is not recorded. The city where Samuel now was, seems from ver. 6. to have been his ordinary residence, and that was Ramah, where, as God's prophet, he had localized the national worship.

CHAP. X. Ver. 2. When thou art departed from me to-day.—Were the office of king, as in the times of the peace and prosperity of a nation, an office of honour and ease, we might wonder at the pains taken by Samuel to convince Saul that he was divinely appointed. But such were the times, that as Moses was reluctant to undertake the deliverance out of Egypt, so was Saul reluctant to attempt a contest with the Philistines. Hence the necessity of such evidence of a divine call as would quite remove his scruples and encourage him in his office.——Ver. 5. Hill of God, where is the garrison of the Philistines.—The precise place is not known; but the state of things alluded to is still common in the East; viz., a garrison of foreign troops in a citadel, to keep the native inhabitants in order or subjection.——Ver. 22. Hid himself among the stuff.—The baggage of the people who had come to the great politico-religious assembly of the tribes.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 4. Lifted up their voices, and wept.—Let not these people be accused of childish timidity, but rather let them be honoured for brotherly sympathy.—Note. It is twice recorded that Jesus wept; should not Christians follow his example? Jer. 9. 1.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 21. And turn ye not aside.—There are certain erroneous and sinful contracts, that, when once entered into, cannot, without greater sin, be recalled or rescinded; and he that enters into such contract, must bear the consequences—for the moral sanction may abide, binding to the contract, when the folly of the contract, and the sin that led to it are clearly discovered. The Scripture rule then is—repent of the sin, but be faithful to the moral obligation. This principle may be exemplified in the promise of allegiance to an ill-arranged government, and in thoughtless contracts of marriage.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 5. Thirty thousand chariots.—In some versions the number of chariots is 3000 instead of 30,000, and this reading is supported by contrasting so many chariots with so few horsemen; and certainly a very slight change in a Hebrew word would produce the change of numbers. But even 3000 chariots is beyond all example in war. Pharaoh had 600; Jabin 900, (Judg. 4. 3.) David took 1000, (2 Sam. 8. 3.) and, so far as profane history is to be regarded, the chariots in the greatest armies were comparatively few. The word translated chariots, however, is certainly sometimes taken for the men fighting in, or with them, 2 Sam. 10. 18. 1 Kings 20. 21. 1 Chron. 19. 18. Now, as we can neither tell how many men fought in the chariot, nor how many attended for its support, it is impossible for us to decide how many were called a chariot in these passages; allowing however, barely three for the chariot itself, and adding body servants for the charioteers, and grooms and foragers for the horses, in Eastern proportion; and adding to these a party of foot-soldiers, absolutely necessary for the support of the chariot, it would not be too much to allow 30 men to each chariot, and this would give merely 1000 chariots in all.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1. He told not his father.—This was not only a military, but a filial fault in Jonathan, for which it is more than probable from the whole history of Saul, that his conduct afforded his amiable and valiant son but too much excuse. —Note. If there be any one thing, which, next to piety, it is important for parents to cultivate in their children, it is that of filial confidence in their wisdom, temper, and integrity. For want of this, Saul nearly lost his son, and finally ruined his family, and lost his kingdom. ——Ver. 26. No man put his hand to his mouth, for the people feared the oath.—This surprising self-denial out of regard to Saul's curse, may, no doubt, be justly traced to superstition; for the curse causeless will not come: still, it is a superstition nearly akin to what is good, that solemn respect for an oath of which so many examples occur in the history of Israel. See Josh. 9. 19. —Note. Superstition is always better than infidelity; superstition is an erroneous addition to some good principle admitted; infidelity is the denial of every good principle, and the substitution either of nothing or of evil.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 9. Saul and the people spared Agag.—Most likely for ransom; as avarice seems to have taken strong hold of their minds, and triumph does not appear, from history, to have become an object of national pride.——Ver. 11. It repenteth me.—When God is said to "repent," it is not in any accommodation either to human weakness, human conceptions, or human language. To admit that God, at any time, ceases to speak plain, simple truth, is, in principle, to undermine the whole Scriptures. For, if the ordinary rules of thought, facts, and language, are twisted or violated in one place, why not in any other? And if, in any others, then, where? just wheresoever fancy pleases. But God gives no such dangerous scope to fancy. Repentance is a mere change of mind. Now when God, from regard to his courage, &c., raised Saul to the throne, he had first a mind to do so; and when, for his sins, he was determined to pull him down and set up another, he had also first a mind to do so; but, so far as Saul was concerned, this was a change of mind, while yet the Lord changeth not. But is it not said, "He is not the son of man, that he should repent?" True. He does not repent as a son of man repents; that is, turning from sin. He repents as God repents—that is, changing the kind of his providence, as wisdom, justice, and mercy, require, to suit different circumstances and persons.——Ver. 35. Samuel mourned for Saul.—This is not surprising on two accounts, (1) Saul, with all his faults, possessed many fine qualities. (2) Nothing can more move the sorrow of a good man, than to see a fellow creature running, as Saul was, headlong to destruction.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 17. Take now for thy brethren an ephah of this parched corn. —In all countries where standing armies were not organized, the military retainers were bound to provide their own subsistence, and to follow their chiefs or king to the field for a certain number of days, when called upon, but no longer.——Ver. 52. The men of Israel and of Judah arose.—In ver. 48, as well as in this, the mention of arising gives a curious internal evidence of the Eastern origin of the Bible. The eastern Asiatics sit much more than the people of western Europe, many work sitting, who, at correspondent trades, stand in Europe; bargains are made sitting, and the walking for pleasure, in which Europeans delight, is almost totally unknown. Here the whole army seems to have continued sitting, to witness the encounter that was to decide for slavery or liberty.——Ver. 55. When Saul saw David.—From ver. 54. to ver. 6. of the next chapter, is rejected by Boothroyd and A. Clarke, as an interpolation, on the ground of the improbability of the narrative. Such criticism is worse than dangerous. It sets an example that justifies every cavil of infidelity against the sacred history. Besides, there is not a circumstance narrated in the least degree improbable.——Whose son is this youth.—Where is the improbability of any man forgetting a youth when near manhood, whom he had known when a boy, and whom, in the intermediate time, he had not seen?

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 11. Saul cast the javelin.—The javelin is a short spear, generally from three to four feet long. In preparing to throw it, the hand is opened, and the javelin, without being grasped, is balanced in the open between the thumb and forefinger. An apparently slight vibration backward and forward is given to the hand, and the javelin is projected to a great distance, and with a force that appears quite astonishing when compared with the slightness of the effort. Saul, as is common in unsettled countries, appears to have been constantly armed.—— Ver. 13. Saul removed him from him, and made him his captain over a thousand.—Such descents of office as David here appears to have experienced, are, at this day, common in the East, and just because so common, they imply no disgrace.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 20. They saw the company of the prophets prophesying.— Engaged in the solemn service of God—the venerable Samuel standing, in ripened godliness, as head of the prophetic college, and the divine sympathy with which the military messengers of Saul are successively seized, present one of the most lively pictures of triumphant piety any where exhibited to the eye, while he that knows the heart, ascribes the triumph directly to the Spirit of the Lord.——Ver. 24. Is Saul also among the prophets.—This is the second time surprise has been expressed at Saul putting on any decided appearance of religion.—Note. Popular prejudice cannot be right; but where there is no prejudice, popular opinion seldom errs in its estimate of public characters. Even children detect character with a perspicacity perfectly astonishing. Indeed there is no valley nor shadow of death where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 5. David answered the priest, &c.—The conduct of David in practising deception, admits of no defence; and David, when more enlightened by the Spirit of God, and more dead to the world, would himself have been the last to attempt such defence. The record illustrates the sinfulness of man, and the weakness of David's faith, while the pardon of it displays the long-suffering and mercy of God. See note on chap. 21. 6.——Ver. 7. The chiefest of the herdmen that belonged to Saul.—The state of Israel admitting scarcely of any revenue for the support of the king's dignity, or defraying the unavoidable expense of the public service, the king must become a large proprietor of cattle, the staple of the country; and these required regular officers for their management, of whom Doeg was the chief.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 2. There were with him about four hundred men.—David has been much censured by infidels on account of the character of his army. This censure is without reason. A man in distress is not necessarily a wicked man, nor has the original word any such unfavourable meaning. Neither is every man in debt necessarily a dishonest man—and the refugees in debt may have merely fled from slavery to which the law subjected them and their families. Nor is every discontented man necessarily a bad subject—indeed, how any wise man could have been otherwise than discontented with the wicked government of Saul, is a problem that infidels should solve, before they accuse David of affording such men a refuge from Saul's misgovernment.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 29. En-gedi.—A city of Judah about 30 miles south-east of Jerusalem, and 3 miles west from the Dead sea. The surrounding mountains, like those of Maon, are full of caves. Its very ruins have disappeared, but the district is still famed for the production of grapes.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 1. Samuel died.—The manner of the Scriptures in relating the death of the greatest characters, is well worthy of remark. There is no ostentation, no fulsome panegyric; the bare event is related, and left to make its impression on the heart.——David arose.—David and his band appear to have attended the funeral, Saul having privily acknowledged him as heir to the throne.

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 9. Left neither man nor woman alive.—We are not here informed of the character and habits of these hordes—nor of any provocation they had given David; but there is no reason to conclude they were better than their ancestors, whom Joshua, for their enormities in sinning, was commanded to expel or extirpate. Infidels, in accusing David, assume, without the shadow of evidence, that David had no cause for aggression; a conclusion which the recorded propensities and habits of these people, as well as David's previous and subsequent character, decidedly contradict.

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 12. And when the woman saw Samuel, she cried with a loud voice, &c.—Every interpretation of the venerable Brown is entitled to respect, and the marginal note is not merely the popular opinion, but is largely supported by most learned authorities. Nevertheless, regard to what we believe truth, compels us to express a different opinion, on the following grounds:—(1) The possessors of familiar spirits, whether such possession be considered a reality or pretence, were utterly condemned by God. See note on ver. 3. (2) This woman tells practically a lie; for she pretends to be able to bring up any one from the dead, and that, not the appearance, but the very person—a thing impossible, Eccl. 12. 7. Rev. 1. 18. (3) Saul had already discovered himself, (see note on ver. 10.) and she pretends not to know him. (4) The reasoning in ver. 12, is false; for even had Samuel come up, that did not prove the querist was Saul. (5) She tells another lie; for she not only reports that she saw "gods ascending out of the earth," but affirms Samuel came out of it also; now he was buried at Ramah, not at En-dor. (6) Saul did not look at the pretended apparition, but bowed to the ground. (7) The pretended Samuel, (for no doubt there was an accomplice of the Pythoness to represent him,) admits her power to bring him up from the dead—another falsehood, seeing it contradicts the aforesaid Scriptures, and ascribes to a condemned sinner, the power of giving life —the prerogative of God alone. But if all were imposture, why does the narrative speak of Samuel as if he were really raised? Because it records what occurre as matter of history, leaving the history to explain itself. But if the apparition were not Samuel, how could it foretell the death of Saul and his sons? Because the event was very probable, yet the answer equivocal; for whether Saul and his sons died or survived, the words "thou shalt be with me," could have been pleaded as true; for Samuel, according to the Pythoness, was either dead or alive as might best suit her purpose.

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 10. Ashtaroth.—The placing of such trophies in temples has been customary in all countries and ages. David himself had placed the sword of Goliath in the tabernacle, where he got it at the time of his flight from Saul.

CHAPTER I.

(1) An Amalekite brings Saul's crown and bracelet to David: 1—10. (2) David orders this Amalekite to be killed, as one who boasted of helping Saul to despatch himself: 11—16. (3) David's elegy on Saul and Jonathan: 17—27.

A. M. 2948. B. C. 1056.

NOW it came to pass after the death of Saul, [a] when David was returned from the slaughter of the Amalekites,* and David had [b] abode two days in Ziklag;

2 It came even to pass [c] on the third day, that, behold, a man came out of the camp from Saul, [d] with his clothes rent, and earth upon his head: and so it was, when he came to David, that he fell to the earth, and did obeisance.

3 And David said unto him, From whence comest thou? And he said unto him, Out of the camp of Israel am I escaped.

4 And David said unto him, [e] † How went the matter? I pray thee, tell me. And he answered, [f] That the people are fled from the battle, and many of the people also are fallen and dead; and Saul and Jonathan his son are dead also.

5 And David said unto the young man that told him, [g] How knowest thou that Saul and Jonathan his son be dead?

6 And the young man that told him said, As ‡I happened by chance§ upon [h] mount Gilboa, behold, Saul leaned upon his spear; and, lo, the chariots and horsemen followed hard after him.

7 And when he looked behind him, he saw me, and called unto me: and I answered, ‖ Here am I.

8 And he said unto me, Who art thou? And I answered him, I am an [i] Amalekite.

9 He said unto me again, Stand, I pray thee, upon me, and slay me; for *anguish is come upon me, because my life is yet whole in me.

10 So I stood upon him, and [k] slew him, because I was sure that he could not live after that he was fallen: and I took the crown† that was upon his head, and the bracelet that was on his arm,* and have brought them hither unto my lord.

11 ¶ Then David took hold on his clothes, and [l] rent them,† and likewise all the men that were with him.

12 And they [m] mourned and wept, and fasted until even, for Saul, and for Jonathan his son, and for the people of the LORD, and for the house of Israel; because they were fallen by the sword.

13 ¶ And David said unto the young man that told him, Whence art thou? And he answered, I am the son of a stranger, an Amalekite.

14 And David said unto him, [n] How wast thou not afraid to stretch forth thine hand to destroy the LORD's anointed?

15 And David [o] called one of the young men, and said, Go near, and fall upon him. And he smote him that he died.‡

16 And David said unto him, [p] Thy blood be upon thy head: for thy mouth hath testified against thee, saying, I have slain the LORD's anointed.

17 ¶ And David [q] lamented with this lamentation over Saul, and over Jonathan his son;

18 (Also he bade them [r] teach the children of Judah the use of the bow;§ behold, it is written [s] in the book [t] of Jasher;)

19 [u] The beauty of Israel is slain upon thy high places: [v] how are the mighty fallen!

20 [x] Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon; lest [y] the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph.

21 [z] Ye mountains of Gilboa, let there be no dew, neither let there be rain, upon you, nor fields of offerings: for there the shield of the mighty is vilely cast away, the shield of Saul, as though he had not been [a] anointed with oil.

* It seems probable that the events related in the last two chapters of 1 Samuel, did not take place in the order of time in which they are placed; and especially, that David's victory over the Amalekites was about the time of the battle of Gilboa, and, his return subsequent. Such anachronisms are unavoidable in history. —Ed.

§ There is no such contradiction as infidels have asserted, between this account of Saul's death, and that contained in 1 Sam. xxxi. It is not, however, uncommon for men to take to themselves the credit, if we may so speak, of wicked actions which they wanted either the courage or the opportunity of achieving. —Ed.

§ The words use of being supplied to make out the sense of the translators, some have supposed to be improperly inserted; and that the bow is the title of the elegy. But the sense of the translators seems the true one; for Saul having been wounded by the Philistine archers, (see 1 Sam. 31. 3.) and the whole battle having probably been gained by them, an ordinance for teaching the use of the bow seems naturally connected with such a national calamity. —Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—How glorious is it to be thoroughly mortified to all worldly advancements, even when a kingdom is promised! He that believeth does not make haste. But base minds readily measure others by themselves; who, for the sake of favour or gain, will blemish their character, if not endanger their life. How striking are the judgments of God! Saul spared the Amalekites, when God commanded him to kill them, and thereby forfeited his crown. An Amalekite now boasts that he had killed Saul, and brings his crown and bracelet to David. How often are men so fond of their marks of dignity, as thereby to endanger their 22 From the blood of the slain, from the fat of the mighty, the bow of Jonathan turned not back, and the sword of Saul returned not empty.

23 Saul and Jonathan were lovely and [b] pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided: they were [c] swifter than eagles, they were stronger than lions.

AND it came to pass after this, that David [a] inquired of the LORD,* saying, Shall I go up into any of the cities of Judah? And the LORD said unto him, Go up. And David said, Whither shall I go up? And he said, Unto [b] Hebron.

2 So David went up thither, and [c] his two wives also, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail, Nabal's wife, the Carmelite.

10 Ish-bosheth, Saul's son, was forty years old when he began to reign over Israel, and reigned [r] two years: but the house of Judah followed David.

11 (And [s] the ‖ time that David was king in Hebron over the house of Judah was seven years and six months.)

12 ¶ And Abner the son of Ner, and the servants of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, * went out from Mahanaim to † Gibeon.†

13 And [u] Joab the son of Zeruiah, and the servants of David, went out, and met [x] together by the pool of Gibeon: and they sat down, the one on the one side of the pool, and the other on the other side of the pool.

life! But sad anguish seizes on departing sinners. And it is mad to flee to death as a relief, when hell follows after. It is proper to lament the death of our relations, however wicked some of them have been; and to punish murderers, whatever friendship they may pretend. Death should wipe out the injuries which have been done to us. And let us speak nothing, but in commendation, unless when duty forces us to it. But let the triumphing of the wicked over the cause of God be always grievous to us. In fine, let this song teach us generosity towards our injurers; gratitude towards our steady friends; and a deep concern for the honour of our God, and the welfare of our country.

25 ¶ And the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together after Abner, and became one troop, and stood on the top of an hill.[a]

26 Then Abner called to Joab, and said, Shall the sword devour for ever? knowest thou not that it will be bitterness in the latter end? how long shall it be then ere thou bid the people return [i] from following their brethren?

27 And Joab said, As God liveth, [k] unless thou hadst spoken, surely then [†] in the morning the people had [‡] gone up every one from following his brother.[§]

28 So Joab blew a trumpet, and all the people stood still, and pursued after Israel no more, neither fought they any more.

NOW there was [a] long war between the house of Saul and the house of David: but [b] David waxed stronger and stronger, and the house of Saul waxed weaker and weaker.

2 ¶ And unto David [c] were sons born in Hebron:[*] and his first-born was [d] Amnon, of Ahinoam the Jezreelitess;

3 And his second, [e] Chileab, of Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite; and the third, [f] Absalom, the son of Maacah, the daughter of [g] Talmai king of [h] Geshur;

4 And the fourth, [i] Adonijah, the son of Haggith; and the fifth, Shephatiah, the son of Abital;

5 And the sixth, Ithream, by Eglah, David's [†] wife. These were born to David in Hebron.

6 ¶ And it came to pass, while there was war between the house of Saul and the house of David, that Abner made [k] himself strong for the house of Saul.

7 And Saul had a concubine, whose name was [l] Rizpah, the daughter of Aiah: and Ish-bosheth said to Abner, Wherefore hast thou [m] gone in unto my father's concubine?[‡]

8 Then was Abner [n] very wroth for the words of Ish-bosheth, and said, Am I a [o] dog's head, which against Judah do show kindness this day unto the house of Saul thy father, to his brethren, and to his friends, and have not delivered thee into the hand of David, that thou chargest me to-day with a fault concerning this woman?

9 [p] So do God to Abner, and more also, except, as the LORD hath [q] sworn to David, even so I do to him;

10 To translate the kingdom from the house of Saul, and to set up the throne of David over Israel and over Judah, [r] from Dan even to Beer-sheba.

11 And he could not answer Abner a word again, because he feared him.

12 ¶ And Abner sent messengers to David on his behalf, saying, [s] Whose is the land? saying also, [t] Make thy league with me, and, behold, my hand shall be with thee, to bring about all Israel unto thee.

13 ¶ And he said, Well; I will make a league with thee: but one thing I require of thee, [§] that is, [u] Thou shalt not see my face, except thou first bring Michal, [l] Saul's daughter, when thou comest to see my face.

14 And David sent messengers to Ish-bosheth, Saul's son, saying, Deliver me [x] my wife Michal, which I espoused to me for an hundred foreskins of the Philistines.

15 And Ish-bosheth sent, and took her from her husband, even [y] from Phaltiel the son of Laish.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—It is proper to commence every important project with solemn prayer to God. Such as wait upon God for direction shall be led in the right way to their kingdom; but ordinarily their advancement is gradual. Such as shared with us in our sufferings should share with us in our honours. If we suffer with Christ, we shall also reign with him. Kindness to our friends, or even injurious predecessors in office, ought to be considered as an obligation conferred on ourselves. It is not enough to praise such as have well deserved; they should, if possible, be recompensed. And to have those for our friends, whose fidelity to others have been tried, is a valuable acquisition. Through great tribulation saints must arrive at their honours, and especially their heavenly throne! But how inhumane the heart to which murder and bloodshed are a sport! False notions of honour are part of the wiles which Satan uses for the destruction of mankind. And they who are forward to rush on bloodshed and war have ordinarily reason to repent their rashness before it is concluded. The qualifications that render us proud and wilful are commonly the means of our ruin. And often, when we seem ready to grasp the prize of happiness, death stops our career, and lays our big swollen hopes and honour in the dust. But even in war human blood should be spared as much as possible. Life, once lost, can never be recovered.

19 And Abner also spake in the ears of [d] Benjamin: and Abner went also to speak in the ears of David in Hebron all that seemed good to Israel, and that seemed good to the whole house of Benjamin.[‡]

20 So Abner came to David to Hebron, and twenty men with him: and [e] David made Abner, and the men that were with him, a feast.

21 And Abner said unto David, I will arise and go, and will gather [f] all Israel unto my lord the king, that they may make a league with thee, and that thou mayest reign over all that thine heart desireth. And David sent Abner away; and he went in peace.

22 ¶ And, behold, the servants of David and Joab came from pursuing a [§] troop, and brought in a great spoil with them: but Abner was not with David in Hebron; for he had sent him away, and he was gone in peace.

23 When Joab and all the host that was with him were come, they told Joab, saying, Abner the son of Ner came to the king, and he hath sent him away, and he is gone in peace.

24 Then Joab came to the king, and said, What hast thou done? [‖] behold, Abner came unto thee; why is it that thou hast sent him away, and he is [*] quite gone?

25 Thou knowest Abner the son of Ner, that he came to [g] deceive thee, and to know thy [h] going out, and thy coming in, and to know all that thou doest.

26 And when Joab was come out from David, he sent messengers after Abner, which brought him again from the well of Sirah: but David knew it not.

27 And when Abner was returned to Hebron, [i] Joab took him aside in the gate to speak with him [†] quietly, and smote him there under the fifth rib, that he died, for the blood of Asahel his brother.

28 ¶ And afterward, when David heard it, he said, I and my kingdom are [k] guiltless before the LORD for ever from the [l] blood of Abner the son of Ner:

29 [m] Let it rest on the head of Joab, and on all his father's house; and let there not fail from the house of Joab one that hath an issue, or that is a leper, or that leaneth on a staff, or that falleth on the sword, or that lacketh bread.[*]

30 So Joab and Abishai his brother [n] slew Abner, because he had slain their brother Asahel at Gibeon in the battle.

31 ¶ And David said to Joab, and to all the people that were with him, [o] Rend your clothes, and gird you with sackcloth, and mourn before Abner. And king David himself followed the [p] bier.

32 And they buried Abner in Hebron: and the king lifted up his voice, and [q] wept at the grave of Abner; and all the people wept.

33 And the king lamented over Abner, and said, [†] Died Abner as a fool dieth?

34 Thy hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters: as a man falleth before [‡] wicked men, so fellest thou.[§] And all the people [r] wept again over him.

35 And when all the people came to [s] cause David to eat meat while it was yet day, David sware, saying, [t] So do God to me, and more also, if I taste bread, or ought else, till the sun be down.

36 And all the people took notice of it, and [‖] it pleased them; as whatsoever the king did pleased all the people.

37 For all the people, and all Israel, understood that day, that it was not of the king to slay Abner the son of Ner.

38 And the king said unto his servants, Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?

39 And I am this day [u] weak, though anointed king; and these men the sons of Zeruiah be too hard for me: [*] the LORD [x] shall reward the doer of evil according to his wickedness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—It is vain to struggle against the purpose and promise of God; for sure, though gradual, are the honours and triumphs which come from above. How often might men have had as many children, and much more comfort in them, in keeping close to God's ordinance of one wife. For those things frequently prove our greatest scourges in which we promised ourselves the greatest comfort. Wicked men's folly and sin are made subservient to the fulfilment of God's promises or purposes. But rash accusation seldom issues well; and proud men can as seldom bear a reproof from those whom they have greatly obliged. Weak kings are but slaves to their own servants. And there is but little dependance to be placed on those whose zeal for our service is but to gratify their own ambition. It reflects little honour upon us when humour, not conscience, reduces us to our duty. It is indeed our duty to undeceive those whom we have imposed upon. But wicked suppressors of the truth, fighters against their conscience, and traitors to those who have trusted them, have seldom either the grace or honour to be distinguished instruments in the great works of God. While wicked men are proud enough to overbear their superiors, they are often base enough to stoop to the most detestable treachery, in order to gratify their revenge, or destroy their suspected rivals. How hard is it when kings can only mourn over crimes committed, but dare not punish them, because of the power of the guilty? Long impunity makes sinners confident. But, though murder may pass unpunished for a while, the vengeance due to it will come at last; and God will not suffer the transgressor to escape.

THEN [a] came all the tribes of Israel* to David unto Hebron, and spake, saying, Behold, we are thy [b] bone and thy flesh.

2 Also in time past, when Saul was king over us, thou wast he that [c] leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the LORD [d] said to thee, Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be a captain over Israel.[†]

3 So all the elders of Israel came to the king to Hebron; and king David [e] made a league[‡] with them in Hebron [f] before the LORD: and they [g] anointed David king over Israel.

4 ¶ David was [h] thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years.

5 [i] In Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months; and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years over all Israel and Judah.

6 ¶ And the king and his men [k] went to [l] Jerusalem unto the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land; which spake unto David, Saying, [m] Except thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither: thinking, David cannot come in hither.

7 Nevertheless David took the strong hold of Zion: [n] the same is the city of David.

8 And David said on that day, [o] Whosoever getteth up to the gutter, and smiteth the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, he shall be chief and captain. [§] Wherefore they said, The blind and the lame shall not come into the house.

9 So David dwelt in the fort, and called it, The city of David: and David built round about, from [p] Millo and inward.

10 And David [q] went on, and grew great; and the LORD God of hosts was [r] with him.

11 ¶ And [s] Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and cedar-trees, and carpenters, and masons;[‖] and they built David an house.

12 And [t] David perceived that the LORD had established him king over Israel, and that he had exalted his kingdom [u] for his people Israel's sake.

13 ¶ And David [x] took him more concubines and wives out of Jerusalem, after he was come from Hebron:* and there were yet sons and daughters born to David.

14 And [y] these be the names of those that were born unto him in Jerusalem; [z] Shammuah, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Dreadful are the effects of war; numerous and great the perils of infancy; to have escaped them unhurt is a singular mercy. God soon removes every obstacle to the fulfilment of his purpose and promise: and the most flourishing families are quickly reduced to the most weak and abject conditions. The higher men's station is, the more dangerous it is: and, when once they begin to fall, every pretended friend is ready to hasten forward their ruin, and make religion a pretext for their conduct. Very precarious is their life who have only wicked men for their guardians: but sinners' hands make the snares wherewith Ahio, the sons of Abinadab, drave the new cart.

4 And they brought it out of the house of Abinadab, which was at [g] Gibeah, accompanying the ark of God; and Ahio went before the ark.

5 And [h] David, and all the house of Israel, played before the LORD on all manner of instruments made of fir-wood; even on harps, and on psalteries, and on timbrels, and on cornets, and on cymbals.

6 ¶ And [i] when they came to [k] Nachon's thrashing-floor, Uzzah put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it; for the oxen [*] shook it.

7 [i] And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzzah; and God smote him there for his [†] error;[‡] and there he died by the ark of God.

8 And David was [m] displeased,[§] because the LORD had [‖] made a breach upon Uzzah: and he called the name of the place [*] Perez-uzzah to this day.

9 And David was [n] afraid of the LORD that day, and said, [o] How shall the ark of the LORD come to me?

10 So David would not remove the ark of the LORD unto him into the city of David; but David carried it aside into the house [p] of Obed-edom the Gittite.[†]

11 And the ark of the LORD continued in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite three months: and the LORD [q] blessed Obed-edom, and all his household.

12 ¶ And it was told king David, saying, The LORD hath blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God. [r] So David went and brought up the ark of God from the house of Obed-edom, into the city of David with gladness.

13 And it was so, [s] that, when they that bare the ark[‡] of the LORD had gone six paces, he sacrificed oxen and fatlings.

14 And [t] David danced before the LORD with all his might; and David was girded with [u] a linen ephod.

15 [x] So David and all the house of Israel brought up the ark of the LORD with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet.

16 And as the ark of the LORD came into the city of David, [y] Michal, Saul's daughter, looked through a window, and saw king David leaping and dancing before the LORD; and she despised him in her heart.

themselves are caught. And it is proper that magistrates should think the best of their opposers; and that they should punish treachery and murder, even when it seems calculated to promote their own interests.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Though God's promise tarry long, it is fully accomplished at last. He can produce unanimity in the largest societies whenever the ends of his glory require it. The duties of magistrates and subjects are reciprocal, the one being as much bound as the other. What victory, honour, and happiness, attend the peculiar presence of God with men! and to him the glory of all our success ought to be ascribed. But alas! that God's favours should be used in the lustful addition of wives and concubines! If by one wife Adam and Noah peopled a world, what need for so many to furnish one throne! But what is sweet in the mouth will become bitter in the belly. Meanwhile, behold how the enemies of God assemble themselves to their own destruction! How little care false gods can take of themselves or their votaries! And how men prosper in war when they make God their director!

17 ¶ And [s] they brought in the ark of the LORD, and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had [*] pitched for it: and David offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings before the LORD.

18 And [a] as soon as David had made an end of offering burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, he blessed[‡] the people in the name of the LORD of hosts.

19 And he [b] dealt among all the people, even among the whole multitude of Israel, as well to the women as men, to every one a cake of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon[§] of wine. So all the people departed every one to his house.

20 ¶ Then David returned to [c] bless his household. And [d] Michal, the daughter of Saul, came out to meet David, and said, [e] How glorious was the king of Israel to-day, who uncovered[‖] himself to-day in the eyes of the handmaids of his servants, as one of the vain fellows shamelessly uncovereth himself!

21 And David said unto Michal, It was [f] before the LORD, which chose me before thy father, and before all his house, to appoint me ruler over the people of the LORD, over Israel: therefore will I play before the LORD.

22 And I [g] will yet be more vile than thus, and will be base in mine own sight;[*] and of the maid-servants which thou hast spoken of, of them shall I be had in honour.

23 [h] Therefore Michal, the daughter of Saul, had no child [i] unto the day of her death.
